COTTON FROM INDIA.

Toujours perdrix! our readers will exclaim on observing the heading of this article. It is rather wearisome, we confess, to have "cotton" dinned into one's ears from morn to noon, from noon to dewy eve. Cotton, however, if not King, is really at this moment master of the situation. Whatever country shall succeed in taking the place of the Confederated States of North America will be the dulce decus et tutamen of the manufacturing districts. eyes are naturally turned in the first instance to British India, where the cotton plant is known to flourish luxuriantly, and whence almost any given quantity is procurable if only it could find its way on board ship. It is not likely that railways will do much to facilitate the transport of such a bulky article as cotton, except indirectly by relieving the roads of heavier and more valuable goods. What is most essential for the conveyance of light and low-priced produce are rivers and canals, for time is of no material importance in this The cross or common country roads case. must also play a great part in the carriage of all kinds of agricultural produce; and it is, therefore, of consequence to keep them in good working order. The Commissioner of Nagpore, for instance, reports that a large quantity of cotton is already grown in that province, and that much more will probably be procurable as soon as means of transport are provided. Two years ago a medical gentleman, named Stanbrough, drew up a very able report on the subject of Nagpore cotton, but as the document had to pass through the hands of Mr. G. Plowden, the late Commissioner, it is not, perhaps, very surprising that it should now, for the first time, see the light. Mr. Stanbrough appears to have been such a keen observer as to have attained to something of the prophetic

"The value of East Indian cotton," he says, "is every day becoming enhanced in the English markets, and the importance of an increased production and supply of the raw material of our greatest British manufacture is liable to be much augmented tish manulacture is liable to be much augmented, even so as to threaten some great national disaster, by either a war with the United States, or by civil war in that country, neither of which contingencies can be considered as highly improbable, when we observe its frequently wayward and petulant foreign policy, and the increasing bitterness of the dissensions between the Northern and Southern States, between the slaveholders and the abolitionists, even that still more terrible and calamitous event, a civil that still more terrible and calamitous event, a civil war, would not be a very surprising occurrence, and would, of course, put an end to all profitable culti-vation and trade in the Southern States of America, for several years at least.'

In 1859 not many persons, we imagine, anticipated a civil war between the Northern and Southern States, and such remarkable foresight is the best proof of Mr. Stanbrough's judgment and general intelligence. He is of matters bearing on the future of the old a wise, just, and saving policy to extend the not, however, sanguine as to the early emancipation of Great Britain from dependence on America. While acknowledging that the supply from India had increased from 83,934,614 lbs. in 1847 to 250.338.140 lbs. in 1857, he asserts that "a very large increase of the cultivation of cotton in the great producing districts of Berar and Nagpoor would at present be unprofitable on account of the impossibility of procuring a sufficient number of hands to clean a much larger quantity of cotton that is now grown." Uncleaned cotton cannot be sent advantageously to the coast, because of its bulk, as two-thirds are seed and refuse; but although the process of cleaning it is sufficiently simple, it requires more practice and care than can be expected from ordinary agricultural labourers. Then, it is necessary to change the crops for two years on ground upon which cotton has been grown, and also to have fresh ground for the cultivation of that very exhaustive crop. It is, however, upon the necessity of improving the cleaning process that Mr. Stanbrough insists most strongly, while he does not omit to point the immense benefit derived from judicious irrigation, and he predicts that should the Madras Irrigation Company extend their operations to the cotton fields of Berar and Nagpoor, a very wonderful change and improvement in both the quantity and quality of the cotton may be expected.

A very exaggerated importance has been attached in some quarters to the recent shipment from Liverpool of 15,000 bales of Surat Cotton to North America. At first sight, such a consignment certainly does bear some resemblance to sending coals to Newcastle, but it is not easy to fathom the motives of Liverpool merchants. It may, or may not, have been a commercial "dodge," or more likely this comparatively small quantity has been despatched as "a feeler." Possibly, the owner of the article may have wanted money, or he may merely have desired to throw out a lure to cotton speculators in India. In any case, it would not be safe to invest this transaction with more than its intrinsic value, which appears to us to be very slight. It is an incident in the history of English exports, but nothing more, and may be placed among the curiosities of British commerce. Its real character may best be illustrated by an old joke that was in circulation a good many years ago when Mrs. Charles Kean, then Miss Ellen Tree, paid a visit to America at the time that the American tragedian, Mr. Forrest, was raging on the London boards. Some wag then remarked that we had imported a forest and exported a tree, after our usual manner of doing business. So now we send abroad the produce of a village, while we clamour for the crops of provinces, kingdoms, and empires.

THE NEW SOP FOR THE INDIAN ARMY.

THE last manifesto issued from the India House touching the retirement bonuses for old Indian officers will go far to allay the ill feeling which the first scornful rejection of Major Chesney's scheme had called forth, in no measured terms, from all ranks of a service smarting with a sense of ill-deserved unkindness and wearied with waiting for the good time that never came. There may have been as good reasons for delaying until now the settlement

Company's army, as for delaying the issue of prize money to the troops who took Delhi and saved all India. But men are only human, and it was but natural that they who have suffered so much from either cause should betray some marks of impatience at the prolonged torture their hopes have been doomed to bear. There is hardly an officer in the Indian army whose prospects have not been altered for the worse by the events of the Indian mutinies and the results of that long pause which promised until very lately to end in utter disappointment to almost all. The first published sketch of the new procedure, which looked so like the wretched abortion produced by Horace's labouring mountain, turned the silent weariness of hope deferred into a wrathful outcry at the mockery of justice by which all hope seemed finally quenched in a certainty too shameful to have been foreseen. Now, however, a large concession has been made to the just demands of at least the older sections of Indian officers, and they who have grown grey in a service by no means overpaid are now offered something better than the pitiful addition of fifty pounds a year to their ordinary pensions. A certain number at least of the older officers will not have much cause to complain of the compensation they are now invited to take for the loss or voluntary surrender of prospects open to them in the years before the mutiny.

But the boon, welcome as it is, should go further. There must be more than three hundred officers to whom the new system will seem not more desirable than the reign of a second Pharaoh, who knew not Joseph, seemed to the Israelites settled in Egypt. Unless Major Chesney's reckoning was widely wrong, there will soon be far more than three hundred places waiting to be done away in the military departments of Indian Service. Why should not their present holders be all invited to give them up on fair terms within a certain time? It is true that the Indian Secretary has positively announced that no further concessions will be made; but, on due cause shown, he can hardly prove more unkind than the fair singers who repeat the announcement of their last appearances as often as the public invites them to sing again. Is he less alive to his own interests than Grisi is to hers? Are Indian finances so flourishing that he can afford to dispense with further prunings of an outlay not absolutely needed? Is it good either for the army or the empire that a large body of old officers. weakened with age, or half demoralised by discontent, should continue to draw large allowances in India, when a little more management would land them at half the cost in this country? Of course they will die off quicker out there, but that is a thought which could hardly have entered the brains of our Indian rulers. And the time allowed them to make their choice should be extended by at least another year. In a seniority-service a year will often make all the difference between the pensions actually or prospectively due; and after the long delay on one side in making up its mind, a little more of the same privilege might surely be allowed the other, especially when the terms proposed are so vaguely worded as to need constant reference to and fro between England and India.

But it is not the oldest officers alone whose case needs further consideration. It would be bounty on retirement to all officers in the late Company's army, of whatever rank. There is no fear that too many would burden the pension-list. For the most part only those would go whose further staying in the service would do no good to any one. The young and sanguine would still cast in their lot with the newly-formed staff and the newly-raised regiments of the line. For these services we need officers whose heart is in their work and whose capacities are equal to their posts. To those who regret the change of masters, or see no good opening for themselves under the new conditions of promotion above a certain rank, a pension or a bonus, reckoned according to years of service and probable value of commission, would hold out a fair inducement to make way for more ambitious and useful men. And there are not a few whom failing health would have tempted to retire on the pittances allowed to invalids, if they could only have obtained from their brother officers a fair compensation for the rank which they themselves had already paid so much to attain. But the mutinies and their results have seriously checked promotion, and for the most part rendered the usual purchasing of steps impossible. Hence has fallen a double loss on many of those who would otherwise take the invalid pension rather than go out again to almost certain death. One officer, for instance, of less than twenty years' Indian service may thus have lost the difference between a captain's and a major's half-pension, besides the whole money value of his probable rank as major. Another, of fourteen or fifteen years' standing, may be driven to choose between further service abroad and retiring on the invalid pay of a lieutenant, without even the few thousand rupees which his regiment at any other time would have given him for his step. Neither of these men, as far as we make out, are entitled to the fifty pounds a-year of bounty offered to those who have served their full time for captain's pension in India. All such cases, and others of different kinds, should be met by the offer of a fair equivalent for the money hitherto subscribed by juniors for the purchase of a senior's step. A lieutenant wishing to retire should receive, besides such pension as he may have earned, a sum varying with his place in the regiment and his length of service towards a brevet, from-say four hundred to a thousand pounds, a captain from one to three thousand, and so on. This it was that Major Chesney's scheme rightly kept in view, and to give these additional bounties will make small difference to the Indian Exchequer, while it will render bare justice to the many victims of the long heart-sickening delay in repairing the confusion caused by the crash of 1857.

Even now there is much vagueness in the schemes put forth by the Indian Secretary. It is not clear to many minds what are the exact conditions of the fifty pound a year bonus. Are invalid officers of any standing entitled to it, or can it be claimed by officers of less than twenty years' service? Why not let it be accepted by any officer who chooses to retire within a certain date, or at the very least by any officer who has actually served five years in India? What time have officers been allowed for volunteering into the new regiments, and what compensation will be given to those who have unwittingly applied too late? Will an officer, say of the 2nd Fusiliers, have first choice for H.M.'s 104th Foot? Why are staff officers to take the rank of captain at twelve years, when regimental officers can only be brevet-captains after fifteen years? These and many other questions suggest themselves at every turn. One half of the Indian army seems still puzzled what to do, and the other half seems doubtful whether it has done rightly.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SALE OF ADDISCOMBE AND HAILEYBURY. - On Friday, the 30th ult., the sale of these well-known military and civil institutions, which produced so many distinguished men in the service of the old East India Company, took place at the Auction Mart, by the Bank of England, under the hammer of Messrs. Norton, Hoggart, and Trist, the auctioneers. It was stated that the property consisted of ninety acres, with the well-known residence of Lord Liverpool at Addiscombe, and its College, and seventy acres at Haileybury, with the barracks and other appurtenances. After considerable bidding both properties were declared to be bought by the British Land Company, Addiscombe being sold for £33,600, and Haileybury for £15,200. It is understood that both estates will be converted into freehold land allotments.

THE ORDER OF THE STAR OF INDIA .-Gazette of the 27th ult. announces :- " The Queen has been graciously pleased to nominate and appoint Field-Marshal Viscount Combermere, G.C.B., some time Commander-in-Chief of the Forces in the East Indies; and General Sir George Pollock, G.C.B., who commanded the British forces which advanced to Cabul in 1842, and some time Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, to be Knights of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India."

BRAY'S TRACTION ENGINES IN INDIA .- No one who has ever travelled on the Great Trunk Road will easily forget the frequent delay, and even danger, caused by the long trains of bullock waggons slowly crawling along, and always on the wrong side. This nuisance may now at once be removed, not only to the relief of the traveller. but to the infinite advantage of the general public. A few trucks, drawn by a traction engine, would be an excellent substitute for the dawdling, unreliable mode of conveyance hitherto in use. A larger quantity of goods would be conveyed far more rapidly and cheaply than by those abominable bullock trains, and with far less injury to the roads; and even heavy merchandise might be transported with greater facility than are small parcels under the present system. To the Government the introduction of traction engines will be of inestimable value, in the transport of artillery, ammunition, and other warlike stores, and even of detachments of soldiery. Admitting the sagacity and strength of the elephant, the preference must yet be given to the power of steam, controlled and directed by human intelligence. The use of those costly and unwieldy animals will. therefore, pass away with other obsolete and oldworld customs and practices, and ere long not a cantonment, or station of importance, will be destitute of at least one engine. The resources of India are as inexhaustible as they are varied, the only difficulty is in the matter of transport, and that will now, in a great measure, be overcome by the assistance of these powerful machines.

INSURANCE IMPORTANT TO ALL.-It may interest families and officers, both here and in the East, to know that one of the premier insurance companies, "The Royal," has lately been extending its ramifications, through first-class agencies, in India and China. A glance at its list of names, of the highest mercantile standing, will endorse the solid confidence bestowed by the public in an annual Fire Revenue of over £262,000. The Life Department evinces an equally satisfactory ratio of advance, the first six months of the present year bringing an afflux of New Premiums FIFTY per cent. exceeding the receipts of any like previous period, and leading the actuary, Mr. Dove, to allocate the repeated Bonus of £2 per cent., the largest ever continuously declared by any company. As possessed of the one desideratum constituting a first-class institution of the kind—stability, based on large resources (nearly £800,000 cash in hand), caution in management, and prompt liberality in settlement of claims-we can recommend to intending insurants the facilities and advantages offered by the ROYAL Insurance Company.

EXTRACTS from the REPORT for the Year 1860.

EXTRACTS from the REPORT for the Year 1860.

"The success of the Company, even in its earliest years, received the marked attention, and elected the surprised comments of writers best acquainted with the history of Insurance Companies.

"Fire Premiums for 1860 EQUAL the Total Fire Premiums for the SEVEN YEARS 1845 to 1851.

"Life Premiums to 1860 EXCEED the Entire Life Premiums for the EIGHT YEARS ending 1852.

"Purchase of Annuities in 1860 LARGELY EXCEEDS the similar receipts for the first TEN YEARS—1845 to 1854.

"This progress, it is believed, is unsurpassed, considering that it applies to each of the three branches of the business."

FIRE BRANCH.

"The Fire Branch has certainly shown no exhaustion during the year 1800 of that impetus which had previously brought it to a position of the first magnitude among the Insurance Companies of the United Kingdom. The Fire Premiums in 1859 had advanced to the sum of £228,314.7s.

3d. In 1860 the amount of Fire Premiums has arrived at a sum of £262,977. 19s. 11d., showing an increase of £34 663. 12s. 8d., exceeding the large advance of the preceding year; so that in two years the Fire Revenue of the Company has been enhanced by the enormous sum of £66,829. 17s. 5d.

"The Parliamentary Report of Returns of Duty paid to Government for the year 1860 exhibits the augmentation of the business in a more prominent way, as it affords the means of comparison with other Companies. The Proprietors will be gratified to learn that the Increase of Duty paid by the Royal in the last year is more than double that of any other Company, either London or Provincial, whilst only one of those Companies even approaches to 50 per cent. of the advance of this Company. Our increase actually equals 30 per cent. of the company of the entire increase of the whole of the Metropolitan Offices combined, whilst of the Provincial Offices it forms upwards of 30 per cent. of the total advance of the other 28 offices established out of London."

LIFE BRANCH.

"The Reports of the Company for several years have had invariably to announce a constant periodical expansion of Life Business, the new Policies of each succeeding year showing an advance over the one that had immediately preceded it. A similar result is shown in the year 1860, the Premiums on New Policies, after deducting Guarantees, being £15,079, 17s. fod., which is an increase in that item of £1,993, 17s. 5d. above the amount received for the year 1859.

"But even this advance is small when compared with the rodden and remarkable momentum which has been given to this branch of the business in the present year (1861).

"It was not until the commencement of the year that the public seemed to have become fully acquainted with the fact that the Royal Insurance Company had published late in the last year an account of the investigation into the assets and habilities of its Life Department, under a novel form, and in a plain and intelligible a manner as the abstruseness of the subject admitted, together with the entire statements and valuations necessary for that purpose.

"It is conjectured, from the extensive notices of this Pamphlet and its accompanying Diagrams which have appeared in the Periodicals of the day, that it has largely attracted the attention of rast numbers of persons in all parts of the United Kingdom, as well as in other parts of the world. Indeed, a most satisfactory and conclusive evidence that such is the case is afforded by the fact that the Sum Assured on New Policies in the six months to the 3rd June of the prevent year, is actually fifty per cent, in excess of the sum assured in the corresponding months of the year 1860, although the latter amount in itself exceeded the sum assured in any like previous period of time.

"If this success be continued, the Royal Insurance Company would, with respect to the amount of its new business, be at once placed (at least with one or two exceptions) at the head of all the Insurance Companies doing business in this country; and the anticipations of the

TEBTH WITHOUT SPRINGS.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

Newly-invented and Patented Application of Chemically prepared INDIA RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

M. R. EPHRAIM MOSELY, SURGEON DENTIST, 9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE, Sole Inventor and Patentee.

cess of CHEMICALLY PREPARED INDIA-RUBBER, in lieu of the gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features:—

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural clasticy, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most uncerning accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agent employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough confort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantners of smell or taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

Teeth filled with gold, and Mr. Mosely's White Enamel, the only stopping that will not become discoloured; particularly recommended for front teeth.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Hearthurn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. Combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effertesion Braught, in which its Ape-rient qualities are much increased. During Hot S. asons, and, above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant renedy has been found highly benefic al. Manufactured (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) by DINNEFORD & Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the Empire.

PRICHARD'S DANDELION, CAMO-MILE, RHUBARB, and GINGER PILLS.— This peculiar prepara ion of dandelion acts particularly on the liver, thus avoiding the use of mercurials, and will be found invaluable to parties suffering from a sluggish state of that organ, or who have resided in India or other hot climates; whilst the well-known stomachic efficacy of camonile, thus harb, and g uger, renders these Pils the most happy combination possible; and as many are at a loss for a safe remedy for occasional influents they will find the medicine a great convenience, which may be resorted to by all persons at any age, under any circumstances, and without the least inconvenience.

Prepared by W. PRICHARD Apothecary, 65, Charing-cross, London, in bottles, 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. May be had of all medicine vendors.

FLERILE COMPLAINTS.—In the Summer this type of disease usually makes its appearance, being occasioned by the miasma evo ved by the Sun's heat, and the sunden electric disturbances of the atmosphere. These parify ag Puls are specifies for arresting the 'rausit of the fever-poison through the frame, and for expelling all morbid matters from the blood. They ward off cuseases by rousing the liver to increased action, while they regulate the impulse of the heart and steady the circulation. They improve digestion and stimulate the kidneys. Holloway's Pills, acting so middly, are particularly efficacious in removing all febrile disorders without urritating the brain or nervous system. No well-regulated household should be without this admirable medicine.

The Act for reducing and regulating the Tolls to be demanded for the use of Traction Engines having now received the Royal Assent, the Directors feel that the period has arrived when the business of the Company may be extended with advantage to the Shareholders and the Public.

The Company was formed with the object of working the Patent for Traction Engines granted to Mr. Brax. These Engines are so well known, by their having been, of late, identified with several works of great magnitude, that it is unnecessary to state here the nature of their construction. The great merit of the invention lies in the principle of the driving wheels, which combine perfect simplicity with the greatest efficiency, and a capacity of adapting themselves by a simple method to all varieties of roads. The Company is also possessed of several subsequent Patents for improvements in Traction Engines, of considerable importance and value. Messrs. John PERN and Son, the eminent Engineers of Greenwich, who hired Engines from the Company for the removal of the machinery of H.M.'s Ships Warror and Black Prince, having testified to the perfectly satisfactory manner in which loads of from thirty to forty tons were carried under all conditions of road and weather, both on these and various other occasions, and several other well-known firms having borne similar favourable testimony as to their efficiency, there remains no longer any doubt as to the practical utility and value of Mr. Brax's invention. These opinions can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

The advantages of employing Traction Engines instead of horses in the removal of heavy loads, are found to be manifold, as, not only must horses be fed when unemployed, but in actual working the expense is little more than half that of horse labour. It must also be borne in mind, that the consumption of fuel, which is the principal item of cost, is only in direct proportion to the work done.

The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty having had an Engine of the earliest construction on tri countries where railways could not be expected to be remunerative are altogether undeveloped, solely because there is no efficient means of conveying the produce of the country to the sea-board or inland towns, the importance of the introduction of such a system as is afforded by Bray's Traction Engines cannot be over-estimated.

The case of India may be cited as a special instance: at present only the districts in the neighbourhood of the great rivers and their tributaries are well cultivated, whilst districts of unlimited extent, and capable of producing cotton, grain, and other produce in abundance, are almost altogether neglected, solely for want of some effectual means of transport. Trunk lines or railways for the main lines themselves will attill occupy many years before they are completed. Canals are even more expensive, while not so efficient as railways for transit purposes. But good ordinary roads exist in many parts of the output, and offer precision of the production of Traction Engines, which could be employed at once in any locality; their use, more production of Traction Engines, which could be employed at once in any locality; their use, more remarkable and the work of the states are now to be brought down for shipment in carts drawn by bullocks, or upon some equally primitive plan. The Communications which the Directors have also received from Russia, Sweden, Norway, Spain, and other forsign countries, prove that they are suffering from procisely the same want of an efficient and powerful means of transport, and point to a wide field for the employment of Traction Engines.

As was to have been expected, difficulties were as first encountered from want of experience in the arrangement and construction of the Engines, but this led the Directors are provided upon for doing the heaviest work.

This Engine has lately been completed, and the Directors are glid to be able to state that the trials it has andergone, and the admirable manner in which it as executed various works, prove that a very import

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 8th of August brings little news of any kind, though our military readers will be interested in General Birch's continuation of his series of Questions and Answers on the subject of the Amalgamation Scheme. It is also our painful duty to draw attention to the prevalence of cholera in the Upper Provinces, and to the ravages of that terrible pest among the European troops at Meerut. A pestilence is, indeed, the usual attendant on a famine, and in the present instance there is unhappily no exception to that melancholy rule. At Delhi the natives are being carried off at the rate of three to four hundred daily, nor is the mortality much less in the other large cities situated in the famine district.

The Governor-general is probably about this time preparing to start for Agra, where he proposes to hold a grand durbar for the installation of the native Knights of the new Order of the Star of India. It is uncertain whether his lordship will return to Calcutta, or proceed to Bombay on his way to Europe. The former course, however, seems the more probable, as there must be many matters of vast importance to discuss with his successor.

Fortunately for the revenue, the price of opium has again advanced to Rs. 1,550 per chest, but it is clear that no financial arrangements can be safely founded upon this source of income.

The imprisonment of the Rev. James Long appears to have excited a considerable sensation among the natives, who are getting up an address assuring him of their gratitude for his exertions on their behalf, and of their sympathy with his sufferings. Beyond the inconvenience of involuntary confinement the punish. ment is, of course, nominal, and might, we think, have been far better remitted.

The only news from China of general interest relates to the failure of the overland party to reach India by way of Thibet. As they advanced into the interior of the country their further progress was interdicted by the local authorities, who were, or pretended to be, profoundly ignorant of the Treaty of Pekin. On the other hand, Mr. Alcock, with a few companions, has journeyed in perfect safety through the interior of Japan from Nagasaki to Jeddo, receiving throughout the entire route every mark of respect and courtesy from the inhabitants. The Governor of Hong Kong and Sir James Hope have also proceeded to Japan, with the probable intention of touching at Formosa.

There was a balance in hand of nearly 3 lakhs. This will just suffice to meet the claims of the starving and of peasants who must begin life anew, up to October next. The Committee have advertised that they require no more contributions.

Collectors are authorised to spend Rs. 1,000 per annum in each district, of which half will be contributed by Government and half by the villagers. The Government grant will never exceed the amount of the private subscriptions.

THE CINCHONA PLANTS .- The last report of the progress of the Cinchona plants on the Neilgherries is so promising that the Madras Covernment has directed the immediate construction of a propagating house, and has asked Sir Charles Wood to engage Mr. Weir in England, and increase the salary of Mr. McIvor, the gardener in India. Meanwhile seeds and plants will not be issued gratuitously or sold till the experiment is

AMALGAMATION.

EXPLANATION OF DOUBTFUL POINTS IN THE AMALGAMATION ORDER OF 10th APRIL.

Fort William, Aug. 1, 1861. -No. 681 of 1861.-H. E. the Governor-general in Council directs the publication of the subjoined questions on subjects of general interest, and the answer given by Government, in continuation of those published in Government General Order No. 606, of the 11th July, 1861;-

Question 74. [Paras. 5 and 20.] A time expired Artilleryman, being under orders for discharge, and awaiting orders for embarkation, is desirous of cancelling his discharge and volunteering for the Royal Artillery-for what period is he to be engaged, and for what Bounty?

Answer 74. His discharge cannot be cancelled; but he can at once re-engage in the Royal Artillery, counting his former service in the Madras Artillery.

Q. 75. [Paragraph 16.] In the event of an officer of one of the present local European regiments electing to continue on his present conditions, will he be posted to the local European corps according to his position in his present regiment, or by army rank?

A. 75. The number of men who have elected to remain in the local service will not admit of the formation of any new local European regiment. An officer of one of the old local regiments volunteering for Indian service will remain on the cadre of his old regiment.

Q. 76. [Paragraph 50.] If an officer elects for general service, and is nominated to one of her Majesty's British regiments, will he enter it as junior of his rank?

A. 76. As innior.

Q. 77. [Paragraph 50.] If an Officer volunteers for general service, and there is no vacancy for him in one of the new Line Regiments, will he still be available for Staff employ and for command of an Irregular Regiment, or only eligible for appointment to one of her Majesty's British Regiments in India?

A. 77. He will be eligible, like anyother Officer of the Indian Army, for any Staff employ.

Q. 78. [Paragraphs 50 and 78.] If an Officer on Staff employ now elects for "general service," will he be permitted to retain his present Staff ap pointment, and will it still be open to him to elect to join the Staff Corps?

A. 78. If an Officer on Staff employ elects for general service, and he is transferred to a Land Regiment, he may retain his appointment under the conditions of paragraph 74 of the General Order. It will still be open to him after his transfer to apply for admission to the Staff Corps; but if admitted he must vacate his place in his Regiment, under Paragraph 83 of the General

Q. 79. [Paragraphs 51, 52.] Under what Furlough Regulations will Officers who volunteer for Dragoon and new Line Regiments be brought?

A. 79. Under Her Majesty's Regulations generally. Under the new Furlough Regulations while their Corps remain in India.

Q. 80. [Paragraphs 69, 87.] Will the period that an Officer may have been employed on the Regimental Staff in one of the late Cavalry Regiments or Extra Regiments of Native Infantry be allowed to count towards the time qualifying for promotion under the Staff Warrant?

A. 80. Yes.

Q. 81. [Paragraph 72.] If a Quartermaster of a Cavalry R giment does not offer for the Staff Corps can he retain his present appointment, not only as a Subaltern, but after promotion to

A. 81. As a Subaltern he may, but not after promotion to Captain.

Q. 82. [Paragraph 72.] If an officer, who is ] adjutant of a regiment of Native Infantry, elects to remain on the present conditions, will he be allowed to retain the appointment of adjutant?

A. 82. Yes, until promotion to Captain.

Q. 83. [Paragraph 84.] An Officer of the Staff Corps having obtained leave to Europe or in India, does time so spent reckon towards promo tion under the Staff Warrant?

A. 83. Yes, all authorised leave.

Q. 84. [Paras. 84 and 95.] Will time passed at Addiscombe, counting as service for retirement, also reckon towards promotion under the Staff Warrant?

A. 84. No.

Q. 85. [Paragraphs 84, 95, and 98.] Will the period that an Officer of the Staff Corps is unemployed, in or out of India, or on the Half-pay List, count towards promotion and also towards Retiring Pension?

A. 85. The period during which an Officer is unemployed in or out of India will count, but the time passed on half-pay will not count.

Q. 86. [Paragraph 98.] Should there not be Staff appointments for all Officers who offer themselves as candidates for the Staff Corps? Will the surplus be allowed to remain with their present regiments, or be placed on the Unemployed List, and at the expiration of four years on the Half-pay List?

A. 86. Every Officer who offers will not of necessity be admitted into the Staff Corps. It is intended that the number shall, as nearly as practicable, be equal to the number of appointments, making allowance for leave, &c. Surplus Officers of the Staff Corps will have no claim to remain with their present regiments, but will be at the disposal of the Government for such service as it may deem fit.

Q. 87. Will Officers on the Staff, remaining in the Local Regiments, be allowed to rise to the higher appointments in the several Departments?

A. 87. Yes, under the present system.

Q. 88. Will an Officer of the Artillery, who is ordered to serve out of India at his own wish, be allowed to revert to service in India at any future time?

A. 88. If ordered back; but he must serve where ordered.

Q. 89. Is an Officer entitled to count for service on the Staff from the date he was appointed to the staff, notwithstanding that he did not join the appointment immediately, in consequence of being required with his Regiment on foreign service?

A. 89. His service on the Staff will count from the date of the General Order appointing him.

Q. 90. Will Officers of the Staff Corps be considered to have a prior claim to a Staff appointment to Officers not in the Corps holding appointments; that is to say, would the latter have to vacate his appointment if there should be no vacancy for the former?

90. It will rest with Government to select Officers for appointments. But an Officer hold ing a Staff appointment, and not joining the Staff Corps, will not have to vacate his office merely to make way for a Staff Corps Officer.

Q. 91. If the changes should bring an Officer's name on the cadre of his regiment among the Captains, can he enter the Staff Corps with that rank, or must he enter with the rank he held on the 18th February, 1861?

A. 91. If he applies within the six months he will be restricted to the rank he held on the 18th of February. If he is afterwards selected, he will join the Staff Corps with the rank he may at the time hold.

FINANCIAL REDUCTION AND THE NEW POLICE.

Whatever may be the fate of our opium revenue, and however large may be the returns from the stamp duties, nothing will save Mr. Laing's financial equilibrium if the military reductions that he announced are not heartily carried out. The very boldness of his statement and the sanguine character of his anticipations, have fortified the advocates of waste and weakened the hands of our financial reformers. Mr. Laing has gone; in his absence, and that of Mr. Beadon, the council are overburdened with work; the numerous military authorities in Calcutta stand in such a relation to each other, and are so pressed by the details which have arisen from the amalgamation of the armies, that the cause of economy seems occasionally to be forgotten. While every department pleads the novelty of the budget system and sends up supplementary estimates of increased expenditure which is sanctioned, and while every month demonstrates the necessity for spending more money on roads and small works in the cotton districts, the reduction in the army drags its slow length along. Instead of increasing the pressure in proportion to the resistance of the mass, the pressure is slackened and the mass rebounds to its former position.

The public look to the military department to exercise such pressure. With that office rests all executive and administrative details. It is not sufficient that it should not oppose financial reform. The duty which devolves upon its head is to carry out every retrenchment which has been announced with unsparing rigour. If new taxes are necessary, if a new impost like the License-tax is to fall on the lowest classes of traders and artisans, then it becomes every taxpayer to be clamorous till he is sure that the native army is reduced to the lowest possible limit. The amalgamation of the two armies, the military reduction to be effected, and especially the creation of the Military Finance Department, necessitate an immediate reform and extensive economy in the establishment of the military secretary himself. This will not be effected till General Birch obtains that reward of rest to which his long services so fully entitle him. His varied experience and somewhat ready pen have been so appreciated by Lord Canning that there is little prospect of the secretary's retirement unless in the wake of the Governor-general. Some time ago, when the progress of military reductions was halting, and we found it necessary to search out the cause, pressure was brought to bear on Lord Canning, and the general would probably have retired had a successor of even ordinary mediocrity been available. Now no such excuse can be assigned. In Colonel Norman we have a man whose experience is as great as the present secretary's, while his knowledge of practical warfare, of the mutiny campaigns, and of the Royal Army is profound. His ideas are those, not of the last century, but of the new era on which we have entered. His age and physique are those not of the gouty sexagenarian, but of the brave young soldier. If the military department is to cease to be notorious even in the other secretariats as the worst administered and proportionally the most expensive in India; if it is to be no longer the refuge of experienced mediocrity; if it is to be equal to the new conditions introduced by a Royal Army and Queen's officers, and to forget its sepoy traditions; if all military reform is not to come to a dead lock because a soldier so able as Sir Robert Napier cannot agree with a Commander-in-Chief so obstinate as Sir Hugh Rose, and both despise a department so inefficient as General Birch's, while all three keep at arm's length so prying and pertinacious a reformer as Colonel Balfour; if departments and officials are no longer to clash with each other, the public money to be wasted and the public interests to be sacrificed, then the office of military secretary must be filled by a man who is at once an energetic soldier and a skilled administrator.

Next to the determination of the superior military authorities, we look to the complete embodiment of the new constabulary as that which will soonest take away all excuse for maintaining a large sepoy force. In Pegu, Captain Duncan, the inspector general, has shown such energy that the whole force of constables will be combudget and enable us to end the year with a pleted there by the end of this month. Since January three regiments of Madras Native Infantry have been permanently withdrawn from the province. Another awaits, in Rangoon, the close of the monsoon to return to the presidency. veral companies of artillery have already left, or are now leaving. The new constabulary is now fully organised in the districts of Prome, Tharawaddy, Henzadah, Rangoon and Bassein. The regiment of Pegu Light Infantry has been dishanded, and a portion has been absorbed into the new police. The guards, gaols and treasuries hitherto taken by the military in Rangoon have been supplied by the constabulary. The municipal police in twenty large towns have been, in their working, amalgamated with the new force of which practically they form a part. The new department has police charge of 28,350 square miles, containing a population of 888,320. In the Punjab the constabulary force has been introduced into all the divisions except the Derajat and Peshawur, the borders of which have to be defended by a combination of diplomatic management and military force. In the other eight divisions the cost of the police will be about twenty-two lakhs of rupees. We hope Sir Robert Montgomery will yet be able to reduce this expenditure, by a diminution in the number of the English officers. Strict European supervision is more necessary in the Punjab than in any other province of India, but the complete organisation of the force should allow the services of several officers to be dispensed with. The work is going on in the North-West, and Lieutenant-Colonel Bruce has just completed his plans in Bombay, where Sir George Clerk is zealously effecting reductions, not only in police, but in all civil establishments.

Bengal, the province that needs it most, is the only part of the empire which obstructs police reform persistently and hitherto successfully. We trust the patience of the Supreme Government has a limit, and that Lord Canning and Sir B. Frere will not allow a measure in which they have taken so personal an interest to be any longer opposed .- Friend of India.

EXPLORING EXPEDITIONS.

It would be difficult, perhaps impossible at the present time, to estimate the future value and ntility, both political and commercial, of the British exploring expeditions which are now about to penetrate Asia in different directions, and cut the continent, as it were, into several large por-tions, to be hereafter visited and surveyed. Our great error, with reference to Russia, in Central Asia, has hitherto been, that we have been always waiting for her, and hearing of her; we are now going to take a bolder and more becoming course; we are going to meet her, and look at her. It has been a great mistake for the British to remain cooped up in Southern Asia during the last twenty years, listening to vague accounts of the gradual approach of the Russians, and mysterious threats of their increasing proximity and hostile intentions towards our power in India. All this is now about to be altered; already one expedition of our countrymen, led by Capt. T. W. Blakiston, of the Royal Artillery, and Major Sarel, of H.M.'s 17th Lancers, and known as the Yangtze-Kiang expedition, is on its way from North China through Central Asia, and so into India by the Himalayan Passes, where it is looked for within the next few months. The information and experience which the members of this expedition will gain must be of great value to those of the next party, generally known as Capt. Smyth's expedition, which is now collecting at Almorah, and will proceed through the Himalayas into Central Asia, in the beginning of next hot season. This last will start on its enterprise in the highest state of efficiency, and perfect as regards the composition of the party in the different scientific departments, Captain Jerdon, of the Madras Army, having been attached as botanist to the expedition, and Captain Basevi, of the Bengal engineers, for astronomical and meteorological observations. Of course, it is highly probable that this expedition will be guided considerably in its movements by the intelligence that may be received from Captain the first instalment of Rs. 1,000 has been paid.

Blakiston's party; but we believe that the present intended route of Captain Smyth's track is to be, after emerging from the Himalayan passes, by Ladak and the Pangong Lake, and Khokan, to the North-east, as far, if possible, as the Thian Shan, or celestial range of mountains on the Chinese frontier. Our countryman, Mr. Atkinson, whose book on the Amoor has just been published, touched upon, or saw, the Northern spurs and peaks of these mountains in his travels, but did not penetrate them, though anxious to visit the volcanos which are known to exist in the These mountains lie about 40 deg. North; the lowest Russian settlement in Northern and Central Asia being at Kopal, where they have a fortified position; but this is much to the Westward, being in East longitude 82 deg. Of course it is competent for the British expedition, should it succeed in getting so far north, to diverge towards the west, and touch the Russian frontier; but the advisability of these movements must now, of course, be a matter of speculation. There can be no doubt whatever that the Russians will view with intense jealousy, nay, hostility, these expeditions of the English into Central Asia, which has hitherto been considered as Russian ground; and there can be as little doubt that no expeditions ever undertaken by Englishmen were better worth the expense and trouble bestowed upon them than will be the enterprises now being carried out or undertaken by us in Asia. It is time that we should advance towards the Russians in Central Asia, meet them face to face, and see what they are doing, instead of sitting here in idle alarm of their coming, and hearing vague accounts of their progress in lying letters from Cabool or Teheran. It is high time that this state of things, so discreditable to the British power in Asia, and to our enterprise and courage, should cease; aud the ex peditions which we now notice with so much pride and satisfaction will give it its death-blow, and begin to put England on her proper footing in Asia.

Some days ago we pointed attention to the route through Upper Burmah, and the Himalayan passes in that part of the range into the province of Yunan, in Southern China; and we now learn with great satisfaction that Government has authorised the fitting out of an expeditionary party to undertake the enterprise of reaching the Celestial empire in that direction. This expedition is under the leadership of Dr. Williams, who will go to the Court of Ava on a political mission from the Indian Government, with a view to procure the permission of that of Burmah to undertake the journey. Government has issued orders for the supply of a full complement of scientific instruments of all descriptions to Dr. Williams, who is well qualified to conduct the expedition in question. believe also that Colonel Yule, of the Engineers, is about to deliver a lecture upon the subject of these expeditions, on an early day; and we need scarcely say that it will be well worth attending. Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mr. A. LITTLEDALE, who was lately transferred from the Judgeship of Nuddea to Moorshedabad, considering himself aggrieved by the removal and the manner of it, has resigned the service. Mr. Birch will probably replace him at Moorshedabad.

SIKKIM.-From our Sikkim correspondent we (Englishman) hear, under date of 25th July, that, owing to the incessant rains, he is shut out al most from all communications, and the news of that quarter is fairly washed out. The present Rajah is gaining ground in the public esteem by his mild disposition; under the influence of which he has quite changed the face of things, so far as the safety and comfort of his subjects are concerned, from the old rule. Cheeboo Lama has been made dewan and minister. The late Dewan Nampoway is said to have again entered Bhooten The forced contribution of Rs. 7,000 towards the expenses of the late war is to be squeezed out of PREVALENCE OF CHOLERA.—We (Englishman) publish with the deepest regret the following telegrams of the ravages of the cholera, which has broken out among the troops in Meerut. July 29.—Captain De Winton, 8th Hussars, died yesterday of cholera; several deaths from the same amongst the troops. Lieut. Elliott, Bengal Artillery, mess sergeant, and five men Artillery division, besides others, of cholera, just died. July 30.—Captain Glubb, district superintendent of police, died of cholera this morning. The disease is not slackening. In addition to the telegraphic information received from up-country with reference to the ravages of the cholera at Meerut and Agra, the Government has received fuller and more detailed accounts of the visitation, which appears to be sweeping those stations with a virulence hitherto unequalled.

The medical officers can with difficulty officers can with difficulty meet the strain thrown upon them by the spread of the epidemic; and we understand that a number of assistant-surgeons are under orders to proceed at once up-country to the scenes of the visitation, which appears to be showing itself at other stations besides Meerut and Agra. fatal visitation of cholera, and other virulent diseases of India, generally occur in years when the seasons vary from their usual routine; even although the variation be agreeable and apparently conducive to health. The heavy and premature rains of this year put an early and agreeable termination to the hot weather before it had run its usual course; but the result is, as has before been the case under similar circumstances, the outbreak of violent and fatal epidemic sickness.

JEYPORE.—A correspondent from Jeypore asserts that bodies of Shikawattee fellows, aggregating some two thousand, have lately been committing great depredations in the vicinity of Hissar, and that the Rajah of Jeypoor has sent some three thousand troops to prevent their further operations.

TIRHOOT, July 28.-The weather lately has been very favourable, but it has come too late to do the planters much good. Most of them have just closed the manufacturing from the first cuttings, and with a very wretched out-turn compared with what has been the case for some years past. The koontees are not very promising; and I hear the following concerns are likely to make as under; -Pundoul, 900 maunds; Dhoolie, 400 ditto; Jetwarpore, 350 ditto; Hatowrie, 150 ditto; Bogwanpore, 270 ditto; Dowlutpore, 350 ditto; Munjoul, 300 ditto; Hursingpore, 140 ditto; Hirnee, 130 ditto; Dulsing Serai, 110 ditto; Kumtoul, 100 ditto; Doudpore, 230 ditto; Poopree, 350 ditto; Narar and Nowadah, 300 ditto; Contai and Raghai, 250 ditto; Mooteepore, 200 ditto; Jahapar, 80 ditto; Beegumpore, 200 ditto; Sengale, 500 ditto; Shapore Oondee, 300 ditto; The Tirhoot Company about 1,500. Total, 7,310, as against fully 16,000 maunds last year. The above list, I think, you will find pretty accurate. The district is in a quiet, orderly state, and no bad feeling whatever has hitherto been displayed by the ryots in their relations with the planters. I fain hope the Government may even yet have the courage to proceed with the contract law, for it is sadly wanted by all who carry on trade in the Mofussil. And the more liberal the capitalist is in making advances, through which alone any trade can be carried on in this country, the greater the necessity is of protecting him by such a law, which whatever may be said to the contrary, would be a positive boon to the better class of cultivators, and only be felt by those who intended being dishonest. Security is the first grand requisite to the capitalist to induce liberality on his part, and the insecurity which the present state of things causes operates most unhappily, and fosters suspicious and illiberal relations in all agricultural matters between those who have to lend and those who have to borrow.

MAGNIFICENT GIFT .- The following extraordinary item appears in General Orders. Confirmed, " Sikkim field force order dated the 20th March last, directing the Commissariat to supply a keg of rum and a box of biscuits containing one hunthe friends and partisans of the late dewan, and dred pounds, required as a present to the Rajah the first instalment of Rs. 1,000 has been paid.

CACHAR.—Maipak Singh, a Munneepoor prince, having secretly collected about fifty men, had crossed the frontier on his way to Munneepoor, with the intention of attempting to subvert the Government of that State. Captain R. Stewart, superintendent of Cachar, called upon the officer commanding the troops here to furnish a detachment of fifty men to give chase, and if they failed in catching up the body on the road, to enter the valley and place themselves under the orders of Major McCulloch. The troops left this the other day, and will be supplied at the foot of the hills with carriage and provisions got together for them there by the superintendent, which will enable them to follow up without any delay. Maipak Singh, the leader of this expedition, is a Munneepooree prince, but not very closely allied to the Royal family; he is an unsettled and bad character, and was, during the disturbances in 1857, placed under arrest by the superintendent, whence he managed to make his escape, and remained in hiding in the hills until, by order of Government, the outlawry was taken off him. Indeed, he has never made his appearance in public since, and has therefore been better able to carry on the present conspiracy. The number of men he has at present collected is insignificant; and they must be poorly armed, only a few having fire-locks. But if they succeed in making good their way into the valley they are sure to be joined by all the disaffected of the subjects of the Rajah of Munneepoor, which will serve to swell their number very considerably. The speedy action of our detachment in pursuit, even if it fail in overtaking them, will have its effect in preventing their concentrating forces and intriguing in Munneepoor. The last invasion of Munneepoor, of a nature similar to this, occurred in 1852, when the detachment sent by the superintendent of Cachar following the rebels entirely disconcerted them, and forced on an action, when they were taken both in front and rear, and signally defeated. An invasion of Munneepoor at this time of the year is unprecedented; the time chosen is generally the dry season, when the passage across the hills is comparatively easy; and even at that season, in many instances, it has been found impossible to prevent these expeditions; so secret and clannish are the people among whom they are formed, and so vast the jungles that they make their places of rendezvous.

ORISSA.-Captain McNeill, Government agent for the Hill tracts of Orissa, reports on the operations of the agency for the suppression of Meriah Sacrifices during the season ending in May last. Female infanticide is practised chiefly in the district of Sooradah and a portion of Chinna Kimedy. A census of these tracts was obtained, and the result showed that the disproportion between the sexes of young children was so great as only to be accounted for by the continuance of female infanticide. Conviction is generally very difficult, and Captain McNeill believes that constant supervision by a Government officer and yearly visits to the parts of the country where the practice prevails are the only remedy. The Khonds of Jeypoor and Bhundhasir are not yet divested of the idea that their temporal prosperity depends on their making occasional sacrifices to the goddess of the earth. The only thing that keeps them in check is the fear of Government displeasure and punishment. The number of Meriahs rescued during the season was 26 males and 27 females. The population of Kora dah, Chinna Kimedy, Dhurmapore, Koortelly, and Mahasenghy was 2,907 males and 2,159 females. The number of children under six years of age was 661 males and 672 females. In Sooradah, while the population was 5,785 males and 3,034 females, the number of children under six years of age was 1,326 males and only 933 females; evidently showing that a number of female infants had been made away with; but the disproportion is nothing like what it once was.

MR. C. E. BERNARD, C. S., has been appointed under-secretary of the financial department. under-secretary.

FREE CHURCH Mission.—The annual report for 1860 shows the progress of the Mission of the Free Church in India. Dr. Duff landed in 1830, and began work with five pupils. Now there are in attendance at Calcutta and its branches, Nagpore, Poona, Bombay, and Madras, 9,132. India and Africa there are thirty-two European and eight native ministers, four native preachers and one hundred catechists. The sum raised for Missions during the year was £26,708, of which £5,775 was contributed in India. This is a higher rate of liberality proportionally than in any other Church. In the whole Bengal Presidency it is calculated that the various Christian Churches have the following number of missionaries from home:-Church of England, 75; Baptists, 34; American Presbyterians, 23; London Mission, 15; Free Church of Scotland, 5; Established, 4.

NEPAUL, July 25 .- The Oodass merchants at Khatmandoo have received letters from Lassa, to the effect that the Chinese Umbah, under instructions from China, is preparing three houses for the reception of the English travellers, who are now en route to that city. The Central Committee for the collection of works of industry and art in Bengal have requested our resident to furnish them with a list of articles which they may expect to receive from him for transmission to the exhibition of 1862 in England.

ARRAH, July 21 .- Perhaps you would like to have the indigo news of this district. The crop on the ground (khoontie) has not been equalled for the last ten years; we are just commencing manufacture, and it remains to be seen whether the past month and a half's almost incessant rain has not washed out the produce. I much fear it has; and our fine crop may go for half its apparent value. But we shall soon see.

THE VICEROY has determined on leaving for the Upper Provinces a month earlier than he had intended. His suite are under orders for the pre parations to be made by the end of August. His lordship, it is said, now intends starting in Sep tember, and will make Agra his head-quarters. We believe that the up-country tour of the Governor-general is mainly caused by the intended investiture of the North-Western Knights of the Exalted Star of India, which will take place with great state and pomp at one of the large stations, whither those to be decorated will be invited to repair on the occasion. We suppose that the only lady of the Order, the Ranes of Bhopal, will be excused from appearing, and will have the Star sent to her.

PUNJAB, July 22.-Rajah Jowaher Singh [of Jummoo has applied to our Lieut. gov. for a remuneration for services rendered to the State during the late mutiny. The matter has been referred to the Supreme Government for disposal. The Jummoo Maharajah has communicated with Sir Robert relative to the alleged interference on the part of the authorities at Ladakh with the Lahore traders carrying shawl wool. It is reported here that the officers travelling to India through China may be expected within next month on the border of Cashmere. The weather is pleasantly cool and delightful. Dr. Christison has been deputed to Goorgaon with a good supply of cholera medicines. The respectable native community of the Punjab lately presented an address to Sir R. Montgomery, thanking him for the establishment of English schools in the Punjab for the education of their children. A company of troops of the line is to be located at Loodiana.

LOCAL ARTILLERY .-- Government, it is said, has resolved to form a company of European Artillery from the officers and men of that arm in Bengal who have remained "local," and that this company is to be stationed at Debroghur, in Assam. The climate of Debroghur is healthy, and the Artillery will be able to cultivate "vege tation" there in perfection.

Assam Tea Company.—During the past nine months the Assam Tea Company have been able to send 423 coolies to Assam, and 208 to Cachar. So great has been the Company's prosperity that the value of their block is estimated at £500,000 New blood was much needed. Hitherto the home sterling, while the paid-up capital is only under secretary has in name been also financial £193,337. The last dividend declared was at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum.

Delhi.-A correspondent, writing from Delhi. gives deplorable accounts of the ravages cholera in that city. From three hundred and fifty to three hundred and seventy corpses are carried out of the city gates daily; and rumours are rife of even a larger number. The European troops have not, it is said, suffered so severely as might have been expected, but the number of deaths, before they were removed from their quarters in the city, was such as to render change of air absolutely necessary. It is to be hoped that this measure will prove beneficial. The Deputy Commissioner of Delhi was to avail himself of the leave granted him, and intended leaving for Simla on the 1st August.

DOOMKU.—We learn from a letter from Doomku, the new head-quarters of the Sonthal Pergunnahs, that the whole district is perfectly quiet, and of late no active symptom of any disaffection has appeared. The released convicts of the former rebellion have become leaders of some reforms among their fellows, and a number of them lately got together and petitioned or memorialised Government on the state of the distress of their country. Out of their injudicious exercise of the "sacred right of insurrection" they seem to have learnt the milder uses of petitioning.

Kumaon Iron Works.—According to the Hills newspaper, the result of Mr. Oldham's visit to the Kumaon Iron Works, under Mr. Sowerby, has been the exposure of the gigantic schemes of which the latter wrote so confidently, and the sale of the works to a private company, Messrs. Drummond and Co. Thus Lieut.-colonel Drummond, who first brought the existence of iron in the Hima-layas to light, will be enabled himself to work the deposit. Now that the value of his discovery has been acknowledged, Sir Charles Wood has redeemed an old promise of the Court of Directors, and presented Colonel Drummond with a sum of Rs. 20,000. This is the second private iron company in Kumaon. A skilled Swedish manager is on his way out from Europe. Government has liberally granted both companies large tracts of forest land on easy conditions to supply the furnaces with charcoal.

CASHMERE .- A writer in the Lahore Chronicle describes a trip to Cashmere by the Bhimbur. The shawl looms are among the objects noticed. Two men or boys sit at each bench or loom with a pattern between them to which they have to look every instant as they ply the hundreds of bobbins with coloured thread. An ordinary shawl takes about three months to make, while a fine rich pair will sometimes occupy a shop for eighteen months. There are now so many Europeans who visit Cashmere that the Maharajah has built a number of bungalows for their accommodation at the capital. They are about twelve feet square inside, with a story above the ground floor and a window looking out on the river. A civil baboo in the service of the Maharajah attends to the wants of travellers.

THE CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, with some modifications, has been extended to the Non-regulation province of Oude. The judge is not required to take down the whole of the evidence in writing, if he has passed an examination in the vernacular, but only to make an intelligible note of its essential points.

TESTIMONIAL TO COLONEL WAUGH .- The sum of Company's Rs. 3,000 has been easily and rapidly raised by subscription, for the purchase and presentation of a piece of plate to Colonel Sir A. S. Waugh, K.C.B., late of the Bengal Engineers, and Director of the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India, whose universal politeness and kindness to all those, of every grade, who served with or under him during the many years in which he presided over that important work, have gained for him their warmest attachment and esteem, of which feelings their gift is intended to be a testimony and a memento.

COLONEL W. MAYHEW, Adjutant general of the Army, returned to the presidency from Simlah, and resumed charge of the office on the 5th August; and Lieutenant-colonel D. M. Stewart, Assistantadjutant-general, proceeds to England on sick leave, by the P. and O. Company's steamer of the 9th.

Exports (Calcutta, August 8).—We have a more moderate supply coming in of nearly every article of produce, and stocks show a very slight increase. Sellers are firmer in some instances in their requirements, but the decline reported from England neutraluses this, and places the markets relatively in their former position, leaving little if any prudent opening for the extension of business on a scale usual and looked for at this season. For months past the unprecedently high prices here have been almost prohibitory; these have gradually dropped to a more reasonable currency, and we must now only wait a healthy turn in the London market, to which our bazars are now in a favourable position to respond. Indigo is quoted at a considerable advance. Raw Silk but little doing. Sugar less doing. Saltpetre a fair business. Rice in good demand.

Sugar less doing. Sattpetre a fair business. Rice in good demand.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, August 8).—We have no favourable change to note during the mail. A fair amount of business has continued in progress, but generally induced by further concessions from holders. Buyers display no animation. It must, however, be borne in mind that the bazaar trade has recently passed through a severe crisis, and from which it has not yet recovered. In the North-West also there has been a considerable money pressure amongst the traders, and remittances have fallen short of the amount due. The Eastern distincts have been more backward than usual this season, and as yet have entered the market sparingly. These circumstances are therefore fully sufficient to account for the less encouraging accounts than we hoped to have given of this market. We have also very heavy stocks in the warehouse, and the probable large increase of shipments from England render importers more anxious to realise to make way for fresh invoices than would otherwise be the case. Grey (heavy) Shirtings have been still in most request at a decline of 1 to 2 annas. In Bleached Cottons less doing. Mule Twist: prices lower.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR WILLIAM DENISON arrived at Salem on the morning of the 27th July, where he was received with enthusiastic demonstrations. On the following day his Excellency went up to the Shervaroys, and on Monday, the 29th, returned to Salem, visited the various public buildings and held a durbar. At the durbar an address was presented to him setting forth the wants of the inhabitants, an additional court of justice, improved sanitary regulations, better roads, &c. In reply his Ex-cellency assured them "as representative of a sovereign from whose heart the desire to promote the happiness and prosperity of her people is never absent," that no effort on his part should be wanting to carry out those measures which would produce those results among them. His Excellency then proceeded on his journey to the Neilgherries, where he has arrived in safety.

THE LATE BISHOP .- A committee has been formed in Madras to raise subscriptions for memorial of the late Bishop Dealtry.

THE SHEWARRY HILLS are now accessible by rail from Madras. The climate is mild, the scenery beautiful, and the slopes of the hills are covered with coffee plantations. The road leading up the Ghaut lies between hedges of beautiful rose trees, lines of pear trees, loquots, orange and cotton trees. In a few hours the traveller exchanges the scorching heat of the plains below for cool and refreshing breezes, and a temperature somewhat lower than that of the "Blue Mountains."

Cochin.—In a paper on the Medical Topography of Cochin, Mr. Day states that up to 1341 the river which rises in the Western Ghauts flowed into the sea at Cranganore, but in that year it suddenly altered its course and found its present outlet. The white Jews do not intermix with the black, who are partly of native origin. They form a small community of 170 souls in Jew's Town, three miles from Cochin, where they have been located, it is believed, since 1565, though they had settlements on the coast as early as A. D. 500. The black Jews trade in skins, poultry, and caps, which they make for the Parsees in Bombay.

HENZADAH SALT SPRINGS .- Mr. W. T. Blandford reports to the local Government on the geological features of the Henzadah district in Pegu in so far as they possess an economic value. His observations are chiefly in connection with the salt springs of Henzadah. The majority of them occur scattered near the base of the Arracan Hills, sometimes a few miles without the mountains, but more frequently between their spurs. Salt is known to have been worked at thirteen different localities in Henzadah. The principal spring is at Tsadwingee, where the flow of water was found to be 57.15 gallons per hour, or about 1,370 in the twenty four hours. By a rough experiment it was found to contain 4,704 grains of salt to the gallon, so that the quantity of salt daily yielded would be 920 lbs. or 8 cwts. 24 lbs. Mr. Blandford thinks the wells might all be rendered more productive by being deepened. Petroleum was not found in any quantity. Traces of coal were discovered in two or three places, but there was no indication of a seam of the least HYDERABAD, July 20 .- The twenty-nine packages of Government presents for the Nizam, per steamer Baltic, have reached the Residency; but no presents have been sent for certain gentlemen of the durbar, which, our Resident being unable to procure at Hydrabad, has requested Govern-ment to send them soon. The restoration of the Raichoor Doab and Dharsee district to the Nizam having been directed, all establishments were paid up and discharged, with the temporary exception of the accountants. Rajah Ruggonauth Rao has proceeded to Madras to give testimony in the case of the claim against the estate of the late Nawab of the Carnatic. There is no cholera on the route from Soonapit to Hydrabad.

CANNANORE, July 13.—Weather monsoonish; we have not had a fair day all last week. As I am writing this it is pouring in torrents. The fall of rain, since the setting in of the monsoon up to this morning, amounts to eighty-two inches and twelve cents. I am glad to inform you that cholera has abated its ravages on this coast. Three court martials are in orders to commence their sittings next week. First, for the trial of an assistant apothecary, for being incapacitated for the performance of his duties at the European detachment hospital at Calicut, from intoxication; the second, on a sergeant of the artillery, for being drunk at the theatre on Monday last; and the third on a gunner, for desertion, who was apprehended at Calicut, fifty-six miles from Cannanore, and on the fifth day after his desertion. The prices of grain are falling; the fields look rich, and a plentiful harvest is expected by the reapers. Whilst the price of rice is falling, those of provisions are rising. The present market rates are—mutton 4 annas per lb., (hitherto 2 annas); a leg, 14 annas; loin, 10 annas; shoulder, 10 annas; neck, 6 annas. Beef (fearfully tough), 1 anna 8 pie; fowls, 6 annas each; chickens, 4 annas each; eggs, 2 annas per dozen; butter, 8 annas per lb.; potatoes, 1 anna 8 pie per lb. Fish in abundance, but insipid.—Englishman, EUROPEAN PENITENTIARY .- The Madras Times makes a sensible suggestion in urging Government to erect the large penitentiary for European convicts sentenced in India, not on the Neil-gherries but at Bangalore. On the hills all building materials, the cost of transit and labour are excessively high. The fuel and other comforts that the cold and damp necessitate will deprive punishment of its terrors and make the gaol most expensive. The climate of Bangalore is quite as good for Europeans. English pensioners and veterans live there as long as on the hills, the place is better for invalids, and cheapness as well as effectual punishment would be secured.

THE MADRAS VOLUNTEERS seem to be languishing, like their brethren in Bombay. Colonel Silver, the commandant, has taken energetic action in the matter. He addressed the corps on parade, and said the chief cause of the absence of spirit in the movement was the irregular attendance of many of the members. As a means of rallying the corps, he appointed a day on which all those who were determined to uphold the good cause should meet together, and, under the colours of the regiment, pledge themselves to that course, in order that he might see how many men he could really count upon.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MAJOR H. T. VINCENT .- The following complimentary Division Order has been issued by Major general Cunynghame:-"It must be as gratifying to the Sind Division as to their majorgeneral when officers are selected from among them to fill more elevated positions in the service as such selection is a proof of their general zeal and intelligence, and of the appreciation of their merits by their superiors. Major Vincent has recently been selected from this division (under the orders of Government) to fill the highest position in the branch of the service in which he has so long been employed. For more than nine years has Major Vincent fulfilled his duties as Divisional-paymaster in Sind, with honour to himself, and for the benefit and well being of the service. He leaves now regretted by all, who nevertheless rejoice in his advancement as an acknowledgment of his merits. Not only, however, has Major Vincent displayed strict and unwearied attention to his own departmental duties, but his exertions in his capacity of a member of the Municipal Commission testify to his usefulness as a citizen, and it will be difficult to replace him in his exercise of philanthropy in supporting the hospital established for the aid of native wanderers. It is satisfactory to reflect, that, while his departure is a loss to Sind, it will be a gain to the 'Presidency, where a wider and more extended field will be open to him."

FOURTH CLASS RAILWAY CARRIAGES .- The result of the introduction of a 4th class on the G. I. P. Railway has been an increase of 417,849 in the number of passengers, Rs. 95,147 in the gross receipts, 34.5 in the number of passengers per mile per week, and Rs. 2-6 in the receipts per mile per week. These figures are for the year 1860.61, but the 4th class, at the rate of 11 pie per mile, was only in operation for the half year ending 15th April last. The additional expense is only 6 per cent. on the expenditure, that is twelve additional 4th class passengers per train mile will pay the extra cost. The Bombay Government has sanctioned the experiment for six months more. The railway officers consider that the train that carries 4th class passengers should not also carry 3rd class, and that the same kind of carriages should be used for both, the only difference being in the speed. Such figures as the above should leave no reason for doubt or delay in adopting the 4th class system on the East Guzerattee weekly newspaper, charged Jadunathjee Buzruttonjee, the Maharaj or high priest of the Wallabcharyia sect of the Hindoos, with holding heterodox opinions, and especially with writing a pamphlet in which he defended the doctrine that the Maharajs may defile the wives and daughters of their devotees. The editor wrote "none has exceeded the Maharaj's creed in blackguardism, effrontery, shamelessness, cunning and deceit," and charged the Maharaj with immoral practices. The editor was defended by Mr. Chisholm Anstey, who filed a demurrer, on which the Chief Justice gave judgment, dismissing it. The case will therefore go on. The Chief Justice held that "the libel was levelled against this sect, its opinions, and the writings of its members. The reasoning and logic might not be perfect, but so far there was nothing to show a personal malice against the plaintiff. The remarks upon the sect were arguments in an historical point of view, a comparison of the ancient Hindoo religion with the new. The words were extremely coarse and vulgar, but he was not prepared to say they were libellous. He knew of no authority for holding that any one of a sect of hundreds, thousands, or millions of people, accused (because of the doctrines of their members) of subtlety, immorality, rascality, immodesty, &c., could come forward and claim the right of an action on that ground as for a libel on himself." The latter part of the libel was of a different character, as it singles out the plaintiff. Damages were laid at Rs. 50,000, and so far it is likely the Maharaj will gain his case.

CAVE TEMPLE COMMISSION .- The doings of the Cave Temple Commission are being canvassed in the Bombay journals. Of the members there are now only two remaining in Bombay, one of whom is Dr. Wilson, the honorary president. The Bombay Saturday Review writes unfavourably of the career and work of that commission, and deprecates its great expense and insignificant results. The Times of India defends the Commission, and shows from the minutes of the Asiatic Society that its labours have not been fruitless. Commission was appointed in 1848. Mr. Fallon, an artist, was engaged on a montly salary in 1850 to sketch the ruined temples and inscriptions. Lieutenant Brett was subsequently engaged to copy and lithograph the inscriptions, and in 1856 a native pundit was appointed to decipher them. The work went slowly on, and in 1855 the Court of Directors suggested the substitution of photography for the expensive mode of painting. In November, 1860, Dr. Wilson reported that the work of deciphering was making progress, eightyeight inscriptions being disposed of, besides some copper-plate grants deciphered and some coins examined. The sum of Rs. 23,500 has been spent on the Commission.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, July 27 .- The London mail of June 10 arrived here on the 22nd inst.

Affairs in China and Japan remain nearly as they were during the previous fortnight.

The news from Japan is comprised in the two facts, that the Nagasaki Shipping List, so long announced, has at length made its appearance in a form that promises to make a respectable addition to the existing staff of newspapers in the Far East; and that Mr. Alcock has accomplished the overland journey from Nagasaki to Kanagawa entirely unmolested. His party on this occasion consisted of five gentlemen-the British Minister; Mr. de Witt, Netherlands Consul-general; Mr. G. Morrison, British Consul at Nagasaki; Mr. Gower, of the Legation; and the Illustrated London News artist. An account of the journey will be found in another column, and the English public will, no doubt, have the usual pictorial intelligence in the paper above referred to. The interior of Japan appears to exceed the most to one moral, viz.:—the extreme importance of conducting our relations with Japan in such a way that the country may never have to regret forming an alliance, social and commercial, with the English nation.

The news from Pekin during the past fortnight is somewhat scanty. The Prussian Minister has been making ineffectual efforts to obtain a treaty, but it is very apparent that the Chinese Government have no favours of that kind to grant, unless the suppliant power has a strong force at hand to back the request. Our own position in China is by no means determined, and although the presence of Mr. Bruce in the capital is a sten in the right direction, it is impossible to dismiss from our minds an apprehension that, on the withdrawal of troops, matters may not go on quite so smoothly. The only other item of news from Pekin is that San-ko lin-sin continues to gain victories over the Shantung rebels.

Hankow and the ports on the Yang tsze still occupy much attention here. Some difficulty has arisen at Hankow of a kind not new to English merchants in China, Attempts are being made on the part of the Chinese there to conduct business on the old" Hong" system, but which have been energetically opposed by the Consul, who expresses his intention of abiding strictly by the treaty.

The rebels have been warned not to molest the city of Hankow; no serious battles are reported during the past two weeks, and it is not improbable that the rebel cause is losing ground. Shanghae has again been approached by the insurgents, and positive alarm has been manifested throughout the native city; it does not appear that they intend to molest the town itself, but their necessities have driven them to plunder the adjacent district. Nothing whatever transpires to raise the rebel cause in the estimation even of those who desire to think well of it.

We mentioned in last mail the melancholy death by drowning of a young gentleman at Shanghae; the body has since been recovered. The party of travellers who left Hankow some months ago with a view of reaching India, via Thibet, have returned to Shanghae; their progress was prevented by the generally disturbed state of the country. Although this is to be regretted, still we have received much good information from this expedition so far as it went, and the notes of the journey soon about to be published will be very valuable. Had the party proceeded farther than Sui-chow, it is evident there would have been dangers awaiting them.

At Ningpo the Customs duties still impede trade; this system does not seem to suit the notions of the Chinese residing at that port. We have no doubt but that the patience and good sense of the Consul will overcome this difficulty in the course of time.

Canton, about to be speedily evacuated, has been the scene of a little episode that was reported at first as something quite serious. The Allied Commissioners imprisoned a Mandarin for the offence of using torture upon a culprit who was brought before him. This was after he had been repeatedly warned to desist from such acts of inhumanity. The case was proved beyond a doubt, and Mr. Parkes had the magistrate sentenced to a term of imprisonment. There was tenced to a term of imprisonment. some demonstration on the part of the recople when they learned that their Mandarin was in prison, but later events have shown that this was scarcely more than a formal manifestation of sympathy; the magistrate was not much esteemed by his own people.

Local affairs are pretty much as usual. The police is a subject of attention at present, and will be for some months to come. ciency of the force is acknowledged on all hands The Supreme Court has held its sittings of late in the Police Magistrate's Court, owing to the dilapidated condition of the present court house. The Governor of the Colony has just gone upon a trip to Japan in the Imperiouse. It is likely he will visit some of the ports on the Yang-tsze There are before returning to Hong Kong. strong reasons for supposing that this trip is only preliminary to his going to England to look out Commons (the three Estates of the realm are the for promotion. present discharged by Mr. Mercer, our excellent colonial secretary.

Our amusements at present are an equestrian circus, and the favourite amateur theatricals which have kept a high place in public esteem from the very commencement. The summer has been extremely mild; "the oldest inhabitant" cannot in his recollection find a fellow to it. It is needless to say that this is a matter of sincere gratulation to every resident in the colony. A Regatta has been got up by some very young gentlemen belonging to the Hong Kong Club; it is likely to afford amusement by the completeness of its failure .- Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, August 16 .- Only one vessel has sailed during the fortnight, the Southport for London, taking coffee as follows: 4,578 cwt.; Native, 1,299 cwt.; total, 5,877 cwt.

Our total exports of coffee from the beginning of the season are 443,000 cwt. Plantation, against 447,000 cwt. in the corresponding period of last season, showing a deficiency of 4,000 cwt. Of Native we have sent away only 130,000 cwt., against 154,000 cwt., so that on this kind the deficiency is no less than 24,000 cwt. The total is 573,000 cwt., against 601,600 cwt., so that we are behind last season to the extent of 28,000 cwt. of both kinds. The Oliver Cromwell is the only ship ready to sail with a cargo, and the new coffee is not likely to come down to any extent during the remaining six weeks of this season. We are now, therefore, certain that the total out-turn of season 1860-61 will be considerably short of the figures for 1859-60. Instead of a total of 632,000 cwt. made up of 472,000 plantation and 160,000 native, our export will probably be-plantation, 450,000 cwt.; native, 135,000 cwt.; total, 585,000 cwt. It is just possible that the round figure of 590,000 may be made up, but there is no reasonable ground to hope for 600,000.

The total outturn of 1858-59 was 584,000 cv or about what we anticipate for 1860-61. 1857-58 the total was 552,000 cwts.; and in the previous season, 546,000 cwt. We speak, of course, of the seasons ended 30th September. Our average export for the four seasons from 1858 to 1861 will be, as nearly as possible, 590,000 cwt. We fear season 1861-62 will anything but raise this average, although some of our planting friends begin to speak more hopefully of the coming crop than they did some time ago. The weather is unusual for August, very copious rains having fallen for several days at Colombo. The rains of the North East Monsoon are not due until the end of September.

In the Legislative Council a good deal of business has been transacted. The rules of council have been revised chiefly with reference to the new privilege granted to members of introducing Bills with the leave of the council. All that a member could formerly do in the way of initiating legislation, was to submit to the governor a "project of law," and, if the governor approved the project, a Bill founded on it would be introduced by Government. The practice of our Legislature is now so far assimilated to that of the British House of Commons; and, in order still further to follow the analogy of legislation in Britain, the "derived prerogative," supposed to belong to the Queen's representative of assent ing to, or vetoing Bills, has been formally recognized in one of the rules. All the unofficial members of council opposed the rule and the principle, contending that as the Governor sat in Council, took part in the discussion of measures, could use his influence with the Government members to get a Bill thrown out, or could refuse to appoint a day for the third reading of a Bill which would thus drop, this further power was unnecessary; and inasmuch as it was not expressly con veyed in the Queen's instructions, unconstitutional. The colonial secretary, as the mouth piece of Government, on the other hand, held that as in Britain there were three estates-Queen, Lords, and Commons—the sovereign is not an estate); so in Ceylon there were two estates, the governor and the Legislative Council—the governor, as the Queen's representative, having the final prerogative of assenting to all laws inherent in him. show the necessity for the power of veto, Mr. Gibson supposed a case where the governor might refrain from taking the chair during all the stages of the Bill, leaving the senior member present to preside. he in such a case bound to carry out a law of which he might not approve? It came out in the course of discussion that the rules framed in the time of Mr. Stewart Mackenzie provided for Bills being taken up to the governor for his assent. They continued in force during the term of Sir C. Campbell's Government, and up to 1847, when the provision was dropped; and the power seems to have, since then, fallen into disuse. We suspect the power of assenting to or dissenting from a Bill is inherent in all governors; but certainly the governor of a colony like Ceylon has a grand advantage over the governor of a colony with a regular Parliament or representative Assembly. Our governor sits in the Legislature with power to influence nine official members against six unofficials, and with a casting vote in case of an equal division. Hitherto all Bills introduced have been Government measures; and in the future the great majority will be of the same character. So that to give the governor the power of vetoing a Bill, which he himself has aided in passing, is giving the governor greater power than is possessed by the Queen herself,the fountain of all prerogative. The Opposition, therefore, had much reason on their side in the very interesting and able debate which On a previous took place on the question. occasion, and while discussing the provisions of the Volunteer Bill, council, in the absence of his Excellency, struck out a clause which provided expressly for the exercise of a power, which we believe to be inherent in the ruler, that of removing any person from a military corps without trial or reason assigned. The Volunteer Bill, with this and other amendments, has passed through committee, and has been law officers of the crown for report. The Debenthrough committee, and has been referred to the The Deben-Bill has passed through committee, £1 per cent. per annum being fixed as the composition for stamp duty which the banks must pay on their average circulation. Taking that circulation at £120,000, the revenue from this source will be £1,200 per annum. This does not seem a heavy price to pay for the exercise of the sovereign privilege of issuing money, and that, too, money in a form peculiarly liable to destruction—every note absolutely destroyed being, of course, so much absolute gain to the issuer, who will never be called on to fulfil the promise to pay. On the other hand, the engraving and re-engraving of notes, no doubt, cost money, and the banks are bound by their charters to have specie in reserve equal to onethird of their circulation. They also point to the great advantages they confer on the community, and no doubt the advantages are greatmutually. The local managers have cried out lustily against a taxation which has ceased to be nominal, and, as the Colonial Secretary remarked, they have powerful interests at home to back them; but we cannot suppose that the unanimous resolution of the Governor and Council of Ceylon will be again over ridden. Mr. Wilson is no longer the presiding spirit at the Treasury; and before he passed away he framed for India a plan of a Government paper currency, not very widely different from that which he so severely denounced when in operation in Ceylon.

The governor has been on a tour through the Southern Province as far as Hambantotte, where it appears barracks for troops are to be built at an expense of £10,000. Troops at Hambantotte are useful chiefly with reference to the protection of the salt formations, and to guard a considerable number of prisoners, who, in consequence of the sparseness of the population and the unhealthiness of the country, are employed in collecting

THE PAPER CURRENCY ACT.

THE introduction of a paper currency into our Indian territories is too important a measure to be passed over altogether in silence. It is needless, indeed, to dilate upon the benefits to all classes of the community which may thence be expected to ensue, for we have more than once insisted upon the necessity of affording this assistance and relief to commerce. Besides, it must be admitted that the present measure is little better than a timid experiment. It would have been both wiser and more generally advantageous to have started boldly with a circulation of ten or twelve millions sterling, though, no doubt, that amount will, ere long, become the minimum limit. Indeed, it is difficult to see what great good can accrue from a smaller circulation either to the trading public or to the Government itself. By imposing a narrow limit the Government actually discredits itself, and by its own timidity lessens the confidence that would otherwise be placed in its responsibility. Then, to be largely useful for the purposes of native traffic, notes should certainly be issued of a lower value than ten rupees. In villages and very small towns such notes will be in no request whatever, whereas at half that value they would tend to supersede the Hoondee system to a very considerable extent. Neither do we perceive the object of making notes issued in any particular "circle of issue," payable only in that circle. It seems to us that the notes of the Indian Government. like those of the Bank of England, should bear but one impression, and be received as a legal tender throughout the length and breadth of our Indian Empire. By the provisions of the present Act, every precaution is taken to diminish the utility of the new medium of exchange, and to render it as much as possible an object of suspicion to the natives. In the matter of credit every man's personal experience will tell him that hesitation is fatal. To be trusted by others one must have the air of trusting one's self. Especially is this the case in dealing with Asiatics, who are by temperature suspicious and distrustful, and who respect others as they appear to respect themselves. A bold plunge is always safer and better than to stand shivering on the margin, "letting 'I dare not,' wait upon 'I would.'"

SALE OF WASTE LANDS.

In the course of the discussion that ensued after the reading of Mr. Bazley's very able and interesting paper on the Cotton Supply, in one of the sections of the British Association at stacle to the growth of cotton. Mr. G. Ashworth, indeed, far surpassed his colleagues in the sweeping nature of his denunciations, and asserted that the Local Government stood between "the energies of Great Britain and the poor natives of India, who were broken down by oppressive taxation." The absurdity of such a statement must be obvious to all who have looked ever so slightly below the surface, but as a rhetorical artifice Mr. Ashworth may be pardoned for talking about the oppressive taxation beneath which the Indian ryots are supposed to be ground down to the earth. The other speakers contented themselves with inveighing ih a forcibly feeble manner against the different tenures of land which prevail in that country, but as none of them condescended to details, or to explain what it was that he found to be so highly objectionable, it is impossible for us to judge how far these allegations are well founded. One gentleman, however, did venture to specify an evil, and at the same time, its remedy. In his eyes the Land-tax is a monstrous incubus on the agricultural interests, and Government is bound to lose no time in sanctioning its redemption. Now, we also are of opinion that it is very desirable that such a measure should be passed, though we much doubt that any large number of native landholders will avail themselves of it. There have been of late years so many changes and innovations of one kind or another that the native mind has become filled with disquietude and distrust. In the first place it must ever be borne in mind that neither Hindoo nor Mahomedan has any abiding faith in the permanence of our rule. What inducement, then, is there to sink a large sum of money for a prospective advantage of doubtful realisation? Will the successor to the British Government ratify a previous bargain from which he can derive no good? Is he not rather likely to reimpose a Land-tax or to levy some additional imposts by way of compensation? And what security is there that the Sircar itself at a future moment, under pecuniary pressure, will not devise some other form of taxation? After some such manner as this the majority of native laudholders will assuredly reason, and very few will be found either able, or willing, to exempt themselves from the future demands of revenue by the prompt payment of a large sum, estimated at twenty to twenty-five years' purchase. Whenever men are enlightened enough to do so, there is little question as to the benefits they will ultimately reap, and it is this assurance that causes the European settlers to demand the privilege with such clamorous persistence. They at least will lose no time in redeeming the Government claims on whatever lands they may possess, though not with much expectation of adding to their estates by purchasing those of their native neighbours. But what is really of more importance to them is to obtain from Government the sale of waste lands in fee-simple. There are many millions of acres that might be disposed of at a price to remunerate both the Government and the capitalist, and it is satisfactory to observe that a correspondence on this subject is now being carried on between the supreme authorities and the secretary of the Landholders' Association. It is suggested that these waste lands should be sold, out and Manchester, some of the speakers indulged in out, at the rate of five shillings an acre, devague declamation about the land tenures of ludia, alleging that they were the chief obland. Immense tracts of land suitable for the growth of tea and cotton would thus be brought under cultivation, and the State would directly benefit in the prosperity of its subjects. It is certain that very little European capital will be enticed to India under the present system, whereas a powerful impulse would be given to private enterprise so soon as absolute possession of the land was obtained once and for ever. The redemption of the Land-tax is certainly a desirable measure, but the sale of waste lands in fee-simple is a positive necessity if anything is really to be done to realise that hacknied phrase, "the development of the resources of India."

NATIVE LADIES IN BENGAL.

THE publication of an essay on the state of society in Bengal, written in the vernacular language by a native lady, is the most hopeful sign of social progress that has yet fallen under our notice. The simious imitation of English habits and manners upon which Young Bengal has hitherto prided itself, has been the cause of deep regret and discouragement to all who take a sincere interest in the moral welfare of our fellowsubjects in the far East. Scepticism and intemperance have so long been almost the only outward token of the civilisation imported from the West, that the most sanguine believers in the ultimate regeneration of the natives had begun to despair. It was not by mimicking European follies, or by exaggerating European vices, that the latter could hope to satisfy the ardent aspirations of their well-wishers in this country. And yet, with a few honourable exceptions, it was only in this manner they attempted to illustrate the advantages of European education and enlightenment. A small number of the Hindoos, however, who had made some acquaintance with English literature, have occasionally imparted to their wives a vague notion of their own elementary knowledge, and the remarkable performance alluded to at the commencement of this article is a proof that the seed has been cast on a not ungrateful soil. We regret that it is only through the comments of the Indian Reformer that we are at all acquainted with the contents of this pamphlet; but, according to our contemporary, the means pointed out by this enlightened essayist "for the amelioration of her country, are the spread of Brahmaism (not Brahmanism, but the worship of one God), the betaking of Bengalee gentlemen to travelling, the progress of female education, the suppression of Kulinism, the prevention of early marriages, and the abolition of caste." Certain narrow-minded individuals will sneer at the idea of any real social progress unless founded on Christianity, and will insist on engrafting what is mainly an offshoot of Teutonic institutions on the old Hindoo stock. Such enthusiasts must be left to their own vain devices, in that spirit of tolerance which they are incapable of exhibiting towards those who differ from themselves. For our part, we are content to accept the propositions of this Bengalee lady as far more practical than the most vehement ravings of the missionaries, or the loudest denunciations of Exeter-hall.

ideas, and should express them in correct and even elegant language, is certainly a sign of the times, and an index of that enlightenment which, however slowly and imperceptibly, is dissipating the ignorance of the daughters of India. We do not, by any means, suppose that the case of the lady in question is singular even amongst Bengalee women. We have reason to believe that the contributions of educated ladies have sometimes graced the vernacular periodicals of the day, while there are hundreds equally intelligent, whose names have not wandered beyond their homesteads. We are not guilty of exaggeratheir homesteads. We are not guilty of exaggera-tion when we say, that in the houses of most of the respectable Hindoo gentlemen of Calcutta there are some females, one or two at the least, who can read and write their mother tongue. Now, why should not the social emancipation of Bengales ladies proceed alongside their mental improvement? The light of knowledge is being poured into their minds, why are they not admitted into the light of society?"

Our contemporary then proceeds to notice some of the more prominent reasons for this unwise and ungracious seclusion from society of its best ornaments and most effective regenerators. First of all, it is said to be contrary to immemorial custom to treat one's wife on a footing of equality, and to recognise her as a companion. No doubt, as Lord Palmerston observed the other day at Dover, it is a good thing to." cling to ancient and honourable traditions," but this is an ancient tradition far more honoured in its breach than in its observance. Besides, in the primitive Vedic times women certainly occupied their natural position in the social system, and were not then considered as "forms on which the sun is not destined to shine."

The second objection is likewise one that is not unfrequently urged among ourselves against the adoption of any peculiarity, however sensible in itself. It is asked, "What will people say?" so that the fear of Mrs. Grundy is not confined to the snobs of Europe. Then, it is urged that Bengalee ladies are too modest and bashful to join the society of men. That they will feel a little timid at first is, of course, to be expected, but so are-or were-young English girls at home. It is quite unnecessary for a London journalist to walk in the steps of the Indian Reformer, and assure his fair countrywomen that there is nothing incompatible in looking upon the face of an other man than a husband, and yet remaining a pattern of modesty and of every womanly virtue. We only hope that when the Bengalee ladies overcome the bashfulness that is supposed to render them averse to the society of the other sex, they will retain a higher sense of modesty than is displayed at some of our English wateringplaces at this season of the year. Primitive freedom of manners is hardly consistent, or safe, with modern associations.

A more forcible objection to the admission of virtuous women into native society is the want of self-respect, the absence of all delicacy of feeling, the indecent demeanour, and improper language, which characterise the men. But this objection is also one of the strongest arguments in favour of the innovation. The general tone of society will at once be improved by the presence of women, and, at least, the outward expressions of rudeness and licentiousness will fall into desuetude. But, it is urged, the Bengalee ladies so closely imitate Godiva that they are really not presentable to one's male acquaintances. Their dress consists of a loose robe, as transparent as gauze, such as a goddess may have worn on Olympus, but certainly not adapted either for a public promenade or a modern drawing-room. Well, then, the sooner they learn to tion. The general tone of society will at once attire themselves in a becoming manner, the sooner will they be presentable in society with impunity to their own modesty, and without offence to the common decencies of life. But not only is their personal beauty unadorned, their minds are equally uncultivated. Here we arrive at both the cause and consequence of their exclusion from men's society. Abandoned to themselves, and regarded merely as animals, they naturally sank to that level; but restore them to their proper place and they will soon show themselves worthy of it. It will hardly be credited that another excuse for the degraded position of woman in Bengal is the difficulty of addressing her in society. It is indelicate to mention her name to one's friends, or to allude to the mutual relationship of husband and wife, and especially of fatherin-law and son-in-law! What better proof could there be of the justness of Swift's remark, that too great nicety of ideas betokens a nastiness of mind? These coarse Hindoo sensualists, who have no thought but for animal enjoyments, and the gratification of morbid passions, object to introduce their wives to one another because they have never looked upon them except as mere "females!" In truth, if the social condition of that people is ever to be improved, it can only be through the restoration of the woman to a perfect equality with the man, and we heartily wish success to the vigorous attacks upon the present system, made not only by the Indian Reformer, but likewise by other members of the local press.

FORGOTTEN?-Among soldiers all burning for distinction a distinguished soldier; among the rulers of a stupendous empire a ruler loved, feared and honoured by countless thousands of the most warlike peoples of which that empire was composed; knight of a chivalrous order, and, if the type of perfect knighthood be not complete without piety of soul, purity of heart, and a hand open as day to melting charity, then a more knightly character was not to be found in the whole order. Had the tale even stopped here, had such a man done nothing more, he would have been an examplar whose memory we could not willingly let die. But God willed that during the most fearful trial to which our race has per-haps ever been exposed, this man should play the foremost part in a feat of arms destined to make the scene of its occurrence a household word in English homes for ever. His foresight perceived the coming storm, when around him men still augured peace; and the magic of his presence deferred the outbreak until his unwearying exertions had completed the necessary preparations for meeting it. With him among them ravening enemies hesitated to declare their purpose, doubtful adherents were reassured in their allegiance, and the really loyal felt they had found a chief to live and die for. At last the day of battle came, and in the fore-front of danger one of the first to fall-though not before his work was accomplished, not before his wise precautions had, under Providence, left a legacy of salvation to the beleaguered garrison-was Sir Henry Lawrence. The last words he kept muttering in his dying agony were, "Save the ladies." His self-chosen epi-taph, "Here lies Henry Lawrence, who tried to do his duty. May God have mercy on him!" So passes away the great Protagonist of the drama. But the curtain drops not here; the action of the piece proceeds with breathless vehemence. On one side rebellion surging to the assault in multitudinous fury only again and again to be hurled backwards from the tempest-girt little rock where the red cross of England still flutters defiantly in the breeze-on the other our countrymen meeting each fresh misfortune and misery that came with every hour of those long weeks of weary watching, with a cheering constancy of which too many, alas! like Fulton, never lived to see the final triumph and reward; and our countrywomen the while, with "the honoured Polehampton" at their head, gliding among all the smoke and uproar of the fray on errands of mercy to the sick, the wounded and the dying. Yet still the battle rages, still is every assault repulsed, while nearer and more near struggle Havelock and Outram to the relief, and with them "the flery Neill," coming rejoicing to his death. Last of all there is rescue with Lord Clyde, and "the illustrious garrison" marches forth from the battered gates of the Bailey Guard, while all England raises a pean over the indomitable valour by which such a triumph has been won. 'Tis an old tale, we know. These things happened four years ago at least. We recal them merely for single question. Our fact is, that not a stone has yet been raised to commemorate the fame of Sir Henry Lawrence, and those who fell with him in the siege! Our question—Countrymen, are ye content that this reproach should continue?— Friend of India.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering onities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do though there improved the pattern and support the street of his pattern and support the street of his pattern and support the support of his pattern and support the support of his pattern and support of his pat sands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystifed by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only rui representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always-call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse."—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horsefiesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home Neus.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE very serious illness of the aged Ameer of Cabul is the most important event recorded in the journals we have received by the Bombay mail of the 27th of August. The death of Dost Mohammed will probably be the signal for grave disturbances throughout Affghanistan, from which, it is to be hoped, the Indian Government will hold itself strictly aloof. The line of the Indus is so evidently the best frontier of British India to the north-west, that any attempt to appropriate the hill country beyond would be a grievous political blunder. Should the Governor-general, indeed, be invited to arbitrate between contending chiefs, it would obviously be to the advantage of British interests to anticipate a reference to any other foreign Power. Otherwise, a state of chronic warfare is a natural necessity with these turbulent chiefs, and so long as they confine their fighting to themselves, a little blood-letting will do them no great harm.

The Indian papers are mad with excitement, on account of a new phase of the "Nil Darpan scandal. The Viceroy himself has at last struck in, like the Noir Fainéant, at the end of the mêlee, and laid about him such stalwart blows that victory was at once decided in favour of the planters. Notwithstanding his frank apology, Mr. Seton-Karr has been dismissed from his post as Secretary to the Bengal Government, besides being in some measure compelled to resign his seat in the Legislative Council. As the entire correspondence on the subject will be found elsewhere, it may suffice to mention in this place that Mr. J. P. Grant, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, is likewise reproved for not taking proper steps to ascertain and condemn the circumstances under which the official frank of the Bengal Government had been so improperly used. The Secretary to that Government is, however, much more roughly dealt with, and is declared to be "chargeable not only with an unwarrantable assumption and indiscreet exercise of an authority which did not belong to him (in sending home copies of the drama without reference to his superiors), but with a neglect of duty which it is difficult to reconcile with the motives that led him to such an assumption." It rarely happens that such a severe rebuke is publicly administered to an official so highly placed as Mr. Seton-Karr, whose haughty temperament will, moreover, enhance the pain of the castigation.

Under the head of official correspondence we give another public document, which evinces the importance attached by the Indian Government to the improvement of the cotton cultivation, though it may be doubted how far the rewards now offered will prove of practical utility. A prize of £1,000 is to be annually given in each Presidency for the largest quantity of cotton, combined with the best quality, that shall be grown on any one estate of not less than thirty acres. The unpleasant duty of adjudicating these rewards is offered to the Chambers of Commerce in the respective Presidencies, but it is questionable if they will undertake such a troublesome and invidious

Cholera continues to rage in the famine tract, though at Agra and Meerut it appears to have abated somewhat of its original violence.

Two exploratory expeditions are being organised by the Government; the one to enter China through the Burmese empire, the other to proceed through the Himalayas into Central Asia, by Ladak and the Pangong Lake, and Khokan to the North East, as far as the Thian Shan, or Celestial range of mountains, on the Chinese frontier. The latter expedition will start from Almorah at the commencement of the next hot season, and will consist of Captain Smyth, Bengal Army, Leader; Lieut. Jackson, Bengal Engineers, Surveyor; Captain Bassevi, Bengal Engineers, Meteorologist; Dr. T. C. Jerdan, Madras Army, Botanist; Dr. Stewart, Saharumpore Bot. Gardens, commercial products, &c., and Prof. Medlicott, Geological Survey, Geologist. The Governor-general will probably be enabled, by special arrangements, to travel the whole way from Calcutta to Agra, by railway; but it is erroneous to state, as the Bombay Gazette has done, that "the entire distance may now be travelled by railway."

V A STORY

BENGAL.

TURKEY AND THE TARTAR RACES.

The historical magnitude of recent and contemporary events in Asia, is as striking as the political importance of the changes which have taken place in Europe and America during the past decade. In the West old dynasties have been extinguished, young kingdoms have been created, new nations have been born. All these occurrences have been of the deepest interest to England, for all were calculated to affect her position relatively to the other Great Powers. In the East events have taken place or are impending, which are of as great importance to our Indian empire; while midway between England and India lies the scene of the Eastern Question which intimately affects both. In five short years India has destroyed the last relics of the Mogul empire, and has inflicted on the Mantchu dynasty a blow which seems likely to be the precursor of its extinction. And now the Mussulman who for the past twenty-two years has represented the house of Othman, has passed away, giving place to a successor who, in all human probability, is destined either to impart a new and short-lived vitality to the Porte, or to see it vanish into obli-The three great Tartar tribes who covered Asia from the Oxus to the Pacific, and who for four centuries gave laws to a country stretching at different times from Vienna to Canton, have played out their part in the world's history. The Mantchus holding the lands of the far East, conquered China, but like Rome adopted the civilisation of the conquered. They have fled from their capital before a handful of English and Sikh soldiers, have ceded to Russia the eradle of their race, and passively await the time, not far distant, when the Taeping rebellion shall swallow them up. The Moguls were led to vic-tory by Zenghis Khan, who for a time ruled over his Mantchu brethren on the east, and his Turkish brethren on the west. He drove the latter west beyond the Oxus into Asia Minor, his descendant Timur once more defeated them under Bajazet at Ancora, and Timur's representative Baber founded the so called Mogul dynasty in India. The Turks, the third of these Tartar tribes, having sprung from lands which bordered on the Caucasian territories, were less Tartar than the Mantchus and Moguls. Adopting at an early period the Mussulman faith, as the Moguls did, their career has been more brilliant than that of any other Asiatic power. From the day when Othman invaded Nicomedia, and his son made Brusa his capital, to the time whence Prince Eugene drove Mustapha II. out of Hungary, the history of the Osmanli Turks was one of progress. More illustrious than the Mantchu emperors of Pekin or the Great Moguls of Delhi were the Sultans of Constantinople. Yet of these three nomadic races, the first of whom emerged into history two centuries before Christ, the Mogul has now passed away, the Mantchu, fossilised by Buddhism, passively awaits extinction, and the Turk only illustrates the proverb that " where the carcase is, there will the eagles be gathered to gether."

Such crumbling decadence ending in one case in death, is without a parallel. In the West the Latin races have, with intervals of obscurity, maintained their position of greatness since Rome became mistress of the Mediterranean, about the same time that the Mantchus founded their first empire. The German-speaking peoples entered later on the stage, but now, if we may judge from that spawning force of theirs which has colonised half the world, are only arriving at the vigour of manhood. The Slavonian races are yet in their The creed of the Koran has been a infancy. curse to the Tartar, if for no other reason than its permission of, its invitation to, the practice of polygamy. We can form some faint idea of the rapid increase of population in the temperate regions of Asia previous to the spread of Mahomedanism, when we look at the continuous stream of emigration which poured into Europe, and resulted in the overthrow of the Roman Empire; when we think of the gigantic armies and has seemed likely that the empire would break earth is taken from the detritus, which generally slaughter of Ghengis Khan, Kublai Khan, and | up like that of the Great Mogul, into a number Timur, the Caliphs and the Osmanli Sultans. But all this ceased by the eleventh century. With the dominance of Mahomedanism came infanticide and polygamy, a warlike spirit began to disappear, physical energy was wasted in sensualism, and by the sixteenth century the Mentchn had been thrice driven out of China, the Mogul forced to flee from Delhi, and the Turk became the slave of his own janis-Since Akbar, with whom that century saries. closes, Asia has not produced one really great man. Nadir Shah, Hyder Ali, and Sivajee, were only superior bandits. The rebellion of 1857 did not evolve even a fourth-rate leader, or it must have been more successful. By its wars and its sensuality Mahomedanism has emas culated Asia. Idolatry, whether of Buddhism or Brahmanism, has caused its incipient civilisation to rot away, and made its people the passive victims of Mussulman conquerors, whose descend ants soon became effete; or the indifferent subjects of two Western powers, who owe their miraculous progress to the leavening energy of Christianity.

When we see the Mogul dead and the Mantchu dying from the wounds which we have inflicted, we look with a curious interest to the condition of the Turk whom, with a strange inconsistency, we alone have kept alive. India is more interested than even England in the character of the Sultan, who has succeeded the enervated Abdul Mediid on the throne of Constantinople. For the next half century our Eastern Empire has to fear no overwhelming danger except from Sikhs or Mussulmans. The former are too few in number and too localised to strike a blow that would be felt throughout the peninsula. The latter boast of large numbers and of some degree of organization; they are inspired by fanaticism, and actuated by a desire for vengeance on the supplanters of their power. Delhi and its glories are no more, and there can be no doubt that its fascination has faded now that the Great Mogul is in obscurity. There is even weakness in the separation of Sheah from Soonee and the hate which exists between the opposing sects. But there burns in Mecca a flame which feeds the faithful in every land from Borneo and Batavia to Cairo and Algiers. Prophecies hatched in the recesses of the Great Mosque by fugitives whom unsuccessful mutiny drove from Hindostan, are dispersed by pilgrims to every land, and are producing that general expectation of "something" as about to happen, of the coming of the great Imam Mehndee to destroy the infidel, which pre-ceded the revolt of 1857. The enervation of the late Sultan, combined with the unswerving policy of Lord Stratford de Redeliffe, kept down the fanatic party in Constantinople, who, but for the presence of the foreign ministers, would long ago have got rid of Abdul Medjid. Now he has been removed by his own debaucheries, and his brother, a man of very different stamp, reigns in his place. The husband of one wife, in the prime of life, of active habits, Sultan Aziz Effendi would seem to have been raised up just at this time, to give to the Turkish power in Europe, and to the Mussulman faith, a new and last lease of life.

His first acts justify this expectation. At one sweep he has cut down the Civil List from three millions to less than half a million sterling. He has reduced the harems of his predecessors, two of which were six hundred strong. He has returned the Praetorian force used as palace guards into the body of the army, more quietly than his father got rid of the janissaries. While this augurs well for the future stability of Turkey, taken in conjunction with general report it points to a reactionary course full of danger to the peace of Asia. Sultan Aziz is known to belong to the fanatic party whose head-quarters are at Mecca, and whose dream is the restoration of Moslem power. Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, the man of all others best fitted to judge, says "he has been represented as a man of a decided and also of a rather violent character, and he is supposed to be surrounded by persons who would willingly see a reactionary system adopted." Hitherto it of independent palatinates. Already the Herzegovine, Montenegro, and the Principalities are virtually their own masters, and the new arrangement for the Government of the Lebanon makes it a sort of federal province. It may be the new Sultan's task to arrest the work of disintegration. and fuse the units into one powerful centre. It will be more likely his to fan the smouldering sparks of Mahomedan fanaticism into a flame which will burn against the Christian throughout the East, and give our army too much to do in India to allow us to send regiments to Egypt and Syria .- Friend of India.

PROGRESS OF THE TRIGONOMETRICAL SURVEY IN KASHMIR.

Captain T. G. Montgomerie, of the Engineers, First Assistant Great Trigonometrical Survey, in charge of the Kashmir series, has, by order of Colonel A. S. Waugh, Surveyor-General of India, drawn up an interesting memorandum on the progress of the Kashmir series, with observations on the late conquest of Gilgit, some remarks connected with the Indus cataclysm of 1858, &c. During the field season of 1860, the triangulation of the Kashmir series has made good progress up the river Indus, and the position of Leh, the capital of Ladak, has been finally fixed. work had to be carried over some very difficult, rugged, and confined ground, but was effected in a skilful manner, though it twice involved the ascent of a station of 19,979 feet, and of another 19.958 feet above the sea, besides numerous other stations, all over 17,000 feet above the sea. A trigonometrical mark has been erected on a point 21,483 feet above the sea. Several points in China have been fixed, and, amongst others, the wellknown Gya peak is supposed to be included, the height of which appears to be from 28,000 to 24,000 feet above the sea.

The topographical work was first taken up in the Kishengunga valley, which, although drained by a large river, is really, for the greater part, little better than a chasm in the mountains, and is throughout very precipitous. It had to be taken up when the snow was heavy, even at 9,000 feet, as the Maharajah's troops were shortly to cross the valley, en route to Gilgit. The work was completed in very good time, and the whole of the surveyors were then transferred to fresh ground in little Thibet and Ladak. During the season topographical sketches were made of the whole valley of the Indus, from Skardo, the capital of Little Thibet, to Leh, the capital of Ladak, as well as of other vallies and plains. This large tract of country included at least 350 square miles of glaciers, for the most part of the larger kind. Glaciers are, in fact, in this section of the Himalayas, very much larger and more numerous than in any part of the Himalayas previously surveyed. Possibly this is in some measure due to the latitude, as all these glaciers lie between latitudes 33 and 36 degrees north; but it must also be partly the result of the immense heights of the peaks generally, as, with the exception of those of Nepaul, they exceed all other parts of the Himalayas that have as yet been measured. There is hardly any portion of the upper valley of the Indus without glaciers, but they are the largest, and abound most near the great Himalayan and Karakoram ridges.

The plains of Deosai are, perhaps, the most curious topographical feature of the country sketched during the season. They consist of about 580 square miles of gently undalating ground, averaging at least 14,000 feet above the sea, surrounded on all sides by rugged mountains running up to from 16,000 to 17,000 feet. drainage, escaping through a not easily distinguished gorge, falls into the Shigar river, a tributary of the Dras; -it brings down gold with its water, and gold washing is carried on just below the junction. The Indus itself, and several other of its tributaries, are also known to produce gold. The gold washing is said not to be valuable, but it does sometimes give as much as one or two rupees a day to a man, though a most barbarous method is employed in washing the earth. This lies above the highest flood line. After two or three washings a black heavyish kind of sand is left, with the pieces of gold scattered here and there. As far as Captain Montgomerie's experience went, he thought it was not a profitable business, for, after half an hour's washing, he got only five tiny nuggets, hardly worth an anna, and he had, at the same time, the benefit of the assistance of an Australian gentleman. This gentleman, however, thought that something might be done by investing in a cradle and apparatus. He said that a substance like the black sand mentioned above had proved valuable in Australia.

In June and July, 1860, an expedition was projected by the Maharaj of Nepaul against the wild tribes of Gilgit, Yasseen, and the vicinity, which has confirmed several important points in the geography of the countries near Gilgit. Hitherto, one of the greatest obstacles to making a successful attack on Gilgit has been the difficulty of getting supplies. The natives are in the habit of using the old expression to the effect, that a small force going against Gilgit was sure to be defeated, and a large force to be starved. To obviate this a hundred ponies were put at each of the halting places between Kashmir and Boonjee, and whilst the weather permitted, a hundred loads of grain were delivered daily at Boonjee. Detachments of sepoys were moved upon Gilgit in the months teferred to, mustering finally to about four thousand men. Having settled affairs at Gilgit, the force advanced further up the valley to Shirni Fort, where there was some slight resistance, ending as before in capitulation. Yasseen next fell into the hands of the Maharajah's forces. This conquest, which may be said to have been made without loss of life, is highly creditable to the Maharajah and his officers who planned and carried it out. The effects are in several respects likely to be very salutary. The fact will overawe and keep in check the robber clans, who have for years infested the roads between Baltic and Ladak on the one side, and Yarkund on the other. The Maharajah has left nearly three thousand men in the valley, and, consequently, it is to be hoped that they will in future hold their own, and that the traffic from Skardo direct to Yarkund will again be resumed. This expedition has also had a very wholesome effect on all the petty tribes lying between Gilgit and the Cabul territories.

Traffic will undoubtedly increase, and, moreover, the Punjab Government will have the means of getting full information, in case the Indus should again be blocked up in any part of its In the latter respect, the conquest of Gilgit, Yasseen, Hoonza, and Nagar, is really very valuable, as it places under a friendly native State the only great tributary of the Indus, concerning which the British Government has hitherto been unable to get any reliable information. This tributary, moreover, is, in Captain Montgomerie's opinion, the one on which the late great flood of the Indus was generated.' If these countries are in thorough subjection to the Maharajah, such a calamity as the cataclysm of 1858 ought not again to befall British subjects on the Indus, without their having, at any rate, full warning, even if it were not possible to prevent or mitigate it by the scientific application of labour, as it most probably would be.

The season of 1860 has not been a favourable one as far as the weather was concerned. With favourable weather in future seasons, Captain Montgomerie thinks his staff may succeed in carrying both the triangulation and topographical work up to the Chinese frontier. The triangulation may, possibly, advance a little further, even as matters now stand; and, if friendly relations existed with China, extending to all the provinces of that empire, we may hope to see a large traffic spring up between Hindostan and the eastern part of Central Asia. The triangulation of the Great Trigonometrical Survey may be joined on to that of Russia, and thus accomplish the project of Colonel Everest, the late Surveyor-General of India, who wished to measure the arc between Cape Comorin and Nova Zembla, an arc including nearly seventy degrees of the earth. To accomplish this, there remains at present a gap of little over five degrees of Chinese territory; the man.

After two or ind of sand is latitude thirty-six degrees, and the Government of Tobolsk now coming down below latitude forty-two degrees. At any rate, if the Chinese officials on our north-east become friendly, the geographical positions of some of the great cities of Central Asia may hereafter be fixed.—Times of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Southern Thibet,-The meeting of the Asiatic Society, on Wednesday evening, August 3, was very fully attended, to hear Lieutenantcolonel Yule's extremely interesting lecture upon the Geography of Southern Thibet, that part of the Himalayan range which bounds Assam and Burmah to the North, and the rivers that arise in, or traverse those regions, especially the Sampoo, or great river, of whose dubious and disputed course we spoke some short time ago, when writing upon our exploring expeditions in Asia. The Governor-general was present at the meet-ing, and evinced a great interest in the lecture and the discussions which followed it. lecturer took the view of the English geographers, who make the Sampoo unite with the Burhampooter, and so find its way, through the Assam Valley, to the sea; as opposed to the opinions of some continental authorities who, as we noticed some time ago, make it continue its easterly course to join the Irrawaddy, and so pour its waters into the ocean through the Delta of that stream. The lecturer read to his audience the communication received from the French Missionary vicar who has so long resided in Thibet, and which was intended to be confirmatory, as far as it went, of the Irrawaddy as opposed to the Burhampooter theory. In the representation of the interesting regions under notice by the gallant lecturer, some extraneous rivers were introduced; but the general impression conveyed to the audience amounted to a strong impression that the Sampoo is, in fact, the main or parent stream, the Burhampooter joining it as a tributary, and, from our total gnorance of the geography of those parts, unfairly assuming the supremacy, and giving its name to the combined flood. Major Dalton, one of the Assam politicals, and perhaps the European in the world best acquainted with the wild countries to the north of that province, was present at the lecture, and gave some very interesting practical information regarding those regions, and the races which inhabit them; expressing his opinion to the Governor-general that by well managed diplomacy and conciliation the chiefs of the tribes could be rendered friendly, and would grant a passage through their territories to a British expedition, but that, on the other hand, nothing could be more unwise than to attempt penetrating those wild and inhospitable mountains by armed force. There can be little doubt that this is wise counsel, being supported by the fact that the two French missionaries who were murdered in attempting to traverse those regions some time ago fell victims to their refusal, or inability, to present one of the chiefs with some present or tribute, and their attempting to proceed, by a devious course, without satisfying him. There would be nothing whatever derogatory in a British exploring expedition being furnished with a supply of such cheap and dazzling presents as would satisfy the chiefs of those barbarous tribes and procure us a peaceful passage through their territories; in fact, on the contrary. such a course would be rather pleasing to contemplate, in contrast with our general habit of forcing our way everywhere, and drawing the sword upon all who refuse us a right of transit. In some of our possessions stores of trashy presents for semisavage chiefs and people whom it is desirable to conciliate are regularly kept on hand; and we should be glad to see their influence fairly tried, instead of that appertaining to swords and rifles, in connection with any expedition which this Government may sanction for penetrating and throwing light upon the unknown countries which formed the subject of Colonel Yule's interesting, and as far as was possible, instructive lecture.—English-

Behar, August 11.—The Small Cause Courts recently established in Bengal do not seem to be doing much, at least judging from the number of suits instituted in some of them. For instance, in one of these courts not a single suit has been brought, in another only three or four, although those courts have been in existence for more than two months. It is to be feared that most of those courts are not eligibly situated, especially those in the districts of Kishnagur, Jessore, and Rajshahye, which are situated in the interior; and where a few petty traders, mechanics, &c., reside. fixing the locality of most of these out of the way courts, it was intended to help plauters in recovering their dues; but, alas! the help has come too late, for the days of indigo planting in Bengal may be said to be numbered with the things of the past. However, one of the largest planters in Bengal has hit upon a most wise expedient. He will not sow indigo, but double the rents on the ryots, and thereby make up for his losses. In Kishnagur lands attached to indigo factories were let to ryots from 6 as. to 1-8 per beegah, from which the ryot gets a clear annual profit of 10 to 20 rupees, and sometimes more. Of course, these easy terms were granted to the ryot in consideration of his sowing indigo on a portion of his lands, but since he will not cultivate the plant, he has no reason to complain now the indulgence of getting his land cheap is withdrawn. By all accounts, nearly every district in Bengal is more or less inundated. Even in these provinces several parts are under water, and communication between some of the districts in the interior entirely closed in consequence; a considerable failure in the crops is expected, and the price of grain of every kind is rising here. Judging from the state of things in the Behar provinces there will be a partial famine in Bengal, or, if not, a very considerable distress, owing to the inundated state of the country. The indigo prospects of the Tirhoot planters were never worse than this year. A factory, hitherto yielding its 1,000 and 1,200 maunds, will not this year turn out fifty maunds. This is owing to the late arrival of the indigo seed, and in some measure also to the great fall of rain. During the last month cholera has been going about in Behar; but not to the same alarming extent as in the north-west, nor of the same fatal type. The use of chlorodyne in cholera has been eminently successful in Chupra. I am told the civil surgeon never lost a single patient out of the many he treated with chlorodyne .-Delhi Gazette.

Deliti, August 15.—I am glad to be able to report the disappearance of cholera from this station; a few cases still occur, but the violence of the disease is past, and I hope for some time. Fevers are prevalent, but when we remember the immense amount of trash Asiatics are in the habit of eating, we can scarcely wonder that disease and death are not more busy than they are. The body of an European, in a state of partial decomposition, and shockingly mutilated by wild animals, has been found within two hundred yards of the police-station at Shahdera. proved to be the remains of Armourer-Sergeant Galloway, who was proceeding to join the Delhi Arsenal; but how it happens that the body of an European, or indeed any human being, should be permitted to lie undiscovered so long a time so near a police station, is perfectly astonishing. Shahdera is in the Meerut district, and under the care of the Meerut police; it, therefore, reflects but little credit on the Meerut authorities to know that the ·Delhi police searched for and found the corpse of the unfortunate man, and it is to be hoped that this culpable negligence, if it proves to be nothing worse, will be visited with severe punishment, not likely to be soon forgotten. The servant of the unfortunate sergeant states that his master had been drinking, and that he said he was going to sleep; he (the servant) did the same, and that he never saw his master again; that a gold ring (missing) was on one of the fingers, and that he knows nothing more about the matter. He is in custody, and will be forwarded to Meerut. We have had no new cases of cholera since the beginning of this month among the Europeans, and I believe the natives are not suffering so much now. Last month the cholera fiend hovered over us for about three weeks, and now I fear he has winged his way up the country. Her Majesty's 82nd has lost about sixty men, besides women and children, and the Artillery Division has lost about eight men. This is at the rate of six per cent. in the former, and five per cent. in the latter. The wing of the 82nd quartered in the palace suffered most. I should say this wing must have lost nearly ten per cent., and the other wing quartered outside the palace hardly averaged one per cent. These are important and significant facts. They seem to indicate that a place surrounded on three sides with a wall sixty feet high, and open on the fourth to the malarious flats of the river Jumna, is not the best locality that might have been chosen for quartering the troops in garrison at this station. I believe that if these unfortunate companies had not been marched out to the Kootub when they were, there would have been very few men left to march again. And yet our wiseacres have decided on making this palace the fort of Delhi, and quartering the whole garrison in it.—Delhi Gazette.

HER MAJESTY'S 42ND ROYAL HIGHLANDERS returned to barracks at Agra on the 12th August, from Secundra. We are glad to hear that cholera has almost or entirely disappeared. Fever broke out at Secundra, and when they returned they had more than a hundred men in hospital.

PROSELYTISM AT AGRA.—Thirty-two native girls were baptised by the Rev. F. E. Schneider, on Sunday, August 18, at the Mission Church. About eighty had received baptism previously. There are now about three hundred orphans in charge of the mission, including the boys, who are at Secundra.

"FEROCIOUS DOOLIES."-We (Oudh Gazette) have heard of a most extraordinary occurrence, which has just happened to an officer travelling with his wife from Meerut to Mussoorie. On the way he was seized with cholera, and at some place beyond Roorkee, feeling himself getting worse, he took a rather liberal dose of brandy and laudanum, which threw him into a state of total insensibility. The doolee-bearers, discovering this, set down the doolee, and deliberately stripped him of everything he had-his ring, his watch, his clothes, his boxes, his bedding-leaving him literally naked. His wife, who had remained back to bring up the baggage, coming up a short time afterwards, was, as may be well imagined, rather astonished to find him in the state she did, still insensible. She, however, did her best to clothe him with a portion of her own garments, and brought him in safe to Mussoorie. When he recovered he remembered nothing of what had happened, save that he had been dreaming of something very awful occurring. The case is before the magistrate, but little hope seems to be entertained of the discovery of the robbers.

FROM CALCUTTA TO AGRA BY RAIL. - The investiture of the Knights of the Exalted Star of India is to be held by the Governorgeneral at Agra, in the month of October. The Englishman says, that "the East India Railway authorities having been applied to to know whether it would be practicable for his Excellency and suite to be conveyed by railroad the entire way from Allahabad to Agra, the answer has been that should the abatement of the rains, which may be expected, take place, the line will be traversable for the whole distance. Notwithstanding the impedimental weather, the railway work is being pushed on with great energy; and although we believe that the bridge over the Jumna at Agra cannot be completed, yet the Viceroy's party can be taken to the river, and then cross by the bridge of boats. Beyond Agra, and up the Doab, the railway works are far advanced towards completion, in many places nothing remaining to be done but to lay down the rails; the damage done by the rains and inundation being easily repairable. We hear that it is practicable to travel the entire distance from Calcutta to Agra, after a fashion, on the railway."

Workshops for European Soldiers have been sanctioned. The following trades are named:—The painter, printer, blacksmith, bricklayer, carpenter, joiner, weaver, shoemaker, bookbinder, tentmaker, gardener, watchmaker, decorator.

GHAZEEPOOR, August 14.—The new system of police is in full force in this district. The change, so far as it has been effected, has been for the worse. Within the last two months no less than a hundred cases of theft have been brought to our notice. One of these, which took place very lately, requires particular attention. On the night of the 10th, a party of thieves made a very spacious break in the outer pucka wall of the jail, and thereby effected an entrance into the manufactory store-room, with the ostensible motive of running away with some of the valuable articles of manufacture. Fortunately the carpets and things were kept on a raised platform, which, in the invisible darkness of a cloudy night, escaped the notice of the men. The only things they got hold of were a "lota" and a "thalee" of some poor peon. With these the fellows made their escape. The following morning Captain B. G. Vandergucht, the district superintendent of police, accompanied by the judge, the magistrate, and the joint magistrate, went to inspect the place, but nothing was brought to light. Nobody can tell whence these men came and whither they have gone. The superintendent has, however, already taken measures for keeping the outside of the prison under strict guard, prevent the recurrence of similar cases. The leader of these men must be one who is acquainted with the ins and outs of the gaol. He had hit the right point, but darkness, the wellknown assistant of the thief, turned hostile to this man and all his plans went to nothing. Everybody will be able to judge how safe our property is when they hear that this daring attempt was made under the very eyes of the police. Cholera is very seldom heard of, but fever is making great ravages. Several valuable lives have been carried off. This year we have had continual heavy rains, but since last Wednesday we have hot and sunny days again .- Delhi Gazette.

FUTTEHGURH, August 10.—The only topic, above all, of the day is the scourge of India (cholera), which has since a month devastated a large portion of native inhabitants in this city; but the unreserved energy and perseverance of the civil and sub-assistant surgeon have proved very beneficial. The pestilence has, however, by the kind mercy of the Divine Providence, greatly abated. It lately took its course towards the cantonments, consequently a few cases occurred in the European Hospital, and in the barracks, but it is hoped that it will soon disappear.

MEEAN MEER.—We (Lahore Chronicle) are glad to have it in our power to state that cholera is sensibly decreasing at Meean Meer. The number of European soldiers attacked was twenty-three, of whom nine have recovered. Eight so wars were admitted into hospital, two of whom died. A few natives in the bazaars have also been seized from time to time, but the disease seems to have been almost entirely confined to one particular quarter in cantonments. The e have been no cases reported from Umritsir, where the troops seem remarkably healthy, and none from Mooltan, while there has been no case nor symptom of the disease among the troops in the Fort of Lahore.

THE 8TH HUSSARS .-- Only a few months ago H.M.'s 8th (Royal Irish) Hussars were welcomed to the station of Meerut by us. Since that time the regiment has been very severely tried. Disease has made sad havoc in that glorious old corps. Some years past, when the 8th were first quartered here, they paid a heavy tribute to the same disease; and, although it has visited in turn the whole of the troops here present, the cholera seems to have specially attacked the 8th in spite of all the care and precautionary measures carried out to thwart it. Happily, now it seems to have nearly gone from amongst us, and we trust that health and happiness will return. H.M.'s 8th Hussars have lost upwards of fifty individuals since it entered this station. Within the past few days the names of Captain de Winton and Lieut. Richards as victims to cholera have been recorded in our columns. Men, women, and children have succumbed to it in quick succession. We feel assured that it was from no want of care or foresight on the part of those in command that so great a loss has been sustained. Unwholesome barracks or situation may have had a great deal to do with it, but now that the regiment is temporarily encamped we hope that the disease will be effectually removed. This is only one of the many trials that the 8th has gone through, and we trust that, in common with the other corps located here, it may find its wonted health and spirits quickly restored .- Mofussilite.

AN ADVENTURER .-- On Saturday, the 10th August, died at Lucknow, after a very painful illness of nearly three months, an officer of the late Oude service of some name and fame-Mr. Delmerick, commonly called Yeosuff Khan Bahadoor, a title conferred on him by the Court of Lucknow, and by which, from prudential motives, he always sought to be known. The deceased had served for nearly thirty years in the King's army as Adjutant. During this time he was always employed on active service, fighting the rebellious talookdars in the Salone Sectapore, and Baiswarra districts. About fifteen or twenty years ago he proceeded to England, and thence having travelled all over France, Spain, Portugal, and a portion of Germany, returned via Turkey and Arabia to India. Though he could neither read nor write any of the European languages perfectly, he could speak many well, and the English, particularly, very fluently. An account in Oordoo, written by himself, of his travels and experiences in the world, is, we believe, extant, and we doubt not would be well worth translating into English. When the mutiny broke out in Oude, Yeosuff Khan was living on his estate at Pershedapore. He was hunted, and for four months saved his life by hiding about the jungles, under the protection of Surrubject Singh, talookdar of Teekaree. He had been long in the enjoyment of a pension from the Government of which he had ever been one of the warmest and most loyal supporters. He had made and spent more than one fortune during his lifetime in Oude. He was an Italian by birth, having descended from the celebrated family of the Medicis of Florence and Tuscany. He was of the middle height, rather slightly built, but of a noble mien, with a long flowing beard (snow white from age), high, open forehead, and a fair fresh complexion. He must have been fully sixtyfive or seventy years of age. Being of extremely regular and abstomious habits, he always enjoyed excellent health, till within the last three months of his existence, when he was suddenly seized with an aberration of the intellects, under which he gradually sunk, having during his illness re-his last. He was a staunch Catholic and sincere Christian, and in his most painful paroxysms never neglected to call for the Bible, speak of the Divine religion, and for hours to walk up and down praying aloud and alone. In his last moments he thought of the priest and the sacrament. He was attended by the Rev. Mr. Gleeson, who duly administered the holy ordinance. And, finally, he was buried in the Catholic cemetery. Living he was loved and respected, dead he is sincerely regretted by all his friends and acquaintances. Peace be unto his manes.—Outh Gazette.

EXTERNAL COMMERCE OF BENGAL, 1860-61.-The Friend of India has received Mr. Bonnaud's tabular statements of the external commerce of Bengal for 1860-61, from which it appears that " the returns show a large falling off in imports, as was to be expected, and a slight increase in exports. For purposes of comparison we give the results of four years in pounds sterling. The trade embraces both merchandise and treasure :-

Total ... 229,455,254 £30,721,731 £32,554,956 £30,842,754 A steady advance is thus seen up to last year, when the Calcutta market was overstocked with imports. That in 1860-61, one-half of which was affected by the famine, we should have gained a little on 1858-59, is a cause of congratulation, and proves the general healthiness of the trade. The year shows a decrease in imports of £2,997,418, and an increase in exports of £1,285,217. Fully one-half of the increase was in importations of treasure and railway iron, and the other half in cotton goods and woollens. The increase in exports was in saltpetre, sugar, raw silk, rice, and gunny bags. The total decrease in the trade of the year as compared with its pre-decessor was £1,712,202. Had the same amount of iron and bullion been imported this as last year, the falling off would not have been a quarter of a million. Mr. Bonnaud deserves credit for issuing his commercial annual in about three months after the close of the year to which

CHOLERA.-We regret that the accounts received from the upper provinces continue to re port the spread of the cholera all over those territories, scarcely a single station of any size or note having escaped, and the disease having also extended to the villages and hamlets, where the peasantry are dying in great numbers. Umballah the epidemic has broken out with great violence, and by the last accounts received nearly thirty of the European soldiers have fallen victims to it, none of the officers civil functionaries having, however, been fatally attacked. On the other hand, it is satisfactory to hear that at Meerut and Agra the disease has much abated, both in the virulence of its type and the number of cases daily occurring, the measures for the removal of troops from the locality in which they were first attacked having been, as usual, attended with the best results. The Government ought to turn some special me dical and scientific attention towards this fatal and costly malady, and endeavour to bring its visitations and ravages under such a degree of mastery as may be attainable through the exertions of its most experienced and intelligent officers. The disease can be guarded against or mitigated; and it is high time that some creditable measures should be taken in that direction. Even looking at the matter in no higher or more enlightened view than as an affair of finance, the ravages of cholera should not be awaited and endured as they now are. It is getting worse yearly, and kills our valuable and costly European soldiers both within and without the empire, all over the Upper Provinces, and in ships at sea. H.M.'s 70th Regiment, when leaving this for New Zealand in February last, lost thirty-five men by cholera before the disease left them at sea; and the Carabineers leaving in March, were not much more fortunate. The deaths amongst our gallant European soldiers just now up-country will cost Government a heavy sum : far more than would pay for the em-diminish the fatal sweeps of this formidable disease; to say that this cannot be done is pusillanimous and untrue. Providence will not help us in this matter unless we bestir ourselves, and resist, with all the means in our power, the approach and attacks of the destroyer .- Englishman.

EXPEDITION THROUGH BURMAH. - Dr. C. Williams took his departure for Rangoon in the steamer of the 2nd of August, en route to Amerpoora, where he goes on a political mission to the Burmese Court. There he will be in communication with Colonel Phayre, the Commissioner of Pegu; and will negotiate with the King for per mission to undertake the expedition through Northern Burmah and the Himalaya passes, into the Chinese province of Yunan. Dr. Williams is an assistant-surgeon in H.M.'s 68th regiment, stationed at Rangoon; and since his residence in Pegu has devoted much of his time to the study of the Burmese language, in which he is proficient, being also possessed of attainments which qualify him to accomplish efficiently the enterprise upon which he is bent, should the permission of the Burmese authorities be fortunately obtained. One great geographical problem which will be solved in carrying out the proposed expedition, will be the decision of a point now involved in total uncertainty and obscurity-viz., into what stream the great Sampoo River, which flows from east to west in Central Asia, debouches its waters. In most of our maps it is arbitrarily marked as taking a southerly turn and pouring its flood into the great volume of the Burhampooter, and so reaching the ocean; whereas some assert that it takes no such bend, but still continuing its eastern course, unites with the Irrawady, and so gains the sea. There is not the slightest proof of either position; but we believe the more valid assumption is that our charts are erroneous, and that the latter course is the true one. A communication, not very lucid and intelligible it is true, has been received here from a French missionary vicar, now, and for many years past, residing in Thibet, who asserts that the Sampoo forms no connection whatever with the Burhampooter, but continues its easterly course to join the Irrawady, as above described and so reaches the ocean; and this interesting question will be one of the first cleared up by Dr. Williams's expedition. The difficulties of the new route from Burmah into the Chinese province of Yunan cannot be great, as there is a considerable and regular trade carried on through it between the two countries; and it is with the view to carry a line of British commerce over the same ground into Southern China that the present political mission to the Court of Ava has been undertaken, preliminary, it is to be hoped, to the British officer continuing his journey into the Celestial Empire, with the sanction of that Court. The present King of Burmah is not without some sentiments of enlightened policy, and it is believed would freely consent to the passage of British mer-chandise through his dominions, were it not for his natural dread of political and military difficulties hereafter arising, which might make him regret, as so many other Asiatic potentates have done, the establishment of too free communications with us, who are believed by our neighbours in the East to carry-first, bales, packages, and casks, to be almost invariably followed by swords and other aggressive weapons.—Englishman.

NEPAUL, August 1.—The hills around abound in mineral treasure, and could Jung Bahadoor get the permission of the British Government to entertain European engineers and miners for the purpose, the revenue of his country would be increased tenfold from this source. Copper, lead, and iron are plentiful; and of the first there are more than thirty rich mines in the province of Palpa alone, while there are scores of others unworked. The mining is carried on in the most primitive style: a small hole is cut into the rock, barely large enough to admit a man creening in. As the cutting advances the work becomes more difficult. The men in the chamber, which is lighted by a piece of cloth tied round a bamboo, pass out shovels full of ore in a flat basket, from ployment of men and measures that would greatly hand to hand, and the smoke from the torch becomes so suffocating that they are obliged to come out for fresh air every ten minutes. Copper is often found here in a pure state, in regular branches or trunks, only part of which is cut away. When veins of metal are found in level ground, they cannot be worked to any depth, as the natives have not the remotest idea of the pump, and are obliged for this want to give up a large produce. The Nepaulese agent at Bhotan informed the Maharajah yesterday that the Chinese Government had sent round officers to collect the revenue of the country. The Court of Lassa hitherto paid a yearly tribute to that of Pckin, and conducted the government of the country independent of any assistance from China, but from this year Thibet will be entirely absorbed into the Celestial Empire.—Englishman.

EGYPTIAN COTTON SEED .- The following letter from Mr. Paterson Saunders, senior, the Commissioner appointed by the Indian Government to report on cotton cultivation, appears in the Delhi Gazette:—"Sir,—An advertisement has already appeared in your paper regarding the distribution of Egyptian cotton seed gratis to parties who may apply to the Commissioner of Benares before the 1st of October. I wish to state through your columns that during the course of my travels and investigations I have found that the New Orleans seed distributed by the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Calcutta has failed very frequently to germinate, and in some instances, when it has germinated, it attained a growth of a few inches, and then withered away. On the other hand, the Egyptian cotton seed has germinated and grown in the most satisfactory manner. It is easy, I think, to account for this from the simple fact that receive the cotton seed from Egypt a much shorter time than the seed from the Southern States of America. It is important that this fact should be widely known, for people who sow New Orleans seed, and find that it does not germinate, are apt to attribute it to soil and climate being unsuited for it. Moreover, cotton from Egyptian seed is better, and brings a higher price than cotton from the New Orleans variety. Again, from the civil war now beginning in good earnest in America it may be safely predicted that little cotton will be grown in that part of the world, and our supplies of New Orleans seed will be entirely cut off. On the other hand, supplies of fresh Egyptian cotton seed are always obtainable, and I would strongly recommend parties who may wish to cultivate cotton in these provinces to use only cotton seed of Egypt."

RECOVERY OF DEBT .- The Trades' Association of Calcutta have petitioned the Legislative Council, praying that an Act may be passed substituting six years instead of three (in Act 14 of 1859), as the period beyond which debts are not legally recoverable.

THE NEW BANKING COMMISSIONER .- It is rumoured that under the new Charter of the Bank of Bengal which is now in course of being greatly modified, Mr. J. J. Harvey is to be the Commissioner of that institution on behalf of the Government.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR WILLIAM DENISON arrived at the Neil gherry Hills on the 4th August. We regret to observe that Dr. Sanderson, physician to the Governor of Madras, met with a serious but not fatal accident, which is thus described by our contemporary the Neilgherry Star:—"It appears that his Excellency and suite, while at Coonoor en route to this, visited the Catherine Falls; and on their return—the road being very narrow with a precipice on one side—the Doctor, in endeavouring to pluck a flower on the bank above, caused his horse's head to turn, thus getting the hind legs of the animal over together, and horse and man rolled over the precipice down one declivity of, as we are told, some thirty feet deep, and then down another of some fifty feet. The sight was described as perfectly awful to behold horse and man struggling down this almost sheer descent. But this shock to the spectators was not greater than their surprise and joy that comparatively the Doctor was soon found to have had, what we still trust may prove, a truly most miraculous escape. He was quite conscious, and bravely sung out from below that he was 'all right;' however, he is a good deal shaken, bruised, and cut about the back part of the head; and was left behind at Coonoor unable to move. We hear that he is really doing well, and that no fears are entertained of him."

HYDERABAD.—On the fifth day of the Mohurrum two rather serious accidents occurred in the city of Hyderabad, whilst H. H. the Nizam's procession of troops, &c., were passing along the narrow streets. It appears that one large elephant seized a man by its trunk, and after having placed the poor fellow between his enormous tusks was about to crush him to death, when a number of bullets were lodged and spears thrust into the heast's body, which compelled him to let go his hold of the man, who, however, expired a couple of days after from the rough treatment he had received was returning, another furious elephant, with one dreadful stroke of his trunk, levelled to the ground some half-a-dozen horses, together with their riders, causing a great consternation amongst the crowd, which was eventually appeased with great difficulty. The horses and their riders have been seriously hurt, and some of the men, it is said, are lying in a very precarious state. Mr. Temple and Brigadier Brown, who were deputed to Hyderabad to examine and put into order the finances of the Nizam, having accomplished the object of their mission, have left for Calcutta.

THE CHINCHONA EXPERIMENT .gherry Star) have lately inspected the Chinchons plants, some three thousand in number, at the Government Gardens here, and were pleased to note the great progress they had made under the careful management of Mr. McIvor, the superintendent. As we have already stated we were pleased with the great progress the plants have made, but we are by no means surprised, as we are aware that the growth of this succulent plant is from about three to nearly seven feet per annum; it must be expected that in a temperature of about seventy degrees with much humidity and some shade the hereditary tendency of the plant should be like the indigenous tea of Assam, to rapidly shoot upwards seeking the light. We were particularly glad to observe that Mr. Cross had included some of the nitida variety among the seed he brought out, which Mr. McIvor has raised, as it is the most hardy variety capable of standing full sunshine. We, however from what we know of vegetable physiology, live in the belief that we shall soon be able to so naturalise every variety as to be able to cultivate them all in the open, which we think we will be driven to do by finding the plant as intractable in the shade as the vanilla has proved itself to be. The system of cultivation proposed by Mr. McIvor (that of removing alternate branches and preserving the stem) has already, the Examiner states, received the sanction of Government, which we certainly consider a most premature procedure; for in an important matter of this sort the first botanist and agriculturist in Europe -viz., Dr. Lindley-ought to have been consulted, in default of any minor local authority superior in position to that of the suggestor. For our part we think that the sanctioned system of continually wounding the main stem, by the removal of alternate branches, is a decided mistake, as it will constantly throw back the health of the main stem (and consequently of the plant itself), and, as it recovers, the extra sap thrown into the main stem will only cause the accumulation of extra wood therein and add to the height of the plant. The predisposition at adaptability to circumstances on the part of a plant is not less than on the part of the human species to climate, &c. By continually lopping off branches you will soon give your plant a tendency to develope itself where it receives least injury. We could say more about the trouble branches, in place of suckers, will give in parting with their quill-bark, but we have already said enough to show we have ground on which to unhesitatingly condemn Mr. McIvor's system of Chinchona cultivation; and hence we would recommend that the cinnamonsystem of growing quill bark should be adopted intact. On our mentioning this subject to Mr. McIvor we found he was unacquainted with it. As a practical gardener we consider that Mr. McIvor has probably no rival in India, and we think that Government have done wisely in following Captain Morgan's recommendation that the executive details of the experiment should be left to him; but, as we observe, in a late article in the Madras Times, an attempt has been made to run down the legitimate authority and control of the Conservator of Forests (as "interference"!) we would remark that the history of the introduction of the tea plant into the Himalayas shows how necessary it was that a man like Dr. Jameson was placed as its responsible head. The then Governor-general looked upon his contravention of the views of Mr. Fortune as rank heresy! and yet, but for the brave this, and on the same day, whilst the procession in the Kangra valley or Deyrah Dhoon-i.e., the tes which beats the best Chinese! In like manner, had not our Conservator exposed the contradictions and ignorance on the subject, which had been evinced by Dr. MacPherson, the late Government order (induced by Dr. M.), to discontinue all operations here, would have been carried out, and a death-blow would have been dealt to the Chinchona experiment. Our brother of the Times, we therefore think, has been very disingenuous in suppressing the real facts in favour of a garbled view of the case-quite without excuse, as he had the correspondence before him, which he should have dealt with as a whole, or left the subject untouched. He was doubtless led to this course by an interest in common with Dr. M.

THE COMING INTERNATIONAL EXHI-BITION.

The instructions originally issued by Government with regard to the promotion of the objects of the International Exhibition, to be held in London in 1862, limited the collection of works of industry and art to be sent from India to private contributions, and the expenditure to be incurred by the State to the cost of transit only. These instructions materially differed from those issued in 1850, when the greater portion of the collection was purchased by Government. The Calcutta Central Committee lately represented that the extent of private contributions was a matter of considerable doubt, and that even in the event of such coming forward freely, the Exhibition would entail a positive charge upon the Indian Exchequer, since all articles contributed by private individuals are to be forwarded, and, if required, returned to forwarded, and, if required, returned to India at the expense of Government. The committee, therefore, recommended that a lakh of rupees be sanctioned for the purchase of articles for the Exhibition, to be sold at remunerating prices at the close of the Exhibition. The advantages that would be derived from the adoption of such a measure were stated to be twofold; first, the profits realised would greatly go towards defraying the expense to which Government will be put by forwarding private contributions, should such be forthcoming, to any extent, and the Exhibition, as far as India is concerned, be made self-supporting; and, second, India will be properly represented at the Exhibition, and her productions brought prominently to the notice of the world, which would not otherwise be the case. We are glad to learn that the Supreme Government have acceded to the recommendation of the Calcutta Central Committee, and have authorised an expenditure of a lac of rapces for the purchase of articles for the Exhibition. The sum has been allotted as follows :-

Bengal and North-West Provinces	85,000
Madras	30,000
Bombay	20,000
Punjab	15,000

The articles from Bombay, which it is considered will find ready purchasers, and yield a profitable return, are ebony and sandal-wood work, carved furniture, inlaid cabinet work, embroidery on from the elephant. A few hours subsequent to battle he fought, we should have had no tea now velvet from Sind, table cloths, napkins and towels from Broach. The central and district committees will, no doubt, exercise a sound discretion in making the selection of articles to be purchased, and will not be limited to those above-named. In the Government Gazette, of the 22nd August, we observe published general rules which have been laid down by the Central Committee at Calcutta for the guidance of local commit-tees in Bengal in carrying out the orders of the Government of India for the formation at the public expense of a collection of the works of art and industry for transmission to the Exhibition. The views of the Calcutta committee appear to the Governor-General in Council to be practical and judicious, and they are commended to the consideration of the Bombay Government, who have approved of the tenor of the instructions issued by the Calcutta committee, and recommended the adoption of similar measures in this presidency. By the adoption of the same rules by all the central committees of India, the Calcutta committee consider much useless expense might be saved, whilst an uniformity of action would be secured, which must result in economy consistent with the objects of the collection, and which will greatly facilitate the work of those who may be engaged upon arranging the display of the Indian collection at the Great Fair of the World.—Bombay Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FATAL ACCIDENT .-- A most melancholy accident occurred at Keamaree on the night of Tuesday, the 2nd July, resulting in the death by drowning of Mr. W. H. Spearman, engineer in the Indian navy, a well-known and respected resident at Kurrachee. The deceased gentleman was, it appears, in charge of the steam flats which for some time have been lying off the Government Dockyard. He went aboard one of them as usual on Tuesday evening, and about nine o'clock retired to rest on a bed which was made up on deck. About half-past eleven he appears to have rolled over in his sleep, and the deck of the boat being entirely destitute of bulwark, grating, or any protection whatsupposed that in attempting to rise he must have been partly carried under the bilge of the barge, and have found himself unable to do so, for the water was not sufficiently deep to drown anyone in a standing position. The unfortunate gentleman was heard to call for assistance, but he had swallowed an immense quantity of water, and died almost immediately on being got on deck. Medical assistance was sent for, but was of no avail. An inquest was held before Mr. Dalzell, and a jury of five Europeans, who returned a verdict of "Accidental death by drowning," but expressed their opinion that had there being any sufficient protection round the deck, such as a bulwark or a grating, the accident would not have occurred. The deceased has left a wife in delicate health, and a family. A more melancholy occur-rence, and one more clearly preventible, it has seldom been our lot to record.-Sindian.

DEATH OF THE REV. C. GREEN, M.A .-Bombay papers announce the death of the Rev. Charles Green, M.A., on the 15th August, at the house of Captain Chitty, at Malabar-hill. The news of Mr. Green's illness had spread over the island some days before, and the intelligence of his death surprised none, while it brought grief to all. Mr. Green was a nephew of the Lord Bishop of Bombay. He was a faithful minister of the Gospel, and much beloved by his congregation. He was pastor of Trinity Chapel, and it will be hard to fill the gap made in the church by his removal.

BOMBAY THE CAPITAL. -The fact that Bombay is the natural (Europe) port for all India, stares every one in the face from every map; and the experience of every man, and especially of every lady in India, proves that the misery of travelling by dak, which railway would terminate for ever, is the greatest evil that is to be encountered in coming to the interior of India from England, or in coming to the interior from the coast, on the trip homewards. Moreover, the Government have declared, in answer Mr. Riddell's representations, that we shall have four Bombay mails (in place of two) every month, as soon as the railway is completed. What, then, so pressing for the relief of travellers, and the benefit of residents as the insertion of the missing link between Allahabad and Jubbulpoor? Lahore, Simla, Mussoorie, Delhi, Agra, Meerut, Bareilly, Futtehghur, Gwalior, Cawnpore, Lucknow, Allahabad, Mirzapore, Benares, Patna, are fifteen principal places which occur to us, on a hasty enumeration, as directly interested in the speedy completion of the railway from Allahabad to Bombay; and we trust they will all petition their respective Governments for the boon of a prompt filling up of the gulf which yawns between Jubbulpoor and Allahabad, and is only less hateful to us than that over which "they which would pass from hence to you, cannot; neither can they pass to us, that you, cannot; nettner can they pass to us, that would come from thence." All travellers from twelve of the fifteen "cities," and their vicinity, travel,—with a few trifling exceptions which will cease when the railway reaches Lahore,—by Allahabad. When arrived there they proceed to Calcutta either by the hot, slow, and comfortless river steamers, or by the quicker dak gharries, at the peril of their necks and the certain sacrifice of their comfort. From Calcutta travellers go by the ill-odoured P. and O. steamers, all a-down the east coast of India, calling at Madras and at Ceylon, and then up again, on the west, nearly the same distance, -a detestable and needless roundabout, all owing to the necessity for embarking at Calcutta. Were travellers able, on the contrary, to turn off westwards from the great pass of all Upper India-Allahabad-to Bombay, by railway, the misery of Indian travelling would cease then and there. They would be transported to Bombay in thirty-six hours easily and comfortably, and they would be saved the being dragged wretchedly and uselessly through the dirt for many hundreds of miles, backwards and forwards, by ways and places which no one on his way to Fatherland wants or wishes to go near .- Hills.

GUIDE TO COTTON CULTIVATION .- The Bombay Government have requested W. R. Cassels, Esq., of the firm of Messrs, Peel, Cassels and Co., to prepare a work on the history of the cotton cultivation and trade in this presidency. Government want a well-digested and well-written book on the subject for future reference, as well as for the information and guidance of capitalists at home who might wish to assist in the production in India of this very necessary staple. Mr. Cassel is reputed to be a master of the subject in all its commercial bearings, and a systematic, clear, and vigorous writer. Of course all the materials for such a work, possessed by Government and by the Chamber of Commerce, will be at once placed at Mr. Cassel's disposal.

SATTARA is shortly to be again made a military station. It is rumoured that more Europeans will be added to the strength there, and a Native Infantry regiment will be stationed there as soon as the two regiments at present on their road

The amount of the Income-tax which they had been assessed to pay, has been contri-buted by the people of the Nurriad village and paid into the Collector's treasury.

IMPORTS (Bombay, August 27).—Cotton Piece Goods.—Grey Shirtings have been extensively inquired for, though realising less than the cost prices of Manchester. £1 in. cloth of 6 and 7 lbs. weight shows a slight improvement in value; 5½ to 5½ lbs. rather steady at full prices; the heavier weights are quoted lower; 45 in. of all weights, with the exception of one or two favourite makes, shows a decline in price; 50 and 54 in. is inquired at reduced rates. Grey Long-cloths are very dull, and trifling sales in cloth of 8 lbs. and npwards have transpired at easer rates. Grey T. Cloths maintain former prices, and can be moved in moderate quantities. Grey Cambrics are in fair inquiry and prices well maintained. Bleached Goods have been in moderate demand, and largely dealt in. There is an inquiry for tavourite makes of Shirtings, and medium qualities of Jacconets, as well as for Dimitices of the better kinds for local consumption. Malapollanis, owing to the lightness of stocks, are readily saleable, while Brocades, Twills, and Dhotees are neglected. Suitable descriptions of Lappets, adapted for local consumption, are saleable at former rates. Yarus.—The market exhibits an improvement; there has been an increased demand for both Mule and Water Twists since our last report, and prices show an advance of one-eighth to one-fourth of an anna. Dyed Yarns are dull, and without transactions. Turkey Red Yarn is quiet, at steady rates. Metals.—Copper has improved indemand, and both Braziers and Sheathing have advanced in price. It is thought the market will recoil, as the stocks in second hands are very large. Yellow Metal remains dull. Iron also shows an improvement, a better demand exists for both British and Swedish Bars, though the prices of the former close a little higher. Sheets have changed hands pretty freely. Nail Rods, round and square, have not been much asked for, and quotations remain as before.

Exports (Bombay, August 27).—Cardamoms and Cassia main as before.

Exports (Bombay, August 27).—Cardamoms and Cassia Lignea are as last advised. Coffee.—Small arrivals of Mocha have taken place, for which Rs. 14-8 to Rs. 16 per maund is demanded. Malabar is nominally unadtered. Cotton, owing to the very indifferent selection of the small available supplies, as well as to the dangerously high level which prices have attained, is but sparingly dealt in. The following are the nominal quotations of the day:—Strat and Broach, Rs. 170 to 172; Dhollera and Blowauggur, Rs. 170 to 172; Comrawuttee, Rs. 155 to 158; Akote, Rs. 167 to 168; and Dharwar Sawginned, Rs. 187 to 188, per cannel of 784 lbs. Seeds are quoted as previously. In other kinds of produce there is nothing doing of consequence.

THE STRAITS.

SINGAPORE, August 6 .- His Siamese Majesty's steamers, consisting of the Volant, Enemy Chaser and Meteor, arrived here on the 20th July, with their Royal Highnesses Prince Krom Mun Visnunarth Nibhadpoon, second son, and Prince Gaga-nang Yugol, fifth son, of his Majesty the First King of Siam, the Siamese Prime Minister, Chauphya Sri Suriwongs Samuh Phra Kralahome, and other Siamese notables on board. The princes landed on the following evening under the usual found the Mawas." salutes. The royal and noble visitors have been creating some sensation in our streets by their unusual appearance, and the storekeepers have no doubt been reaping a considerable harvest from the name of Mr. W. E. Comyn, of Cheltenham the extensive purchases of all kinds of articles College, has been placed on the list of successful which the Siamese have been making. by them. They will doubtless astonish their stayat-home acquaintances on their return to Bangkok with the display of the novel articles of apparel they have acquired during their voyage.

SARAWAK, July 21.—The Chinese and Malay traders are busy fitting out every available boat for the purpose of proceeding to Muka and Oya for sago. Sir James Brooke is expected to return to Sarawak from Muka at the end of the month. At Muka everything is quiet; the natives are occupied in preparing sago for the market, and industry and content are the order of the day.

NETHERLANDS INDIA .- By the Dutch mail steamer Batavia, we (Singapore Free Press) have Java papers to the 31st of July. The heavy and continued rains were producing much damage on the sugar estates, and not less to the second crops of rice, rendering the efforts which were being made in the previously inundated districts to avert the threatened scarcity, by replanting the fields, of no avail. The distress thereby likely to be produced will probably be aggravated by an increasing want of the means of transport, partly caused by a decrease of draught cattle, and partly by the increase of the produce to be carried away. The numerous planters in the interior cannot send down their sugar and coffee to the coast, from the complete absence of the means of transport. The rice which the Government wishes to send to these places where a total want of food prevails can scarcely be taken there from the same cause. And even when this difficulty is overcome, in some cases the cost of transport is equal to the value of the article conveyed. It has been proposed to apply the unexpended portion of the subscriptions for the relief of these districts, in purchasing draught cattle and carts, in order to facilitate the transport of provisions for the next few months when the famine may be expected to be most severe. The sad state of affairs in Banjermassing is becoming daily more apparent. Private letters give most melancholy details regarding the unsuccessful expedition of Major Schuak against Antassari, the leader of the insurgents. Gut of ninety men of whom the column was composed, six were killed and upwards of thirty wounded. On the difficult return march the diminished column for the two last days was entirely without food. The cause of this misfortune is not attributable to Major Schuak or his brave band, but only to the chiefs of Kuter and Becompay having withheld the assistance which they had promised. A great fault in the operations in Banjermassing is said to be made in scattering the troops in parties in isolated posts, so that no moveable army can be formed ready at any moment to take the field.

GORILLAS IN BORNEO.—The Straits Times draws attention to the great similarity in the animals as well as in climate and scenery between the Gorilla country described by M. de Chaillu and the Eastern Archipelago which lies in the same latitude. The ants, wasps, and sandily correspond. All the statements of the natives of Sumstra and Borneo agree in the fact that there is an animal, not the Ourang-Outang, thus described by a recent traveller :- " Had another palaver with the hulu men about the Mawas, and they gave me almost word for word the same story as the l'akan Baru people. All insist that it is not an orang utan-that is, not a monkey, but a man covered with black hair, standing as high as a man, with the toes turned inwards, and the bone of the forearm bare and sharp-with this it can cut down trees, and a single blow is sufficient to kill a man. They were first seen by the sea Malays, some ten years ago, when the high price of gutta percha induced whole villages to turn out into the jungle for the purpose of gathering it, and in the deepest and densest covers of the interior they

SUPPLY OF INDIAN COTTON TO ENGLAND. (From the Calcutta Government Gazette, Aug. 10.) Resolution by the Governor-general in Council, dated Aug. 9, 1861.)

1. In a Resolution of Feb. 28 last the Govt. of

In the discussions which have since taken place,

In the discussions which have since taken place, the best informed authorities on this great riational question have insisted on the fact that, while the area of land under cotton cultivation in India is capable of great and rapid extension under the stimu-lus of higher prices, the quality of the cotton pro-duced is less easily susceptible of improvement, and that it is most important to direct the attention of all parties interested in the cultivation to improve-ment of the quality while maintaining, and, it possiment of the quarry while maintaining, and, it possible, increasing the average yield per acre of the general cotton crop of the country.

2. It has been suggested that the Government of India might usefully aid in this work, without infringing the first rule* laid down in the resolution of the 20th February last.

The Governor-general in Council believes that the 20th February last.

The Governor-general in Council believes that observance of this rule is necessary to any sound and permanent improvement; but, as far as can be done without infringing it, H.E. in Council desires that nothing be omitted on the part of Government which can aid in arousing the attention of India to the great questions involved in any scarcity of the raw material for our English manufactures—questions the interest of which is deepened as each sucraw material for our English manufactures—questions the interest of which is deepened as each successive mail brings fresh evidence that the scarcity may be more than temporary.

3. H.E. in Council believes that much may be effected even in those older Cotton Districts of India which have long contributed an important share of the cotton of the lower qualities employed in our English manufactures. But it is of still greater im-portance to aid and expedite the solution of the doubts which exist as to the best soils and climates and modes of cultivation for cotton in those districts whence, heretofore there has been little, if any, export of cotton to Europe.

4. In furtherance of these views the Gov. gen. in Council has resolved to offer prizes for the production of cotton during the two next years, that is to say, in the current season of 1861-62, and in the sub-say, in the current season of 1601-02, and in the subsequent season of 1862-63.

Three prizes of ten thousand rupees each will be given in each season—one in the Presidency of Fort William, one in the Presidency of Madras, and one in the Presidency of Bombay.

FFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE REGARDING THE CIRCULATION OF THE "NIL DUR-PAN." OFFICIAL

(From the Calcutta Govt. Gazette, Aug. 10.) Minute by the Hon. J. P. Grant, dated June 19, 1861.

Minute by the Hon. J. P. Grant, dated June 19, 1861. I wish to place upon record, for the information of H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council, the facts connected with the circulation of a translation of a Bengalee play called "Nil Durpan," with reference to a late correspondence with Mr. Fergusson, the sec. of the Landholders' and Commercial Association (lately called the Indigo Planters' Association), and to a late trial in the Supreme Court in which Mr. Manuel, the printer of that translation, was prosecuted by the editor or proprietor of a newspaper for libel. The words charged as libellous, I understand, are not in the play, but in a preface by the author prefixed to the play.

The issue of the pamphlet in question in any manner was not by my order, or with my knowledge, and I never saw it, or knew a word that was in it. until it had been circulated in the manner described by Mr. Fergusson.

3. The issue was made through a very unfortunate error of the late Secretary. Mr. Seton-Karr, several months ago, mentioned to me that a curious Bengalee play had been written, the subject of which indigo—a genuine native production—a translation of which might be made by a private hand, and some copies printed off at a trifling cost. I wished to see copies printed off at a triffing cost. I wished to see the work partly as a curiosity, and partly because I thought it likely that it would show what the real popular feeling was on the subject better than any ning clse.
4. I thought it probable that, beside any value the work might have, as a literary curiosity, it might prove to be such that a few copies might with propriety be privately given to friends in official and private positions, with the same object as that which made me wish for an opportunity of seeing what the work was like myself.

5. I have always been of opinion that, consider-on state of more than semi-isolation from all classes of native society, public functionaries in India have been habitually too regardless of those depths of native feeling which do not show upon the surface, and too habitually careless of all those means of information which are available to us for ascertaining them. Popular songs everywhere, and, in Bengal, popular native plays, are amongst the most patent, and most neglected, of those means. I have always attributed our unforewarned condition, when the shock of 1857 occurred, to this popular effect. I did not on this occasion regard the matter as one of importance; but still the opportunity seemed a good one of knowing how natives spoke of the indigo question amongst themselves, when they had no European to please or to displease by opening their minds.

6. Mr. Seton-Karr's ideas on this point were the same as mine, and I had thought it was understood, when our conversation on the subject was understood, that the translation and the printing of a few copies were to be wholly a private affair.

7. I do not believe I ever heard a word more about the matter till a copy of the printed publication was sent to me at Parishnath, without any accompanying letter, shortly before an accident happened to my camp there, which obliged me to return for two or three weeks to Calcutta.

* 1. That no measure which places Government in the position of the private capitalist, cultivator, or speculator, or which in any way interferes with private enterprise, can be otherwise than permanently injurious in itself, and detrimental to the object in view.

Therefore, all attempts to stimulate cultivation or labour by any exertion of Government authority, directly or indirectly, are out of the question.

any exertion to the question.

The same objection will apply to model farms and experimental cultivation conducted by officers of Government.

8. On my first interview with the secretary, which as before the excitement caused by the official circulation of the pamphlet had shown itself, I found that he had been under some impression that the translation and printing was to be a Government Act, paid for by Government, which impression I immediately corrected. I found also that the pamphlet had been circulated, and circulated under official frank, which was past remedy.

9. It is obvious, and the point is candidly admitted and deeply regretted by the late secretary, that, even upon his understanding of the affair, not a copy should have been circulated till the Lieutenant-governor had seen the work and authorised its circula-tion. Had this error not been fallen into, unad-visedly, the secretary's mistaken impression would have had no ill consequences.

10. The occurence is extremely unfortunate, and has distressed me beyond measure. It has excited irritation, when it was an object to allay irritation. But before I was made aware of it, the mischief was done. (Signed) J. P. GRANT. (Signed)

From E. H. Lushington, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, to the Secretary to the Government of India, in the Home Department, —(No. 2,029a, dated July 30, 1861.)
Sir,—In continuation of my letter No. 1,615a, dated the 22nd ultimo, I am directed to forward for submission to his Excellency the Governor-General in Council, the accompanying copy of a Minute by the Lieutenant-Governor, of this date, together with a copy of a letter from Mr. W. S. Seton-Karr, Legis-lative Member for Bengal, and the enclosure there in referred to.

From W. S. Seton-Karr, Esq., Legislative Member for Bengal, to E. H. Lushington, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal,—(dated Calcutts, to the Government of Bengal,—(dated Calcutta, the 29th July, 1861.)

Sir,—As in the late trial of the Rev. Mr. Long, before the Supreme Court, there was mention, in the evidence, of the Bengal Office, and allusion was made to my orders as secretary, I think it right to lay before the Lieutenant-governor an official state—each treatment of the country ment regarding my connection with the drama called the "Nil Durpan."

2. I take this opportunity of enclosing a copy of the Englishman newspaper, of this day's date, con-taining an explanation which I have thought right I make public at as early a date as possible, and I solicit the Lieutenant-governor's attentive perusal

of the same.

3. The printed statement in question is intended to clear up charges of unfair dealing, and of personal hostility to the planters, made against me; to make such explanation as was due to persons who felt themselves aggrieved by the publication; and to explain some passages in the play itself, which I cannot but think have been greatly misrepresented. What I know of the history of this drama will be found in my printed statement; and I can only add thereto, that the Rev. Mr. Long has been known to me and others as having, for years, devoted his attention to the vernacular literature of Bengal, and to the various publications which issue from the native press, and circulate among the middle and native press, and circulate among the middle and lower orders, to an extent of which very few Europeans are aware.

4. Publications on divers social questions of interest have been by him brought to the notice of the authorities, of which a record will be found in the Bengal Office.

5. I believe that, at this period of Indian history, no one will seriously dispute the paramount importance of the Government of the country being kept well informed of the state of feeling amongst natives, as shown by their periodical and other versional all literatures. 6. I mentioned the work to the Lieut.-Governor, in the belief, as just expressed, that it was my duty to bring to his notice all native publications illustrative of popular feeling. The Lieut.-Governor, as well as other persons, expressed a desire to see a translation of this drama, and Mr. Long informed me that a native was willing to translate it. A translation was accordingly made under my sanction.

translation was accordingly made under my sanction.

7. I think I am correct in stating that up to this point all I had done was also with the knowledge and sanction of the Lieut.-Governor. He approved of my noticing the work, and of the act of translation, and of the printing; but he never intended that so large a number as five hundred copies should be struck off. I believe that he contemplated that a small number of copies should be printed to be a small number of copies should be printed, to be dealt with as he might think fit.

8. When the work of translation and printing was

8. When the work of translation and printing was completed, the copies were brought to my office, and Mr. Long gave me the names of several persons to whom he was desirous that the work should be sent; other names were also added by me to the list, and I must here distinctly repeat, what I have avowed already, that the circulation under the official frank took rives with my sanction and knowledge and took place with my sanction and knowledge, and without that of the Lieut.-governor. I would observe that copies of this translation were sent to the persons to whom copies of printed official documents about the indigo crisis had been sent. Unfortunately, I did not reflect that it was one thing to send off copies of official documents printed by order of Government, and therefore generally available for distribution or even sale, for any persons requiring them, and another thing to send off copies of a translation of a native play, which had not been regularly submitted to the Lieut. governor, but merely mentioned in the course of conversation as to the head of the Government.

9. Nor can I refuse to admit that this course may seem to place the Government of Bengal in the position of having acted apparently without due consideration for the Government of India, and that H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council may find in this grounds for grave complaint. This is a subject of deep regret to me, but I cannot do otherwise than take the blame of this proceeding, and of its consequences, entirely on myself.

10. I had not, however, the least intention of showing the least disrespect either to the Government of Bengal or to the Government of India; and I may remark, that no mention of the "Nil Durpan' has been made in any public discussion in England has been made in any public discussion in England, while it is not yet known that the copies have arrived at their destination.

11 I must again urge that the duty of bringing such publications as the "Nil Durpan" or any other such publications, to the notice of Government, is one which it behoves every officer not to neglect, and that in the situation of secretary I should not have been invested in disregarding the work. My and that in the situation of secretary I should not have been justified in disregarding the work. My error lay in not examining it more carefully before issue; and in issuing it, in the manner I did, without the knowledge of the Lieutenant-governor.

12. I take this opportunity of placing on record the fact, that, after the termination of the trial of Mr. Long, I considered, looking to all that had taken also that the retection have of the property than the second content of the property that the second content of the property than the second content of the property that the second content of the property than the property than the second content of the property than the property that the property than the property than the property that th place, that the retention by me of my appointment might be a source of embarrassment to the Government which I have the honour to serve, and in this view I deemed it my duty, on Thursday, the 25th instant, or the day after the sentence, to place the resignation of my present appointment as Legislative Member for Bengal at the disposal of the Lieutenant-governor, as well as to renounce my right to revert to my previous appointment as secretary to Government, which had been reserved to me in the event of changes taking place in the constitution of the power which I then placed in his hands.

18. But his Honour did not see reason to act on the power which I then placed in his hands.

14. I now leave the subject in the hands of the Govt., and the Lieut.gov. will probably do me the justice to believe that, if I say no more on the subject, it is not because I do not deeply regret the general irritation which has been excited, the attacks to which the Govt. has been exposed, and the consequences to a very earnest zealous, and singlecannot but feel the deepest sympathy.

Minute by the Hon. J. P. Grant, dated the 30th
July, 1861.

A copy of Mr. Seton Karr's letter should be sent up to his Excellency the Governor-general in Counthe dovernor-general in Countries in mediately, with the enclosed newspaper * containing his published statement, in continuation of the letter to that Government enclosing my minute of the 19th of June last.

of the 19th of June last.

Mr. Seton-Karr's narrative correctly describes the circumstances. He candidly acknowledges the serious error committed, but I am sure that, in circulating the translation in question, he did not contemplate either giving offence to any class, or placing the Government in a false position. In putting the resignation of his office of member of the Legislative Council at the disposal of Government, he has acted the part of an honourable and high-minded man, consistently with his own established character. I did not think that the public interests would be served by acting upon the power thus placed in my hands; but my judgment does not affect the case, so far as Mr. Seton-Karr's disinterested conduct is concerned. (Signed) J. P. Grant.

Resolution by the Gov. gen. in Council—(dated the 8th August, 1861).

On the 22nd of June the Lieut. gov. of Bengal submitted to the Gov. gen. in Council his Honour's minute of the 19th of June, and a correspondence with the Landholders' and Commercial Association, relative to the circulation, under official frank, of a translation of the "Nil Durpan," a Bengalee drama on the subject of indigo cultivation.

In one of their letters the association indicated an intention, under certain contingencies, to appeal to intention, under certain contingencies, to appeal to the Government of India; and the announcement of this intention, combined with the subsequent adoption of legal proceedings by the association, rendered it undesirable for the Gov. gen. in Council to enter on the questions raised with any view to their final disposal, even had the case been fully before the Gov. of India ne Govt. of India.

His Honour's Minute was therefore transmitted to the Secretary of State, without the expression of any opinion by the Governor-general in Council.

His Honour now forwards a copy of a further mi-nute by himself, in a letter from Mr. Setou-Karr, who was, when the occurrences referred to took place, secretary to the Government of Bengal. It encloses a statement which that gentleman has, with permission, published relative to his share in the translation and circulation of the drama.

The whole transaction has, in the mean time, formed the subject of two trials in the supreme court. The printer has been fined, and the Rev. Mr. Long, who superintended the translation of the work, and took part in the other proceedings com-plained of by the landholders' and commercial association, has been fined and imprisoned by sentence f the supreme court.

No appeal has yet been received by the Govern-

No appeal has yet been received by the Government of India from the landowners' and commercial association, and no further legal steps have, as far as is known, been taken by that body. But their case is stated fully in the published proceedings of the trials, and there is no reason why the Government of India should longer delay to express its opinion on an act of a high officer of the Government of Bengal, which has been openly challenged as incompatible with the duty of a public servant.

The work itself, and the meaning and bearing of the passages complained of, have been made the subject of formal judicial inquiry and decision in the of formal judicial inquiry and decision in the supreme court

It would therefore be unbecoming for the Government of India to discuss any questions connected with the character of the work.

But, while expressing no opinion regarding the work itself, and willingly accepting the most favourable interpretation of it; while feeling the fullest and most unreserved confidence in the assurance of Mr. Seton-Karr, that the passages complained of never presented themselves to his mind as capable of being read in the light in which they have apor being read in the light in which they have appeared to the parties who are aggrieved by them; and while utterly discarding all imputation of hostility to those parties in an officer who had lately discharged, in an impartial and conciliatory spirit, functions almost judicial in their bearing upon the interests of the indigo planters of Lower Bengal, the Governor-general in Council cannot but say that the most complete vindication of the passages impugned would go but a small way to lessen the repugned would go but a small way to lessen the regret with which he views the whole proceeding. His Honour the Lieut. gov., in sanctioning the translation of the play, had no knowledge that it contained any passages of the circulation of which any person, or body of persons, could suppose that they had a right to complain. He was not aware of the steps taken to distribute the translation until it was too late to prevent the distribution. And here the Gov. gen, in Council can find nothing to regret in what his Honour did, unless it be that the examination, and, if necessary, the translation or circulation of an original vernacular work, throwing light on any political question, was not undertaken as a part of a regular system, and subjected to all the checks of supervision usual in any department of the ordinary administration.

But H.E. in Council cannot impute blame to the Government of Bengal that this has not been done, for the subject of systematically and officially re-porting on the publications of the native press is one the importance of which had been repeatedly noticed by his Honour, and regarding which, but for more pressing calls on his attention, some definite and regular course would doubtless, ere now, have been

It is, however, a subject of great regret to the Governor general in Council that, after the peculiar circumstances of the distribution of this work, under circumstances of the distribution of this work, under the official frank of the Government of Bengal, were brought to his Honour's notice by the Landholders' and Commercial Association, his Honour confined himself to disavowing and disapproving the unau-thorised proceedings of the Secretary to the Bengal Government. It is possible that his Honour was as imperfectly informed as the Government of India has till lately been, as to the particulars of the case. But these particulars ought, in the opinion of the Governor general in Council, to have been searched out out by the Government of Bengal, and where condemnation from the head of that Government was due, it should have followed at once, in such manner as to mark unmistakeably his Honour's disleasure, and to render it impossible to implicate his Government in acts which were not only unauthoriced but quite unjustifiable.

The Governor General in Council is well aware that the intimation conveyed in the letter from the Landholders' and Commercial Association, that any information given by the Lieutenant-go-vernor would be made use of to prosecute, "with the utmost rigour of the law," the parties con-cerned, was a sufficient reason why his Honour should not prejudice the rights of possible parties in the case, by communicating information which he was warned might be used in legal proceedings, the exact nature and extent of which could only be

But the Gov. gen. in Council does not doubt that the Lieut. gov.'s displeasure might have been emphatically signified without entailing this or any other evil consequence; indeed H.E. in Council believes that the consequences would have been good rather than evil; and, at all events, it was incumbent on his Honour to lay the case fully before the Gov. gen. in Council, in order that H.E. in Council might pass his judgment upon acts which, besides being a breach of the duty of a secretary to the Govt. of Bengal, trenched upon the authority of the Govt. of India.

It appears from the published proceedings of the trial of the Rev. Mr. Long, that, although no copies of the translated pamphlet have yet been officially furnished to the Government of India, and although none were supplied to the individual members of that Government until they were applied for after the distribution had become the subject of public discussion, numerous copies had been sent, as if by the authority of the Government of Bengal, to members authority of the Government of Bengal, to members of Parliament and public bodies in England, to some parties at a distance in this country, and, to the amount of no less than twenty copies, to the office of the Secretary of State in London. More than this could not have been done to give emphasis and currency to the publication of opinions endorsed by the Government of India. Nevertheless, the most important features of the apparent sanction thus given to the circulation of the pamphlet have only become known to the Government of India through the published reports of the trials.

This course, even if it had been authorised by the Lieutenant-governor, would have been a grave irregularity, and in the case of a document having an important bearing on great controversial questions, would not have been excusable as an inadvertence. It would have evinced a disregard of the relative

It would have evinced a disregard of the relative positions of the Government of Bengal, the Governorgeneral in Council, and the Secretary of State, and would have called for prompt notice by the Government of India.

The proceeding, however, was not only unauthorised by, but unknown to his Honour, and remains the act of the secretary, and one for which Mr. Seton-Karr admits that he, and he alone, is respon-

Mr. Scton-Karr now expresses his regret that the Govt of Bengal should, by his unauthorised circulation of the pamphlet, have been placed in the position of the namphlet, have been placed in the position of having acted, apparently without due consideration for the Govt. of India; but no explanation or apology is offered by him for having omitted to impart to the latter Govt. information which he regarded as of paramount importance to it, and the preparation of which in an English form had been ustified by him, and very properly justified, on that ground. He is, therefore, chargeable not only with an unwarrantable assumption and indiscreet exercise of an authority which did not belong to him, but with a neglect of duty which it is difficult to reconcile with the motives that led him to such an assumption. sumption.

The Gov. gen. in Council could have wished that The Gov. gen. in Council could have wished that these errors had been noticed by his Honour the Lieut.-gov. with the gravity which they deserve, as very serious infractions of the Secretary's duty. H.E. in Council is fully sensible that to have caused, even by inadvertence, a great public scandal; to have thereby embittered the strife of parties and classes; to have wounded, however unintentionally, the feelings of many of his fellow-countrymen; and to have involved others in criminal prosecution and musibinvolved others in criminal prosecution and punishment, are, of themselves, penalties as severe as can well be suffered by a zealous and high-minded public servant, who has at heart the honour of that Governservant, who has at heart the honour of that Government which, for many years, he has served with the highest credit, and which has lately placed him in the foremost rank of its public functionaries. Nor does the Gov. gen. in Council forget that regret for all this has been expressed by Mr. Seton-Karr in a most honourable spirit, and that he has becomingly tendered to the Lieut.-gov. the resignation of his office.

But H.E. in Council cannot consider that the Government is thereby absolved from the duty of making sure that the important ministerial functions of the Sec. to the Govt. of Bengal shall not be resumed by an officer by whom, from whatever cause, they have been exercised with grievous indiscretion; and in this view it is decidedly the opinion of the Gov. gen. in Council that, when Mr. Seton-Karr shall no longer have to discharge the duties of his present position in the Legislative Council, he should not be allowed to return to the office of Sec. to the Gov. of allowed to return to the office of Sec. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Ordered, that a copy of the foregoing resolution be communicated to the Govt. of Bengal, in reply to letter No. 2,029a, dated the 30th ult.

MR. LAING AT MANCHESTER.

On Thursday morning the Indian Finance Minister placed himself in close contact with the concentrated wisdom of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, the Cotton Supply Association, and the Manchester Cotton Supply Company, and prepared to receive their suggestions for the future better government of India. After a due exchange of condolences, compliments, and congratulations, very proper stress was laid upon the necessity of improving internal communication, and of introducing an equitable law for the enforcement of contracts between the capitalist and the cultivator. Thus far all parties are agreed, but what chiefly afflicts the men of Lancashire is the complicated system of land tenures, which they insist should be entirely remodelled, though after what fashion they do not condescend to explain. Their panacea for all the ills to which India is liable appears to be the redemption of the Land-tax at ten to fifteen years' purchase, but they seem to be ignorant of the fact that it would even then be very difficult for Europeans to purchase contiguous lots, so as to form an estate of tolerable extent. No doubt the sale of waste lands might prove beneficial in the course of years, after a labouring population had been brought to them, but at present labour is both scarce and comparatively high priced, and now that the French are admitted into our very limited labour market as competitors, it is not likely to become either cheaper or more plentiful. But if the suggestions of the Manchester manufacturers were crude, hazy, and unpractical, still less satisfactory was the reply of the Minister of Finance. After sketching the progress of our Indian Empire from the Black Hole of Calcutta, and dwelling more at large upon the sepoy mutiny, the honorable gentleman at length touched upon the financial crisis, and dry land began to appear. When he arrived in India, hardly nine month's ago, nothing could be more gloomy than the prospect that met his eyes on all sides. The funded debt had increased in three years to the extent of thirty-eight millions, while the deficit for the current year was expected to exceed six millions. The danger, however, was so great that it inspired the resolution that was required to confront and overcome it. "The French saying, Aide-toi et le cièl t'aidera was never," he continued, "better exemplified than in this case. The moment the Government applied themselves in earnest to the work of reduction the tide seemed to turn, and they had a complete run of luck." The rains, as Mr. Laing elegantly expresses it, fell in the very "Lick of and fidgety interference of a Secretary of State. time," so that the famine was confined within however able and conscientious.

up to an unprecedented height-not a word, though, of its subsequent depression; and other sources of revenue proved more productive than had been expected. The result was, he had the assurance to say, that he was able to present a budget in which not only was the expenditure brought within the limits of the revenue, but an additional sum of half a million actually provided for public works. Now, this budget happened to be published in April some months before a single drop of rain could have fallen, and it is very certain that the equilibrium will not be attained in the present year. However, it is mainly to test the accuracy of his own estimates that he is about very shortly to return to the East, where we trust he will perfect the machinery of finance so as to avoid the scandalous errors that have hitherto cast such discredit on the Indian Government. Alluding to the reductions that have been made in the military department, Mr. Laing made the extraordinary and tolerably vague statement that until very recently from 500,000 to 1,000,000 natives of India subsisted by the profession of arms, but that now "there would not be more than 120,000 or 150,000 natives holding arms in their hands, and whose object in living was rapine and slaughter." We presume this is nothing more than a rhetorical artifice, for it cannot seriously be said that the object of our Native army is to live by rapine and slaughter-its true object rather being to prevent those disagreeable contingencies. But Mr. Laing must have been aware that he was talking unmitigated nonsense when he spoke of this reduction of the Native army as likely to diminish "the tendency to manufacture wars." A gentleman who had just favoured his hearers with a succinct history of the rise and progress of the British Empire in the East could hardly have been ignorant of the fact that there was nothing to which the late rulers of India were more averse than to a state of warfare. Whenever they reluctantly consented to increase their forces it was always with a view to avert the chance of being involved in hostilities with ambitious and suspicious neighbours. It was no part of their policy to maintain half a million of men by rapine and slaughter. In point of fact, the forces in their pay consisted of, in round numbers, 50,000 Europeans and 230,000 Natives, besides some 33,000 belonging to the different contingents. The soldiery of the independent States were estimated at about 400,000, so that altogether there may have been 700,000 men in all India "subsisting by the profession of arms;" but Mr. Laing omits from his present computation the forces in the pay of Native princes, and which are probably not much under a quarter of a million.

We fully agree with Mr. Laing that if Indiais ever to be really a source of strength and wealth to England it must be governed in India, and not from Europe. The less Ministers and Parliament interfere with the local Government the better will it be for India in the long run. Some petty abuses, indeed, may creep in, but which may be patiently endured in place of the greater inconveniences sure to result from over legislation, and from the incessant #### certain boundaries; the price of opium ran | MR. MONTRESOR AND THE INDIGO PLANTERS.

In a recent number of this journal we had occasion to notice the evident bias in favour of the ryots, evinced by the general tendency of Mr. Montresor's report on the state of affairs in the Nuddea district. This apparent partiality and one-sidedness has since been explained. though by no means in a manner creditable to the Bengal Government. Having honestly confessed his ignorance of Zemindarce matters, and consequently his incompetence to judge correctly of the questions then disputed in Lower Bengal, Mr. Montresor was provided with an associate to guide him through the difficulties of his exceptional position. As it was thus proved, on his own showing, that he was not the fittest person for such an appointment, it might have been supposed that without any disparagement to his character he would at once have been set aside, and a better qualified magistrate chosen in his place. But such a supposition betrays an entire ignorance of the mode of thought and action peculiar to the Bengal Government; the professed object being to obtain reliable information as to the causes and extent of the ruinous disputes between landlords and tenants, selection was made of an official who candidly acknowledged his ignorance of the laws and usages pertaining to the questions at issue. To obviate this objection, he was allowed the use of "a coach" to get up the points of which he himself knew nothing, and for this purpose an uncovenanted servant was chosen, of the name of Reily, whose hostility to the planters had been displayed in his examination before the Indigo Commission. After this, it is not very surprising that the Report submitted to the Lieutenant-governor should have been drawn up in the teeth of facts, and in direct opposition to the truth. Its inaccuracies and misstatements have now, however, been clearly shown up and refuted by two gentlemen of unimpeachable character-Mr. James Hills, of Neechindipore and Mr. Larmour, the manager of the Bengal Indigo Company-who bring to the discussion of the subject that complete familiarity with all its details, of which Mr. Montresor was avowedly destitute, and with which his adviser took care not to supply him. No wonder that such a Government should be stigmatised by the Times as the most insane that the world has ever seen.

Let us now quickly glance at Mr. Hills' exposure of the Special Commissioner's misstatements. In the first place, Mr. Montresor mentions that he was glad to learn from this gentleman that he had no particular complaint to make as regarded the collection of rents within his Zemindaree. So far from this being the case, Mr. Hills affirms that he stated both to the Lieutenant-governor and to the Commissioner that an unusually large amount of rent was due to him by his ryots, not less indeed than 68,536 rupees. Mr. Montresor then makes the startling assertion that on his arrival at Damoorhoodah a number of rvots waited upon him and asked him to receive in advance their rents for the ensuing year. The fact is not denied, but the explanation of it affords another proof of the duplicity and low cunning of the natives. The real state of the case was this.—The villagers in question were heavily in arrears on account of the past year. and had represented themselves as unable to make up the deficiency, and yet they have actually money enough in hand to pay the next year's rent in advance. The anomaly does not appear to have been observed by the Commissioner, though it was one that would have been sufficiently obvious to an unprejudiced mind. The mystery is easily explained. They had received due notice that a slight increase would be made upon their rents for the ensuing year, and it was in order to evade this that they so eagerly requested Mr. Montresor to take their money and carry it to their credit "in accordance with the receipts they held for the year just closed." That gentleman, indeed, does attempt in a subsequent letter to explain this strange desire on the part of Bengalee ryots to pay rent in advance, by saying that certain illegal cesses had been made against them during the past year, a repetition of which they were anxious to avoid. This reason may possibly have been given by the ryots, but as a matter of fact no such unjust claims had been made. The Commissioner goes on to observe that Mr. Hills preferred no complaints before him for the recovery of rent; and this was true, because the ryots had promised to pay up in a few days as soon as they heard that a special magistrate was coming to compel them to do so. As soon, however, as that official had turned his back upon the district, they receded from their engagements, and have left Mr. Hills to obtain his remedy in the Law Courts.

In addition to the lands held under a fixed annual rental, the ryots frequently hire a portion of the lands in the proprietor's own hands, for the purpose of cultivating some particular crop. It, of course, sometimes happens that they have to pay rent for fields that are lying fallow, and for this reason they rather avoid taking large farms on a fixed rental, preferring to hire from their landlord a part of his unlet lands, for which they pay according to actual measurement, and only for the time it is under cultivation. This is known as the ootbundee tenure, and is clearly to the interest of the cultivator rather than of the landlord. Mr. Hills himself says that he would prefer letting the whole of his lands as jumma, or at a fixed rental, excepting the quantity he might require for the cultivation of indigo by his own labourers, as he would thereby have a certain income free from the expenses of annual measurement and other obvious annoyances. Mr. Montresor, however, asserts that the ryots are somehow entitled by usage to cultivate, even without the landlord's permission, what portions they please of the ootbundee land, but the absurdity of such a statement is manifest. for who, in that case, would ever hire lands for which he must pay whether under cultivation or lying fallow? He further states that "the length of time since these lands were defined renders it a difficult task to distinguish them from the jumma lands." This also is erroneous, and wholly opposed to the truth, for every few years-five, seven, or ten-the whole village is measured, and "all kinds of lands, jumma, ootbundee, lakhiraj, culturable fallow, unculturable fallow, beels, ditches, holes and trees, are distinctly noted." Besides, the ootbundee lands are measured every year while the crops are standing, so that all mistake as regards them is simply impossible. These village, assisted by the Halsannah—a local indigo. Individually they are as anxious as the oldest and most respectable inhabitantsand the cultivators themselves. Nothing, surely, can be more fair towards the ryots, and these measurements "have always hitherto formed the basis of suits and decrees in the several local courts all over Bengal." As further evidence of his total misconception of the true state of the case, Mr. Montresor charged the planters with ejecting the ryots from the ootbundee lands at other than what he calls the lawful period, or in other words, while their crops are still on the ground. Such conduct would, unquestionably, be harsh, unjust, and oppressive, but there is no proof of its ever being pursued. In this, as in many other respects, he was led into error, partly by his own ignorance, and partly by trusting too implicitly to the allegations of the ryots. The zemindaree held by Mr. Hills consists of more than 100,000 beegahs of khas or ootbundee lands, of which he proposed last year to keep 4,000 beegahs in his own hands for private cultivation of indigo, and he gave due notice to the ryots that they would not be permitted to cultivate this on ootbundee tenure. If, after such notice, they ventured upon the portion so reserved, it was at their own risk, and they could have no reason to complain if they were summarily ejected; but last year it was the landlord who was ejected, while the ryots occupied his lands, refused to pay rent, and then complained of his oppressive conduct to a Special Commissioner, who had made up his mind beforehand that they were quite right and his own countrymen all wrong. One of the grievances to which he alludes was a prohibition against either villagers or their cattle "passing over" ootbundee lands. Now, had Mr. Montresor taken the trouble to inquire into the truth of this complaint he would have discovered that the prohibition was against "grazing ou" lands retained for thatching grass. In the previous year the villagers had turned their cattle into large grass fields belonging to Mr. Hills; and, as he had no particular desire to feed his neighbours' cattle at his own expense, he had issued the order which they found so objectionable. The native zemindars act in precisely a similar manner, or let out their pasturage at a stiff rental. But not only did Mr. Montresor accept the ryots' account of this supposed dog-in-the-manger proceeding, but he also allowed himself to be gulled by a cockand-a-bull story about their cattle being wantonly pounded. It appears that while he was at Monakhallee some cattle were driven past his tent, which the ryots assured him were going to the pound, because they had strayed on to some waste land belonging to Mr. Hills. The real fact was, that the animals were being driven to the pound by the ryots of a village owned by the Debrogram Baboo, because they had been found trespassing on their paddy fields. It is needless to observe that, when the ryots discovered that whatever nonsense or falsehoods they chose to utter was credulously swallowed by the Special Commissioner, they speedily gave loose reins to an imagination stimulated by spite and ingratitude. Nor is it surprising that they should jump to the conclusion that the Government isself took their part against the planters, and measurements are made by the Ameen of the was desirous to put down the cultivation of officer chosen by the villagers themselves from ever to become the tenants of European zemindars, though they would prefer being so at low rents, to be paid according to their own convenience.

> "We have heard much," says Mr. Hills, "about oppression, but what are the signs of oppression—the poverty of the tenants and empty villages? Whereas, in my villages, and I take it the same will be found elsewhere, no sooner a jumma falls vacant, than there are five or six applicants for it, and within the there are five or six applicants for it, and within the last ten or twelve years thirteen new villages have been established in my properties; so that, whatever may have been the oppression or objections of the ryots to indigo, they were more than equalised and compensated, in their opinion, by the benefit accruing to them from becoming my tenants. And why the Bengal Government has interfered so as to cause such as unlarged distinction between the landcause such an unhappy disruption between the landlord and his tenants in the most flourishing districts in India, will, at a future time, be the wonder of the historian. Thirty years ago, when I purchased the concern, the whole country around, and all to the north, was either a swamp or a dense jungle, and but a few years previous to that, it was a preserve for dacoits; now it is one broad sheet of rice, and, where abject poverty existed, there is now plenty nor is a beggar known in these parts: there is at this moment scarcely a village in my properties where a number of its inhabitants do not pay Income-tax. I should like to hear how many in each village pay in the Bombay Presidency, or in Madras, or in the Upper Provinces. Indeed, it almost appears that all India, jealous of the prosperity of Kishnaghur and Jessore, had combined together to reduce them by anarchy and disunion to the same state as them selves. It never seems to have occurred to Government to ask—or at least it has been studiously kept out of sight—How these two districts had become so successful and had so far outstripped and advanced nor is a beggar known in these parts: there is at this out of sight—flow the state of the state of and advanced ahead of all others in their prosperity? The answer is, nevertheless, a simple one—the Englishman and is, nevertheless, a simple one—the Englishman and his capital were there! How long they will be so is another question.

Another question, indeed, but one worthy of the serious attention of the Government. There is little chance, we fear, of its receiving due consideration during Lord Canning's viceroyalty, but it may fairly be hoped that his successor will take the trouble to judge for himself, and not lend too ready an ear to the prejudiced statements of the civilians by whom he will be only too closely surrounded. It is not with impunity that even a Governor-general can now brave public opinion by propitiating his official subordinates at the expense of that enterprising community upon whose capital and energy the future material prosperity of India mainly depends. We trust, therefore, that Lord Elgin will not, in this respect, walk in the steps of his predecessor, or be guided too implicitly by the now obsolete traditions of "the service."

EXPLORATION OF CHINA.—A letter has been received from Lieut.-colonel Sarel, dated Shanghai, July 15, announcing that he and Captain Blakiston have been obliged to abandon their overland expedition across Thibet to India, in consequence of the swarm of rebels in the whole of the west country of China, and the impossibility they found of obtaining a single man or pony to carry their baggage. They got as far as Pingchow, a town some distance above Suchow, a place where no Europeans had ever been before. The French missionaries have not reached it, though they travel in Chinese dresses and as Chinese. The party went among the Maontse, or aboriginal Chinese, a people unknown to Europeans. Thev differ greatly from the Chinese under the Imperial Government, by which they have never been subdued. They found the mandarins everywhere civil, and the people also, though at one place the party was fired upon. The people were generally in some awe of them, and they believe that if they had in this instance returned the fire they might have walked into the town and burnt it. At one place the French missionaries wrote to say that there was a plot among the soldiers to murder them and plunder their boats while they were on a visit to the prefect. They wrote to this official to tell him that any one attempting to interfere with them in any way would be shot on the spot, and he would be rendered responsible for any disturbance that took place. He was inclined to be uncivil before, but on receipt of the letter he became profuse in his offers of service, and sent the European party chairs and a strong guard to escort them to his official residence, where he received them with a salute and a band of music. Colonel Sarel observes that the poppy is so common in the province of Sz'chuen, growing in a wass in the fields near the river, that no business in foreign opium will be done away from the sea coast, and perhaps the North of China. party passed through some magnificent scenery, and found districts full of coal. They have collected geological specimens and others in natural history for different societies at home, and are sending papers, the one officer to the Geographical Society in London, the other to the Reval Asiatic Society at Shanghai, and Captain Blakiston has prepared for the Admiralty a chart for the navigation of the Yang-tse, as far as Queichow, 1,200 miles from its mouth. It is therefore hoped that the trip, though unsuccessful in its object, has not been altogether without interesting and useful results.

EXTRACTS from the REPORT for the Year 1860.

"The success of the Company, even in its earliest years, received the marked attention, and choited the surprised comments of writers best acquainted with the history of In-comments of writers best acquainted with the history of Insurance Companies.

"Fire Premiums for 1860 EQUAL the Total Fire Premiums for the SEVEN YEARS 1845 to 1851.

"Life Premiums or 1860 EXCKED the Entire Life Premiums for the EIGHT YEARS ending 1852.

"Parchase of Annuities in 1860 LARGELY EXCEEDS the similar receipts for the first TEN YEARS—1845 to 1854.

"This progress, it is believed, is unsurpassed, considering that it applies to each of the three branches of the business."

FIRE BRANCH.

FIRE BRANCH.

"The Fire Branch has certainly shown no exhaustion during the year 1860 of that impetus which had previously brought it to a nosition of the first magnitude among the Insurance Companies of the United Kingdom. The Fire Premiums in 1859 had advanced to the sum of £228.314.78

3d. In 1860 the amount of Fire Premiums has arrived at a sum of £326.397.198. 11d., showing an increase of £33 663. 128. 8d., exceeding the large advance of the preceding year; so that in two years the Fire Revenue of the Company has been enhanced by the enormous sum of £66.89.9.17s. 5d.

"The Parliamentary Report of Returns of Duty paid to Government for the year 1860 exhibits the augmentation of the business in a more prominent way, as it affords the means of companion with other Companies. The Proprietors will be traitfied to learn that the Increase of Duty paid by the Royal in the last year is more than double that of any other Company, either London or Provincial, whist only one of those Companies even approaches to 50 per cent. of the advance of the entire increase of the whole of the Metropolitan Offices combined, whilst of the Provincial Offices it forms upwards of 30 p. r cent. of the total advance of the other 28 offices established out of London."

LIFE BRANCH.

LIFE BRANCH.

"The Reports of the Company for several years have had invariably to announce a constant periodical expansion of Life Business, the new Policies of each succeeding year showing an advance over the one that had immediately preceded it. A similar result is shown in the year 1860, the Premiums on New Policies, after deducting Guarantees, being £15.079, 17s; 10d., which is an increase in that item of £1,993, 17s, 5d, above the amount received for the year 1859.

"But even this advance is small when compared with the sudden and remarkable momentum which has been given to this branch of the business in the present year (1861).

"It was not until the commencement of the year that the public seemed to have become fully acquainted with the fact that the Royal Insurance Company had publis ed late in the last year an account of the investigation into the sestes and habilities of its life Department, under a novel form, and in as plain and intelligible a manner as the abstruseness of the subject admitted, together with the entire statements and valuations necessary for that purpose.

"It is conjectured, from the extensive notices of this Pamphlet and its accompanying Diagrams which have appeared in the Periodicals of the day, that it has largely attracted the attention of vast numbers of persons in all parts of the United Kingdom, as well as in other parts of the world. Indeed, a most satisfactory and conclusive evidence that such is the case is afforded by the lact that the Sum Assured on New Policies in the six months to the 3rd June of the present year, is actually fifty per cent, in excess of the sum assured in the corresponding months of the year 1860, although the latter amount in itself exceeded the sum assured in any like previous period of time.

"If this success be continued, the Royal Insurance Company would, with respect to the amount of its new business, be at once placed (at least with one or two exceptions) at the

"It this success be continued, the Royal Insurance Company would, with respect to the amount of its new business, be at once placed (at least with one or two exceptions) at the head of all the Insurance Companies doing business in this country; and the anticipations of the last Report, to the effect that the details of the Life Business then to be published would form an epoch of the Establishment, will have a speedy and very happy realisation."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

So far as India is concerned the Calcutta mail of the 22nd of August scarcely brings any intelligence with which we were not previously acquainted. It is satisfactory, however, to learn that in the North-West Provinces the ravages of cholera had sensibly decreased; but that terrible pest appears to have broken out in the Punjab with unusual virulence, two hundred European soldiers having died at Lahore in the space of a single week.

In consequence of the heavy and continuous rains which have fallen in Bengal, the country is inundated in all directions, and the indigo crop almost entirely destroyed. Indeed, according to one of the Calcutta journals, the yield is not expected to exceed 50,000 maunds; while others estimate it at between sixty and seventy thousand.

The ceremony of investing Sir Hugh Rose with the insignia of the exalted Order of the Star of India was to take place on the 26th of last month, and preparations were being made on a grand scale to render the spectacle as imposing as possible. Some time in September Lord Canning was to start for Agra, to preside at the investiture of the native chiefs who have been selected as recipients of this distinguished honour. On his return to Calcutta his lordship proposes to proceed to Rangoon, to superintend the union of the three provinces of Arracan, Pegu, and Tenasserim into one Presidency, under Colonel Phayre as their first governor. Anything that tends to break up the system of centralisation must be received with satisfaction.

A meeting of the native inhabitants of Calcutta and the suburbs is advertised for an early day, the object being to take "into consideration the conduct of the Hon. Sir Mordaunt Wells, Kt., one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Calcutta, towards the native community." Sir Mordaunt appears to have an aversion for the practices of perjury and forgery, crimes indigenous to India, and has consequently exerted himself to discourage and suppress them. In doing so, he has more than once passed severe sentences upon persons convicted of those offences, and thus made himself unpopular with the native community. Mr. H. M. Tweagell. Baynton, Capt. H. Janso

We give elsewhere a long list of officers belonging to the Bengal and Madras Presidencies who have been nominated to the General Staff Corps.

The news from China consists, as usual, of vague disquieting rumours. The Prussian Minister has been foiled in his endeavours to conclude a treaty. The Taepings are advancing upon Shanghai, to the number of one hundred thousand. The Imperialists are investing Nankin. The British merchants are already complaining of the action of the late treaty as relates to custom-houses, and a memorial on the subject is to be sent home for the consideration of ministers. These are the usual heads of intelligence from the Flowery Central Land, but from Japan we have something both novel and startling. A band of ruffians having attacked the British Legation in the dead of night, succeeded in wounding Mr. L. Oliphant on the wrist and shoulder, and Mr. Morrison on the head. The latter gentleman shot one of his assailants, and five more were cut down by the Japanese guard, who appear to have acted with courage after they once appeared upon the scene, though they were in no hurry to rush to the rescue. H.M.'s ship Ringdove was at Yedo, and Admiral Hope was almost hourly expected, so that no fears need be entertained for the safety of the foreign representatives. But is not this "the beginning of the end?" Civilisation and barbarism have come in collision, and the latter will have to give way.

BENGAL.

CURIOSITIES OF THE TRADE OF CALCUTTA.

Mr. Bonnaud's Tables of the External Commerce of Bengal during 1860-61 present some details which are of interest. The year was only partially affected by famine and still more slightly by the disturbances in the indigo districts. The current season will show far worse results.

First as to imports, on which the decrease amounted to £2,997,418, as compared with the previous year, the whole being £15,339,850. The most important item is cotton goods:—

		Total.		Decrease.
Twist and yarn		£1,031,415		£34,579
White and grey goods		4,498,761		1,003,782
Printed and coloured		877,877	•••	205,830
Silk and mixed	•••	90,905	•••	27,556
Woollens		132,523	•••	84,871

These concern chiefly the English houses in Galeutta. Adding to this decrease the losses in the current year we may well be amazed that a city, at which Lord Ellenborough sneers as the haunt of bankruptcy because of its former character, has stood the strain so well.

The very large decrease in all kinds of wine and beer cannot be altogether attributed to the cessation of the demand for the European troops:—

-			1859-60.		1860-61.
Port		•••	£87,512	•••	£23,300
Shefry		•••	98,328	•••	51,899
Саре		•••	51	•••	36
Madeira, &c	• •••	•••	8,354	•••	882

Gin			34,221		11,210
Beer and porter	r	•••	824,712	•••	148,603

Of the wines, sherry, as might be expected, heads the list; claret follows, and then champagne. Of brandy one-half more is consumed than of sherry. After this we may look at books and pamphlets, and to see if the number of readers has steadily increased we shall take a series of years:—

1856-57		•••	£40,489
1857-58	•••	•••	32,896
1858-59	•••	•••	37,835
1859-60 1860-61	•••	•••	44,108

The check given by the mutinies is seen, when book-clubs were broken up and men hunted for their lives had no time to read, even if books could have reached them. The value of imported books seems very small for so highly educated a community as Anglo-Indians. But we must remember that these figures do not include imports through the Post-office, and that mess and club libraries supply many readers. No sane man, unless a bookworm, will collect a library in a climate of damp, and a country of white ants and sepoys. The packets imported through the book post were in 1858-59 in number 66,576. As if the incometax had introduced a spirit of economy in dress even among ladies, the imports of haberdashery and millinery which rose from £139,444 in 1851-2 to £199,776 in 1859-60, show a decrease last year to £171,766. If we double the sum to represent duty and milliner's profits, we have more than a third of a million sterling annually spent in Bengal on English apparel.

Turning to the exports, which amounted to £15,502,904, or £1,285,217 more than in the previous year, we see the increasing prosperity of the peasantry in the following figures, which we give for a series of years.

Thus in seven years the export of the native products sugar, jute, rice, and linseed, has far more than doubled. The rise in export of gunny bags and cloth, and of tea, is enormous. The former is a new trade, employing numerous English engineers, mills and machinery in the vicinity of Calcutta, and yielding large profits. The cotton of Bombay, the rice of Pegu, the grain of North America, the wool of Australia, and the sugar of the Mauritius, are packed in Bengal gunny bags. For a quarter of a century indigo has remained almost stationary or has even slightly declined. As the export of Indian tea has risen, the import of China tea has decreased, showing the extent to which the former is now consumed in the country. In 1853-4 China tea was imported to the value of £27,193, in 1860 61 to the value of only £8,122. The export of cotton wool was most trifling, and was almost en-tirely to China and Singapore. It was of the value of £67,391 in 1859-60, and a few pounds less last year.

The main part of the trade of Bengal was with the following countries:—

The Commercial Treaty must largely increase the trade with France. We were not prepared to learn that our trade with America, which is now suspended, was so trifling. The trade with Australia must yet grow to large proportions, for thence we must draw our wool and we ought to supply its markets with grains, seeds, sugar, and tea.—Friend of India.

COLONEL ELLIOT'S REPORT ON BUSTAR AND KHARONDE.

Among the Selections from the Records of the Government of India, which are from time to time submitted to the public, few are more interesting than those which embody information which can be thoroughly relied upon about the various districts which have hitherto been almost closed to Europeans. Few Englishmen, even of those who have passed the largest portion of their life in India, ever fully realise the prodigious extent and varied natural resources of this great dependency of the English Crown. In England, it may be said without any exaggeration, all conceptions relating to India are of the most vague and unreal nature. In spite of steamships and the overland route, to this day the Anglo-Indian of the play or the popular novel is the same debauched and irascible bully whose outrageous eccentricities used to horrify an English audience in the days of Richard Cumberland and Miss Burney. If it has so fared with the English in India, it would be chivalrous indeed to expect any very marked advance of knowledge regarding the country itself and the native inhabitants. might almost fancy that the semi-fabulous atmosphere through which the navigators of the sixteenth century surveyed the Malabar coast, with its unfamiliar cities, and men continued to this day to blind men's eyes, though no longer now with the brilliant exaggerations of that early time. It is rather the ignorance of apathy that we have to complain of than the mistakes and miscalculations of an impatient curiosity. It would be well if it were not so. In the meantime, any light from any quarter is welcome, and, without doubt. will always meet with some who will turn it to advantage. It is in this hope that we have undertaken, with the assistance of Colonel Elliott's clear and interesting narrative, which has recently been published by the authorities of the Foreign Department at Calcutta, to offer some account of a portion of our Indian Empire, which is almost unknown, except by name, to most Englishmen. pastoral superstition. On certain festivals as

The districts visited and reported upon by Colonel Elliott are the two dependencies of Bustar and Kharonde—both of them attached to the Raepore district. The former, which lies to the south-east of the Chutteesgurgh district, has the Godavery river for its southern boundary, and on the east and west respectively, the Jeypore district attached to the Northern Circars, and Wyragurh, in the Chandah district. Its extreme length from north to south is stated at about 235 miles, and its breadth from east to west at about 182 miles. Through this country, which is described as a rich undulating plain, the river Indrawutty, which rises in the ghats of Thooamool to the north-east of the dependency, pursues a south-westerly course, and, before its junction with the Godavery, near Bhopaulputnam, receives various tributary streams from the north and south. The soil is, with little variation, a rich alluvial bed of some depth, overlying a stratum of clay slate, and its extreme fertility is proved by the fact of its bearing nearly all crops without distinction and without any attention to the supply of water. Colonel Elliot gives a curious illustration of the hap-hazard character of the reports which are founded on mere hearsay or the desultory impressions of casual travellers. In Sir Richard Jenkin's Report on the Nagpore Province, Bustar is described from general report as "a woody and hilly tract, the valleys of which alone are cultivated and partially cleared of jungle"—a description which Colonel Elliot pronounces to be completely at variance with facts. The general character of the country is as described above, a rich undulating plain, often clothed with forests of the "Shorea robusta," which is the prevailing wood of the country. This tree is, however, very easily felled, and the ground cleared by a process familiar to Australian colonists, which consists in burning the wood on the ground, attaining the double purpose of alearing and fertilising. Notwithstanding all these facilities, the amount of cultivation does not bear the proportion of one to fifteen of the surface, though it would be difficult, as Colonel Elliot emphatically repeats, to point out any country possessing more natural advantages. The entire population of the dependency is roughly estimated by Colonel Elliott at 80,000 of both sexes and of all castes and ages. Little reliance, indeed, can be placed on these figures, when we bear in mind the great extent of the province, the irregularity of the villages, and the prevalence in certain districts of wild tribes who have no intercourse with the people of the plains, and, from all accounts, appear to be in a state of barbarism very unusual in India. These tribes are found in the range of hills which branch off in a spur from the Eastern Ghats of the Jeypore dependency, and in the Beila Deila Hills, which range south east from the Indrawutty to the Godavery. They are described as very shy and timid at the approach of strangers, and clad, when clad at all, in the good old fashion of aprons of leaves. In the plains, the bulk of the inhabitants are of the Gond caste, and consist of two sub-divisions or tribes, called Moreas and Marias or Jhorias. The Moreas are in a more advanced state than the other tribes, and from the mass of the cultivating population. Their language is a mixture of several, the principal of which appear to be Hindi, Telegu, Canarese, and Mahrathi. The character given to them by Colonel Elliott is very favourable, and his account of their customs and manners a pleasing one. Their mode of arranging and celebrating the marriage ceremony is curious, and certainly less objectionable-if we may trust the anti-Belgravian party in the Times-than that which obtains in the very élite of English society. of the "most respectable men of the village" (one being chosen by each party) meet by appointment, and, filling an earthen vessel with water, each gently drops a grain of rice, one in the name of the boy, and one in the name of the girl, at opposite sides of the vessel, which are watched with much interest, the success of the suit being dependent upon the meeting of the two grains, in which case the proposal is looked upon as propitious; and the match arranged accordingly. Their religion may be described as a many as a thousand sheep and buffaloes are sacrificed, in presence of the Rajah, to two goddesses, who appear to be the favourite divinities of the country, and the jewels of whose temple are valued at Rs. 15,000. The present Rajah is only eighteen years of age, and the government of the dependency, when Colonel Elliot visited it. was in the hands of his uncle Duljungun Singh, The financial condition of the country is a carica ture of our own financial disorganisation-the expenditure being nearly one third more than the receipts. Probably this may be in a great measure attributed to negligence and inattention, as it does not appear that the Rajah's debts are considerable. It may reasonably be expected that under the present improved system of jurisdiction and collection the yearly accounts will cease to exhibit a deficiency.—Bombay Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE KOONIES.-The report on the operations of Mr. Moran's survey party with Captain Raban in the late expedition into the Kookie country ap es in the Gazette Supplement. He surveyed in detail the unexplored country through which flow the Kurnefooles and Kasalong rivers. The erations were eventually connected with the Chittagong and Dacca surveys. The five ranges of hills in the country surveyed run from southeast to north-west, and are from 450 to 2,000 feet high. About twelve miles eastward from Rutton Poea's tribe is the great Howlong range, com-puted to be about 4,000 feet high. The four rivers, Kurnafoolee, Kasalong, Chingree, and Mysmes, can be used all the year round by boats of small burthen. No roads are to be met with in the hills. In most parts their construction would be attended with great difficulty. The forests of the hills consist chiefly of Jarool and Gurjun trees. A variety of the bamboo is found which has the advantage of containing between the joints pure drinkable water. The soil is poor compared with the alluvial plains of Bengal Cotton is grown on the hill tops and the banks of rivers. Tes, coffee, and oranges might be introduced with a fair prospect of suc-cess. Labour is plentiful. Mr. Moran remarks: It is possible the late rains may have been occasioned by the pressure of a surplus population, and an opening for honest labour would go a great way to restoring peace and order." The chief tribes in the part reported upon are the Chukmas, Tipuras, and Lusais. The Chukmas speak a kind of Bengallee, the Tipuras speak Burmese, and appear to be of Burmese descent. They are stated to be the only hill tribe who have any religious belief at all, a corrupt form of Bhuddism. The Lusais have a dialect of their own, which is more or less intelligible all over the hills. The hill men are of middle height and strongly built. Marriage expenses cost even the poorest Chukma nearly one hundred rupees. The Bengal Government direct that Mr. Moran should be employed in a further survey in the hills next cold season. His survey is the only result of the Kookie expedition, which is creditable to our arms or our policy.—Friend of India.

FYABAD. — A native correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says there was a grand illumination at the Begum's tomb at Fyzabad on the 4th August, being the anniversary of her death. Some European officers were among the thousands of spectators. The ceremony commenced with reading the Mursiah over the grave, which was adorned with garlands of flowers and covered with a very rich piece of cloth of gold; a canopy of the same material covered the tomb. The ceremony closed with reading a chapter from the Koran. About the same time a fair for women was held at the tomb. No men were allowed to be present. The more respectable native females, usually secluded in their zenanas, are allowed to attend this fair once a year.

JEYFORE.—The Maharajah of Jeypore, and about one hundred trading firms at Jeypore, have petitioned the Gov.-gen. for the construction of an electric telegraph line from Agra to that place, which petition is under the consideration of his Excellency.

ISSUE OF CLOTHING.—At last the date on which clothing is to be issued to the army in India has been fixed at 1st April, instead of 1st January as hitherto. The difference between the custom of the Royal and the Indian armies is thus removed. The next issue of clothing will take place on 1st April, 1862, compensation being allowed for the three months from January to March.

Honorary Magistrates.—The following honorary assistant magistrates have been appointed. In Shahabad, Maha Rajah Maheshur Bux Sing Bahadoor, of Domraon, and Mr. B. Schmidt. In Saron, Maha Rajah Rajender Pertanb Sahee Bahadoor, of Hutwa. In Chumparun, Mr. G. Nevile Wyatt and Maha Rajah Rajender Kishore Sing Bahadoor, of Bettiah; and in Tirhoot, Moulavy Moula Buksh.

Dum Dum.—A recommendation has been made to the authorities to remove the battery of Royal Artillery from Dum-Dum, in consequence of the mortality amongst the horses from glanders and farcy. We believe that during the past eighteen months upwards of 50 horses have been destroyed from these diseases.

FIFTH BENGAL CAVALRY.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief offered the command of the 5th Bengal Cavalry to Colonel J. M. Tytler, c. B., lately commanding the 9th Irregular Cavalry, which was disbanded; thus testifying his appreciation of this officer's merits and distinguished services; but Colonel Tytler being obliged to proceed to Europe on medical certificate, the command of the 5th Cavalry is again at his Excellency's disposal.

RUNNING A-MUCK .- On the 14th of July last, as the wife of Colonel J. L. Taylor, commanding at Seetapore, Oude, was sitting in her drawing room, Nendishore, a Brahmin who was working at a brick-kiln near, entered the room, seized the lady by the throat, dashed her to the floor, and planted his knees in her chest, tightening his grasp on her throat. A servant lad, Shumsher, attracted by the noise, entered the room and had sufficient presence of mind to throw a door curtain over the scoundrel's head. A bheestie joined him. and both forcibly dragged the man away. Mrs.
Taylor was frightfully injured, but has since recovered. No motive could be assigned except that the man was in that state of frenzy to which gunja eating Asiatics are subject. He was not insane. The Judge, "considering that the condition of the community in India, both European and native, demands that offences such as these should be severely punished, for the common safety of the Government and the people," sentenced the criminal to transportation for life. In Batavis, where the Malays are so subject to such frenzy, and where they so often run a-muck, the law re quires the first person who can do so to kill the man on the spot.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT .- The Gazette of the 21st August orders certain reductions in the Bengal ordnance establishments, corresponding with the diminution in the strength in the army. ordnance, magazines, and depots will be abolished at Phillour, Benares, Chunar, Fyzabad, Futteygurh, Umballah, Govindgurh, Lahore, Attock, Bunnoo, and Kohat. The Delhi and Lucknow magazines will be reduced to depots. The magazine at Dera Ismail Khan will be included in the general establishments. Arsenals will henceforth be maintained only at Fort William, Allahabad and Ferozepore; magazines at Agra, Saugor, Peshawur, Dera Ismail Khan, and Mooltan and depots at Delhi, Dum-Dum, Dinapore, Cawn pore, Lucknow, and Bareilly. The establishments for these are revised, and warrant officers in excess are to remain as supernumeraries. Natives in excess of the number fixed are to be discharged, with or without gratuities, according to their length of service.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—The following gentlemen have been sworn in as justices of the peace for Calcutta:—W. F. Fergusson, Esq., J. H. Fergusson, Esq., C. B. Stewart, Esq., A. Walker, Esq., G. Brown, Esq., H. E. Braddon, Esq., P. Keith, Esq., H. Crooke, Esq., W. Fairlie, Esq., Rajah Kally Krishna Bahadoor, and Baboo Sibchunder Goho.

CAWNPORE, August 8 .- Since the last quarter of the moon we have had some nice showers, which have kept the temperature fresh and cool. There is a good deal of sickness amongst the natives. and many deaths from cholera, fevers and dysentery are also rife; but the Europeans are comparatively healthy. Murders and robberies still continue. A poor chowkeydar was barbarously murdered a few nights ago by a gang of thieves, whom he recognised, and threatened to have caught and punished on the following day, if they did not make themselves scarce; whereup they fell upon him, and cut him down with their tulwars, leaving him for dead, and then decamped. The unfortunate man only survived a few hours, then breathed his last. The police appear more for show than use; they do not go the rounds of a night, for fear of the budmashes catching and maltreating them, so they go about the city during the day, to show their zeal and activity. The Nazool Darogah is carrying it on with a high hand, levying taxes of his own, irrespective of the Government one. Great dissatisfaction is evinced in the Oonao district, in Oude, by the zemindars and landholders, whose inheritances of two or three centuries are taken away from them and given to strangers, who bribe the native officials highly for such unlawful dealings, and the English authori-ties are cajoled by these deputies into committing these unjust acts by a shadow of the law.—Aug. -I lose no time in informing you of some startling intelligence received in a letter from Nynee Tal last evening, to the effect that a telegraphic message had been received there, from head quarters, by the officer commanding the depot, inquiring if the European soldiers were fully armed? The reply sent was in the negative, as there were only a few fire-arms for the common duties of the station. The Commissioner of Rohilkund was ordered, some time ago, to visit Moradabad, to see what was going on, as ugly rumours were flying about that secret plans had been hatching amongst the Mussulman population, both there and at Rampore. I cannot understand this, when the Nuwab of the last-mentioned place behaved so well and loyally during the late mutiny and rebellion. A lady friend of mine, whilst out riding in the evening, at Nynee Tal, heard a sweeper caste man saying to another within her hearing, that in a very short period he would hear of a grand tamasha going on at Moradabad. I do not fear for the result, should there be any disturbance in Rohilkund, as there are English troops all about the country; but these signs of the times show what the secret feelings of the people are towards the British, and how they long and yearn to throw off the yoke from their necks. Some men have been brought in here for trial from Dera Mungulpore Thannah, charged with the murder of a young girl, who was killed by a blow from a bludgeon, which was aimed at her brother by one of the ruffians, as she and her mother, on hearing the scuffle between her brother and three other men, ran to defend him, he being one to three; the mother was also severely beaten and injured, but her son escaped being hurt. When the girl fell, the villains ran away, but were soon captured and put in confinement till ordered to be sent here. Many budmashes and other bad characters are leaving the town upon hearing of the appointment of Nuzzee Vullah as chief-constable, from Chowbaypore, as he is a first-rate official, and much dreaded by the light-fingered gentry. If an Englishman were appointed as inspector of police it would be a great boon to Cawnpore, which is a regular hotbed for the worst characters. The weather, though cloudy, is excessively warm, close, and oppressive. Only a shower now and then .-Englishman.

Colonel G. Balfour, c.B., whose intended departure for England by the steamer of the 23rd August had been announced, is about to try the effects of a minor trip for the recovery of his health and strength, before availing himself of the last resource for our worn-out officials, and has left by the steamer Dwarkanauth for the Sandheads, intending to be absent from his onerous duties for some few days only.

-The troops directed by our superintendent, Captain Stewart, to go in pursuit of Marpack Singh and his party, have crossed the Lieutenant Sherer, assistant to our superintendent, was deputed to accompany them as far as Luckepoor, and to see them duly provided with carriage and provisions for the march. Travellers arrived from Moompoor state that the rebels were met by them in two bodies; one party of twenty or thirty in advance, and nearly a march a-head, and the other of thirty or forty at the Jheerie, which they left in the middle of last month, having surprised the Moompoor Thannah there, and taking the sepoys belonging to it as prisoners along with them. The British troops are behind them, and should no obstacle offer, will overtake the rebels, or at all events ought so closely to follow them up, as to prevent their doing any mischief in the valley. A later account states that the Subadar and his party have crossed the Eerung, the enemy having eva-cuated the opposite bank. The Subadar proceeded towards Munipoor; but it would appear that Marpack Singh and his party made no further effort after the check they had received, to reach the valley, but dispersed and doubled back through the jungles; for I am just told that the Prince and a small party of Munipoories, with some wounded men among them, recrossed the Jheeri into Cachar. This endeavour, therefore, of these men to disturb the peace of Munipoor, has, for the present, been frustrated. It now remains to apprehend the rebel Prince Marpack, and identify his followers. This will be a task of some difficulty, as they will be sure to keep in close hiding, and the Munipoories are so clannish, that they will not give one another up, even though of different factions .- English-

ALLAHABAD .- A correspondent of the English man, dating the 15th August from Allahabad, mentions that the Hon. Mr. Edmonstone will return from Murree to his head quarters in the beginning of September next. After the monsoon, her Highness the Secundra Begum is expected at Agra, to pay her respects to the Viceroy, and see the Jumma Musjid. The same letter adds that cholera is raging fearfully in the neighbouring villages; the most of the poor survivors of the famine are carried off by this epidemio-Thid.

DARJEELING, August 13 .- We had another dahlia show yesterday at the Assembly Rooms, which was very numerously attended. The show of dahlias was pretty good. The flowers had suffered a good deal from incessant rain during the six preceding weeks. Mr. Grant, of Lebong, carried off all the prizes. The Coliopters and Lepidoptera of this wonderfully prolific locality were exhibited by two gentlemen collectors; the collections consisted of upwards of fifty well-arranged trays, in which both classes of insects were fully represented. The largest of the two collections goes home to the Great Exhibition. The Hon. Ashley Eden was married this day to the former Mrs. Bellew, once Mrs. Palmer, nee Eva Money.

MR. NEWMARCH, J. P .- On the 14th of August, in the Supreme Court, John Newmarch, Esq., was sworn in as one of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the town of Calcutta.

SIR HUGH ROSE, G.C.B.—It is the present intention of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to leave the Presidency, for his cold weather tour of inspection in the North-West, about the commencement of November, to visit and thoroughly inspect all the military stations, arsenals, &c., in the Punjab, and reach Peshawur and the extreme frontier about the end of December.

Punjab, August 10 .- The season for sowing cotton has passed, and more cotton has been sown now than in any former year. This Government have issued a circular, requesting the opinions of the district officers as to whether an issue of Calcutta notes would be best for the Punjab, and whether they could be safely made a legal tender, or whether district notes, payable at their respective capitals, would be preferable. Our Lieutenant-governor is expected at his head quarters on the first proximo. The cholera, which was raging in Goorgaon, has much abated.

THE MAHARAJAH OF GWALIOR has given the Supreme Government a nut to crack, which will require the exertion of all their powers, being quite in the range of their capacities and inclinations. Some time ago a son was born to his Highness, whereupon that potentate, in accordance with the usual Indian custom, levied a nuzzerana on his loyal subjects, or in plain English, called upon his people to evince their joy at the event by contributing a portion of their wealth for the benefit of the youthful stranger. Some of the good people of Gwalior saw the matter regis ad exemplar, and paid up at once; but others found it more convenient to delay. During the interval the new arrival took his departure to another world; and on this, those who were behind-hand in their payments refused to give any money whatever, on the all-sufficient ground that the person for whom the money was intended had ceased to exist. The Maharajah, on the other hand, contended that his part of the contract had been performed in the birth of the child, and that therefore he had every right to call for the balance which, in his opinion, was due. The recusants, however, arguing probably that the contract was none of their making, but forced upon them, still refused to pay, and the matter has been referred to the decision of the British Government.-Enalishman.

H.M's. BENGAL ENGINEERS .- The officers of the Bengal Engineers have addressed a memorial to the Government, with reference to the proportion of brigades allotted, in the reorganisation, to the three corps of that branch, in Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, the first having, as represented by its officers, been disadvan-tageously treated, as compared with the other two. The Bengal Engineers have been formed into three brigades, whilst those of Madras and Bombay, each of them not half the strength of the Bengal corps, have had two brigades constituted in the regiments of the minor Pre-This is no small disadvantage to the sidencies. Bengal Engineers, as regards brigade staff appointments, &c.; and we have no doubt that the matter has only to be brought to the notice of the Government to ensure correction. In carrying out the vast scheme of the amalgamation the authorities have, unavoidably and unintentionally, committed several mistakes prejudicial to different interests, but attention has always been paid to temperate representation and appeal; and we should think that this case will not be an exception, as the claim of the Engineer officers is founded on justice, and equal treatment for all. Englishman.

H.M.'s BENGAL ARTILLERY .- The officers of the Bengal Artillery are acting with very creditable energy in endeavouring to keep their regimental retiring fund in beneficial working order, and promotion moving in the regiment. It is proposed to purchase out at least six or seven of the Lieut. cols. who may be willing to retire in Oct. next; this object to be accomplished by the expenditure of a lakh and a-half of rupees now in the fund; and should this amount be insufficient. by the officers of the regiment giving their retiring seniors a guarantee for the payment within a given time of any deficit which may remain. There are, at least, the abovementioned number of senior officers of the artillery whose names we could mention were it necessary, willing, nay anxious, to retire at the time specified, and the money devoted to get them to go will be well expended, as, without such an arrangement, promotion in the junior grades is now very hopeless. Englishman.

AT THANESUR there have been some disturbances, arising out of sectarian quarrels between Mahomedans, who have desecrated Hindoo temples, and the Hindoos, who have retaliated by damaging the mosques. Our Government should try the plan which has been successful in similar cases between Romanists and Protestants in Europe, and by the imposition of a heavy fine upon the offending town or district, make them riotings, and at the same time bear the costs of the increased police force necessary to keep them in order.

CENTRAL ASIA. - The Cabul news writer of the Delhi Gazette states that Dost Mahomed was seriously ill in the middle of July. as the news was spread abroad in the city, the usual scene took place; the Dost appears to have been deserted, and all men hastened to pay court to some one or other of his relations, as his probable successor. In a few days the Ameer recovered sufficiently to hold a durbar, but on the 19th July he is reported to have said to his son, Shere Allee Khan-" Oh, son, do not think that am recovering; I am getting worse and worse; the pain of my leg is making me weak every day. You should become friends with all your brothers, and after I am dead continue to carry on the affairs of the State as peaceably as possible. The very four brothers of mine who are at Cabul, and who show themselves as great friends, will become, after my death, your deadly foes. The best thing for you to do is, to send a number of each of your uncle's troops to Kandahar, and thus to make them weak, otherwise they would be very mischievous to you." On this, Shere Allee Khan replied, that he should always obey the orders of his brothers, Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan, and Mohamed Ameen Khan, and should take their advice about the State affairs." Fighting has been going on among some of the Afghan Chieftains in Kandahar, so that altogether matters look unsatisfactory and unsettled in that part of Central Asia.

In DUTTEA, in Central India, the present chief on the death of his father, which occurred recently, burnt alive his mother with the corpse of her husband, in spite of her resistance to the sacrifice. The matter having come before the British authorities, such an atrocity will, of course, be inquired into.

Exports (Calcutta, August 22). —Holders have been giving in to a slight decline upon previous rates, and freights also have slightly given way. Purchasers, in consequence, have been more active, and a fair amount of business has been done in some of the weightier staples.

Imports (Calcutta, August 22).—The fortnight which has elapsed since our last detailed account has been marked by no improvement in any kind of cuttom manufactures, and the business that has been done has been, in some instances, at lower rates than those previously ruling. What is usually our best season for sales is passing away without any active demand, and it is much to be feared that the supplies on the way from England will prove in excess of our requirements, while stocks here are rapidly accumulating from recent heavy arrivals.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NEILL STATUE.—The only local news we (Madrus Athenœum) have to chronicle is the "inauguration" of the Neill statue, which took place on Saturday the 24th August, amid much display. Guards of honour furnished by each of the regiments in garrison were present, as were also a large number of the society and others of Madras. When the statue was uncovered, a salute of nine guns was fired from the battery at the fort, the troops did the general salute, and the bands present struck up a spirited air. This over, the Hon. Mr. Maltby, in the absence of the Hon. Mr. Morehead, said a few words appropriate to the occasion. The speaker alluded to the zeal with which the General, then in command of his regiment, the well known Madras Fusiliers, left this Presidency to assist in quelling the mutiny; to his energetic march from Calcutta to the scene of action; the dispersal of the mutineers at Benares; the recapture of the fort and arsenal at Allahabad from their hands; and his glorious death when carrying relief to the illustrious garrison of Lucknow. Mr. Maltby then stated that the artist had "achieved a good and animated likeness" of the deceased general, and in conclusion gracefully alluded to the fact that the son of the late general was present to witness the honour in which his father's memory was held. Three cheers and one cheer more gallant Fusiliers, and this concluded the ceremony. The statue occupies a prominent position on the Mount Road, facing a road which leads down to the Madras Club. On the pedestal is the following inscription :-

James Gordon Smith Neill, C.B., Aide-de Camp to the Queen, Lieut-Colonel of the Madras Fusiliers, Lieut-Colonel of the Madras Fusiliers, Brigadier General in India. A brave, resolute, self-reliant soldier, Universally acknowledged as the first Who stemmed the torrent of rebellion

In Bengal.

He fell gloriously

At the relief of Lucknow,

25th September, 1859,

Aged 47.

Below the inscription is a bas-relief in bronze, representing the advance on the Alumbagh at Lucknow, where Neill received his death wound; and on the sides of the pedestal are the names of those fusiliers, officers and men, who fell during the rebellion.

LAZARETTO AT PALLIPORT .- The Madras Athe næum quotes from the last report on civil dispensaries an account of the lazaretto at Palliport, near Cochin. It is a very old institution, supposed to have been built by the Dutch in 1728. The Dutch frequently had white and coloured troops stationed in that quarter, and leprosy was very common among them. The pay, both of officers and men, was miserably poor, and their provisions scanty, which must have operated unfavourably on their health. A captain received only Rs. 50 a month; a lieutenant, Rs. 22; and a private, Rs. 9. When the British took possession of Cochin, the Leper Hospital was kept up. In July, 1859, the lazaretto was handed over to the control of the medical department. It is capable of accommodating 120 patients. At the Cape the Dutch had a lazaretto on an island off Table Bay, called "Robben Island," and amid the many changes through which the colony passed, the institution was kept up. Since it has been under British management, and British customs have been in the ascendant, the number of its inmates has exhibited a wonderful decrease.

THE INAM COMMISSION .- The following passages are extracted from Mr. Taylor's Progress
Report for the month of July last:—The number of cases decided by the deputy collectors during the month was 10,530, which raises the total number of cases decided, from the commencement of the undertaking to the end of July, to 1,85,047. Besides these, 5,470 cases of village service Inams were registered during the month, of which 3,612 come under the head of " Government village servants," which under the rules are enfranchised on 5-8ths of their assessment, and 1,858 under the head of "village artisans." The total number of the several descriptions of service inams registered up to the end of July is 57,600. The total number of titles confirmed to the end of July was 1,52,049, of which 23,485 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of permanent character, 82,262 were personal grants enfranchised at the option of the Inamdars, 43,056 were personal grants enfranchised compulsorily, and 3,246 were personal grants not enfranchised and confirmed on present tenures. The total number of title deeds which had reached the hands of the Inamdars up to the end of last month was 79,833. The total amount of quitrent payable to Government, in addition to former Jodi, is Rs. 2,52,064. The amount paid in the redemption of the quit-rent is Rs. 8,908. The combined quit-rent payable to Government for the future, upon personal Inams confirmed to the holders, amounts to Rs. 4,08,019. Of the num ber of personal grants confirmed during the month under report, 115 were cases of Jangikattubadi and Kavaligar Inams, assessed at Rs. 1,001, and charged with a future quit-rent of Rs. 1,013, which, being added to the number of this class of Inams previously disposed of, raises the total number of police Inams enfranchised to 2,264, assessed at Rs. 60,475, and charged with a future quit-rent of Rs. 34,271.

PROPOSED CHURCH AT KURNOOL .- The following Order of Government, dated the 5th August, refers to the intended erection of a church at were given by the assembled company for the Kurnool, which it will be seen cannot be carried an elegant arch of foliage and flowers. The adout in consequence of want of funds :-- " It is observed that of the sum, viz., Rs. 5,930 required for the erection of a church, &c., at Kurnool, only Rs. 5,077 are available, leaving Rs. 853 yet to be obtained from private sources. In assenting to the commencement of the proposed building, the Government fully believed the auticipation of the district engineer, that more than the requisite sum to complete it would be obtained from the members of the Irrigation Company and from others. It would now appear from the letter of the deputy chief engineer in charge, of the 6th August, No. 2,438, that there is no prospect of any assistance from the company, and as aid from other sources may equally fail, the Government doubt the expediency of proceeding with the building, as proposed by Lieutenant-colonel Birdwood, with means insufficient to complete it. No further steps will therefore be taken in the matter until the full amount required for the erection of the church is forthcoming.—Athenæum.

CANNANORE, July 31.—For the past few days

our monsoon weather has been somewhat milder than for weeks previously. It seems more set-tled; the atmosphere is damp, with heavy fog in the morning. Cholera is again making its ravages all along the coast. In the cantonment of Cannanore, from three to four cases are daily reported during the last three days. There were four admissions from this disease in the hospital of H.M.'s 66th Regiment, all attacked in the barracks; during night three recovered and one died. I have to record a shocking tragedy which took place in the cantonment of Cannanore on Saturday night: the death of a young man (a Hindoo shroff) who was poisoned with arsenic. The perpetrator of the deed, on the plea of obtaining fire for smoking, went to the fireplace and dropt a quantity of arsenic into the pot of boiling milk, which the deceased used to take. Immediately after the victim partook of the milk he said that it had a sour taste and shortly after felt sick. Suspected of having been poisoned, he was immediately removed to the garrison hospital, where every effort that medical skill could have made was of no avail; the unfortunate man died at five o'clock next morning. The inquest on the body was held on the same day, but the jury have not as yet come to their decision. Meanwhile the contents of the stomach of the deceased have been sent by bangby, for examination by the Government Chemical Examiner at Madras. The perpetrator of the deed is supposed to be a young man, married only two months ago to the deceased's niece; and suspicion is strong that he has been enticed to it, by a bribe, by a Mussulman who keeps a coachyard, and lets conveyances on hire. This man is heavily in debt to the deceased, and a day or two previous there was some dispute between himself and the deceased. Both these individuals are in custody. A second tragedy occurred the same evening. A Hindoo sepoy, of the 3rd regiment Madras Light Infantry, was found hung to a tree. The deceased made his escape from the hospital the night previous. The cause of this suicidal act is supposed to be from jealousy; his wife was young, whose fidelity he suspected during his absence whilst sick in the hospital.—Departed from Cannanore this day, Captain C. Perrin, to assume command of the detachment of H.M.'s 66th regiment at Molleapooram, v. Captain J. S. Verschoyle, who returns to regimental head quarters. -All the talk now is of the discovery of a port near Cochin, in which ships can ride through the S.W. monsoon.—Englishman.

SALEM .- On his way to the Neilgherries Sir W. Denison was presented with an address by the inhabitants of Salem, where he spent a few days. A correspondent of the Indian Statesman describes the welcome he received from the labourers in the hills at Goondoor. He was received by a great body of the mullialers, all carrying branches of the palm tree, and shouting their joyous cry of "Govintha," and saluting him in their peculiar form of prostration. Higher up, at the entrance of the first coffee estate, which belongs to Mr. Fischer, he was received by the workmen under dress stated several local wants. Sir W. Denison. in reply, congratulated the inhabitants on the result of their experiment in establishing a municipal system.

HYDERABAD, August 2.—Our Resident's judicious proceedings in reference to the Nizam's conduct towares Mootyar ool-moolk have been approved by the Viceroy. The Robillas are again trouble-some in Heley. Necessary orders have been issued by the Durbar to punish them for their misconduct. The Resident has invented an ice-making machine for supplying ice to our troops. The weather is delightfully pleasant.

Hone Kone, August 12.—The London mail of June 27th arrived here on the 3rd instant.

The past fortnight has been somewhat eventful, both as regards China and Japan.

In the latter country the feeling which has al-attack upon the residence of the British Ambassador on the 5th of last month. The various members of legation, including at this time Messrs. Oliphant, Russell (nephew of the Foreign Secretary), and G. S. Morrison, were roused from sleep about two in the morning of the day named, by the assault upon their quarters of a band of ruffians, who, there is some reason think, were suborned by some of the powerful opposition nobles who lately retired from power upon the "foreign" question. only casualties, however, that are reported consist of one wound in the head received by Mr. Morrison, and a more severe wound in the left arm received by Mr. Oliphant. The Japanese guard fought bravely, and saved the entire Embassy. Mr. Harris and the other ambassadors were unmolested. Our minister immediately called upon H. M. S. Ring love to supply him with a guard, and preparations were being made for the The Governor of Yedo has informed Mr. Alcock that he cannot guarantee his safety unless he takes shelter within the citadel. Other accounts state that Japan is on the brink of a revolution: it is to be feared that the residence of foreigners in the country will, in that event, be made use of as a party " cry."

At Pekin matters remain as when we last wrote. The Prussian minister had not got a treaty; it is said that the point in dispute was, the date of his beginning to reside in Pekin, the Chinese Govern ment wishing to defer that event as long as they could; this looks bad.

From the three northern Ports (Tien-tsin, New-chwang, and Tang-chow) we have no very encouraging news to report. At Tien-tsin the heat has been excessive, and the rate of morta lity, in consequence, has been about ten per diem. From New-chwang we learn that the brig Emma had been lost, all hands saved. The native population in the neighbourhood of this port are described as lawless and intractable. A gentleman attached to the consulate there was recently wounded in a dangerous manner while riding about the country; he is said to have offered some interference in a case where two men were engaged in beating a woman, and his interference was resented in the manner referred to.

The latest news from Shanghai speaks of the rebels coming gradually nearer the city, and reports their strength at upwards of 100,000. The whole rebel question is rapidly becoming a matter of uneasiness to Europeans, and nothing whatever transpires to diminish the dislike with which we are steadily coming to view them.

But the one leading topic in China, from the most northern of the ports to Canton, for the past fortnight, has been the Chinese Customs, and the working of the new treaty. Both have given much dissatisfaction to the whole mercantile interest in the Far East, and the voice that has been raised against the existing abuses under both heads has been quite unanimous. It is most likely that some amelioration of the evils complained of will be made eventually; it is only to be regretted that the abuses have possession of the field, and, on that account, laying aside altogether the delays of official routine, much trouble will be experienced in dislodging them. This is the more to be regretted, since mercantile interests in China must continue to suffer greviously in the meantime, and the free supply of Chinese produce to the English market must be considerably impeded. Exporters from England will also come to feel the disadvantage they are placed at, and commerce will thus receive a blow from which it may take some time to recover. The matter has at length been taken up by the Chambers of Commerce, both at Shanghai and Hong Kong, and nothing should prevent its being fully inquired into, with a view to discovering at whose door the blame rests.

From the Yang-tsze river we hear of several lisasters to vessels trading between Shanghai and Hankow; on the 19th ult. the Manila was wrecked on a quicksand eight miles to the north of Starling Island. The Rajah is on shore five ers by a certain party in the nation took form in an | we have intelligence of the Chusan being aground on a sandbank near Bush Island; and that the Cosmopolite is also ashore in the Yang-tsze. All these casualties are solely attributable to the late flooding of the river, which is now beginning to abate; no blame whatever is assigned to the commanders and officers of the respective vessels. Nankin is still closely invested by Imperial troops; there is no battle of consequence to record for the last fortnight; the general impression seems to be that the rebels have been gathering themselves up for an effort, and that before next mail there may be important news to send home regarding them.

At Tai-wan-foo, in Formosa, a consul, Mr.

Robert Swinhoe, interpreter to the Amoy consulate, has taken up his residence, and in future there will be regular monthly communication, by means of a gunboat, between that newly-opened port and Amoy. Formosa is not at present very attractive in a mercantile point of view, but the country is productive, and only requires that its resources should be developed.

From Canton there are reports of the neighbouring country having been flooded, and many populous districts almost entirely submerged. The affair of the magistrate sentenced to be imprisoned for using torture has not created so much stir among the Chinese of his district as at first appeared likely.

In local matters there is little to record, except two meetings of some importance-one to consider the Canton claims; the other a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce specially summoned to consider the question of the Chinese Customs. This latter meeting was adjourned, in order that members might give their maturest consideration to the papers laid on the table, and to the subject generally. By next mail it is probable that the conclusion arrived at by the Chamber will he known.

We have had a remarkably mild summer as yet, milder than previous years, and still more mproved by pleasant breezes. This is all the improved by pleasant breezes. more striking when we consider the present condition of other parts of China in regard to temperature. At Tien-tsin, which was so long icebound last winter, the thermometer is now at 112 degrees in the shade, and the mortality, as mentioned above, is from 10 to 12 per diem; at Shanghai the number of deaths has been large, and the heat excessive; at Fuhchau it was 97 in the shade; at Saigon, the Frenchmen are dying at the rate of eight or nine per diem; while in Hong Kong the weather has been quite pleasant, and the mortality not in excess of ordinary times. It would thus appear that Hong Kong is at present the sanatorium of China. - Overland China Mail.

JAPAN.

The following narrative of the attack on the British Legation appears in the North China Herald of the 20th July :- On the 4th instant (July) the whole party, excepting Mr. de Wit (the Netherlands Consul General), proceeded to Yedo, being met half way at a place called Kavasaki, by the whole staff of the Legation; Mr. Oliphant, newly arrived Secretary of Legation; Mr. Russell (a nephew of the Secretary for Foreign Affairs), also just arrived in Japan, and other gentlemen-an easy occasion, had it been gought, to dispose at one coup of ministers, consuls, and attachés.

They were allowed, however, to reach Yedo in safety, and to secure an instalment of that rest which they doubtless needed after 33 consecutive days' journeying. Soon after dinner, on the evening of the 5th, the chief rose from the table to retire, saying that the day just closing had been the most fatiguing of all (owing to the multitudinous affairs to be attended to), and he had so many hours of sleep to recover. The rest of the company also retired. They, however, shortly assembled again in the garden to admire the comet which dispersing clouds exposed to view. Whilst they were so engaged, a murderous band of ruffians or heroes (in whichever light they ways been more or less manifested against foreign miles to the west of Nankin; and more recently may be viewed) was approaching its unconscious who were awake were disturbed by sounds as of wrangling and conflict, which mingled in the dreams of those who as yet but lightly slept; but they were sounds which did not admit of continued slumber, whose terrific significance could not but open the drowsiest eyes. The Legation is a streggling sort of bungalow, open to the garden at the back, and having passages leading through from stables, kitchens, and, in fact, any direction. At the front is a large portico door, a feature of all temple architecture, - but except to those who come in that particular direction no obstacle to free entrance or exit. A Japanese house consists of a roof supported upon beams and wooden posts, divided into rooms and passages by paper screens which slide in grooves between the posts. The transverse beams are generally at a height of about five feet six inches from the floor. Such a building is the Temple at Yedo occupied by the British Legation. minister's bed-room is at the rear corner looking out on the garden, and just beyond the dining and drawing rooms, which do so likewise. The ether bed-rooms are mostly on either side of a tortuous passage leading from the entrance door to the dining room. Just beyond the entrance door is a chamber of the priests, opening by a screen into the hall or main passage. Here Mr. Morrison's Chinese servant was sleeping.

The noise which aroused the sleepers, and awakened all to the impending peril, was a determined effort to burst open the main door, upon which (as described) the blows fell like the discharge of musketry. While yet the door stood fast, the Chinaman saw the screen of the priests room slide open, and a man, in complete armour, with sword in hand, come forward. He did not want to see more, but with great presence of mind crept on (in the direction the assassin must proceed) to arouse his master. The man turning into a side room afforded him a few moments start, which were invaluable. He handed sword and pistol to his master, who at the same moment heard Mr. Oliphant in the passage calling for assistance. Mr. Oliphant, it seems, occupied a more distant room, and on hearing the neise of what he thought was a brawl, ran in the direction, armed only with a heavy hunting whip. In the passage he ran against the two foremost assailants, and must have then immediately received a wound (which is on the right shoulder). Taken in every way at a disadvantage, he bravely kept them at bay with his heavy whip, they being protected by the darkness behind them, he exposed by the light of a lamp which they had not yet reached; for they extinguished every light as they approached. Hearing the call of Mr. Oliphant, Mr. Morrison drew aside his screen and found himself beside the parties striking and cutting at each other (Mr. Russell and Mr. Wirgman were approaching, but quite unarmed). He fired at both the assailants, one being seen to fall back [his body, shot through the breast, was afterwards found in the garden], but the other, protected by his armour, was unhurt, and succeeded in again wounding Mr. Oliphant on the left wrist, and Mr. Morrison on the head. Cuts upon the posts and transverse beams of the passage showed marks of blows which had missed them and the protection they had received from the smallness of the space. Sensible of having been wounded, and knowing "out of Court" the usual nature of a Japanese sword-out, the sensations of these gentlemen cannot have been agreeable. The darkness, intensified by the flashes from the pistol, rendered it difficult for the assailed to see their enemies or the effect upon them; but it is certain that after the retaliation blows, intended to be avenging blows, were struck, the latter retreated by a side passage, leaving drops of blood and bloody finger-marks upon their track. They kicked down a screen of the room from which they were fired upon, and in which there was a lamp burning, evidently to lighten their way down the passage; and passing another bed-room one of them must have entered it; a book upon the table was cut half through, the mosquito curtains thrust through in a most malicious manner. Bv this time, which must have passed quicker than the narration, the six occupants of the building were assembled in the verandah beyond the drawing-room, entirely ignorant of the number of their assailants or the direction in which they would come, anticipating only a final struggle and immediate slaughter. Of the six one was completely disabled, and amongst the rest were only two revolvers and two or three swords,-one a dress sword, not a bad weapon for a single encounter, but less serviceable against a rush of heavily armed foes. So with a revolver,-when your antagonists emerge from shelter at three or four paces distance, and do not hesitate to rush on, you are quick if you can give them a second shot, but you will be slain with three undischarged; in this condition, and without a thought of rescue, the windows of an adjoining room were heard to yield to the blows of violent assault, the glass crashed and the framework was smashed in, and then the angle of a passage alone separated the attacking and the attacked. The intervening room was well lighted, and the whole side opened on to the gardenwhich was considered the best position for defence; there would be space for fighting at close quarters and from the darkness the assassins could be fired upon as they approached through the lighted room; but to the surprise of all they did not come, and silence soon ensued. The passage from the room into which they last penetrated led (unlighted) in one direction to the hall door and out by the priests' room, and in the other into the dining-room by the lamps of which it was strongly lighted. It is difficult to suppose they missed their way, in the choice between a dark and a light passage, yet they took the former. The inference is, that they had in turn become assailed by the Japanese guards, and thought only of retreat-an inference not destroyed by the fact of their having knocked over furniture and inflicted some wild blows in the same and an adjoining chamber in their route; but supported by the siege of the main door having been raised, the assailants failing to penetrate in that direction, they only succeeded in driving holes between the heavy cross beams. Here, too, they were probably dispersed by the somewhat tardy, but nevertheless effective arrival of the Japanese soldiery. These now filled the grounds, to the number, probably, of two or three hundred, and with the exception of an occasional cry of "Look out, look out!" when a fugitive Looning (bandit) broke loose, there was no further sign of danger. Two gentlemen of the Legation lived in a cottage in another part of the grounds, to inquire after whom messengers were sent as soon as possible. Some anxiety was felt at the non-return of these after unreasonable delay; at length it was ascertained that these gentlemen had not even been threatened. and were ignorant of the nature of the disturbance until after the arrival of the guards to protect them. Inquiries were also made with satisfactory result as to the safety of the American Probably the British Envoy was the object of the attack, but that would aggravate rather than otherwise the fate of any falling that he might be reached, and it would certainly be no consolation either to the sufferers or their friends: but doubtless, according to their degree, any member of the British Legation would have been a valued sacrifice. A second surprise (if allowed) will not probably prove such a complete failure.

I have not been able to gather at what precise time or in what direction the Japanese assistance first arrived, but most probably as pointed out in the foregoing: nor is there any clear clue to the exact number of the assassins. At the moment of attack it was of course impossible even to surmise their numbers, the details would suggest fourteen or fifteen, (or possibly a few more), say the two who were actually encountered, two to four who smashed through the glass windows, and from five to ten at the front door. There is no evidence of any others either entering or endeavouring to enter the house, and it is impossible to conceive their doing so without penetrating to the drawing room, to which one main passage victims. In less than an hour thereafter those cut an inch deep into it; the mattrass was also the casualties suggest any great numbers—five Loonings were killed and seven soldiers wounded, some very severely. [The authorities also are said to have made a return of killed-but this may have been to exaggerate the value of their assistance (the wounded were seen).] One of the officers' grooms was also killed. On entering the grounds the assassing cut down two gatekeepers, and passing through the kitchens demanded of a native servant "where these foreigners were to be found;" on his denying any knowledge, they wounded him mortally with their swords. One of the priests likewise was cut down but was not killed, and is doing well. Amongst themselves, the Japanese think very little of death and wounds, affrays are so common; the importance of the present event is the rank of the intended victim, the Representative of the most powerful of Sovereigns, and the audacity of the attempt. Their deliverance must indeed have been felt by all to have been most providential.

On the next day Mr. Alcock and the whole party visited the wounded soldiers. In must have been a sad sight to see these poor fellows suffering, in obedience to orders, for foreigners with whom they had no personal sympathy. It is said their expression was very passive, but lightened up when spoken to, with an appearance of goodwill rather than otherwise towards the persons for whom they had bled; they willingly pointed out the position of their wounds, and acknowledged the thanks which were expressed for their effective aid. The bodies of the slain assassins remained where they fell, laid low by tremendous gashes of the nature which it was their intention to have inflicted on our countrymen. Besides mangled arms and other wounds, the mortal blow seemed generally at the back of the head, through skull and jaws and tongue to the teeth-horrible to look at, but of course attended with instantaneous death. Close in the neighbourhood of the Legation is a suburb called Sinagawa, in a tea-house of which the assassing are found to have held a debauch previous to their undertaking. The Government is sure to obtain information, but the question is, whether they will communicate it to the foreign authori-The immediate peril past, the diplomatio difficulties commence, and these are almost more formidable than the former; they require certainly much more endurance. Admiral Hope is expected here in a few days with two ships.

P.S.—I have just received another letter from Yokuhama, which says "a Japanese merchant arrived here about noon of the day after the attack," so that he must have left Yedo soon after sunrise. He gave a foreign acquaintance many details, which could only have been learned from some of the escaped band. He stated that he had passed the previous day in Sinagawa, the suburb near the Legation; that a band of thirty or forty men had been knocking about all day, ending by a debauch, some of them in a particular tea-house kept by an old retainer of Prince Mito, and the usual haunt of his people; that they paid their bill of thirty itziboes, and went forth to the rendezvous, the gate of the Legation. Here all were to have assembled at the tolling of a bell, which occurred nightly at the same hour in a neighbouring cemetery. Before the time, however, a dog within the gate commenced to bark. Those who were ready thought it was a foreign dog, and that they were discovered. They, therefore, on the gatekeeper refusing to open, forced their way in through the side palings, cut him down, and killed the dog. He also said that the village officers had informed the police during the day of the presence of the suspicious band. truth of this man's statement is evinced by the facts that the entry was effected in the way said, that the gatekeeper was cut down, and the dog lay killed just within the gate. The question becomes important how all these and doubtless further details should be known throughout the village while the blood was still warm in the veins of those who fell. The speedy arrival of effective aid would also almost imply that the Government were cut across as with a razor, and a pine bed- leads, the side ones only being intricat the onee, was forewarned. It is said that the usual guard post two inches thick was broken by a blow which being lighted and the others dark. Neither would on the grounds being called on for aid, refused, saying that their duty was to write-in fact, to spy and not to fight.

The following is a copy of a circular letter addressed to the foreign representatives in Yedo, by her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary, which we give as authentic, though not official :-

H.M.'s LEGATION, Yedo, July 6th, 1861. SIR,-Last night, between eleven and twelve o'clock, the British Legation was suddenly at tacked and an entrance effected at several points simultaneously by armed bands of Japanese, said by some to be Loonins, and by others, Prince of Mito's men. Two of the members of the establishment, Mr. Oliphant and Mr. Morrison, were met in a passage, and both wounded, the first, I am sorry to say, very severely, when a momentary diversion was effected by a shot from Mr. Morrison's revolver, which appeared to have taken effect. A few minutes later, the same or another division of the assassins sought to effect an entrance to the apartments occupied by myself, by breaking through and hacking in pieces some glass doors opening on to another suite, having mistaken their way. To this alone, under Providence, we probably owe our lives, for several minutes were thus lost to them, at the end of which, some of the Yacannis or Daimio's guard appear to have come to the spot, and the assailants were finally driven out of the house after having penetrated into nearly every room except my own, leaving traces of their presence by slashing at all the beds and furniture. Marks of blood were found in various directions, and a prolonged conflict took place outside in the avenue and approaches to the Legation, with the officers and men on service.

Such a deed of atrocity, perpetrated in the capital of a Government to which foreign representatives are accredited by the Western Powers, needs no comment. I only feel it a duty to communicate to my colleagues the facts for their guidance and information; and to acquaint them that, as a temporary measure, I have ordered up H.M.S. Ringdove, and caused a guard of men to What measures it may be expedient be landed. to adopt for the future security of this and the other Legations in Vedo, and the maintenance of those international rights and immunities so grievously attacked, becomes a serious consideration; and one the pressing importance of which cannot well be overlooked. But on this part of the subject I shall be glad to enter into further communication with you and the rest of my colleagues, should you feel disposed to favour me with your views. -I have, &c., BUTHERFORD ALCOCK.

COOLY EMIGRATION .- A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette writes from Asserghur to that journal as follows:—" If you have ever visited the district of Candeish, you would have learnt that it was one of the finest cotton-growing districts in India. The soil, too, is peculiarly rich everywhere, and, as the district is hilly and the water runs by percolation freely off the choice localities, there is that freedom from a stagnation of water which is so obnoxious to cotton plant cultivation. This Candeish territory is undercultivated. Its population is very scanty, and there are thousands of acres lying fallow, or rather in waste, which require only the presence of European capitalists and well-paid ryots to render the soil teeming with the vegetation so beloved of Manchester. The Home Government recently expressed a desire that encouragement should be given to the cultivation of cotton in India: immediately afterwards, they suggest the expediency of urging coolie emigration to the Mauritius and Ceylon, &c. This procedure can only be accounted for by the well known ignorance, on the part of the European administrators at home, of all matters appertaining to India. We require, in fact, all the coolies and lower class of labourers that can be obtained in the country; this district is very far under populated, if we wish to cultivate cotton; and European merchants of property who would venture their resources in cotton cultivation in this very fertile cotton district, would, I think, find a difficulty, even at high wages, in getting good labourers."

With reference to the first question I observe that, in the 6th clause of your general order No. 332 of April 10, and in the 13th clause of the gen. order of the Gov. gen. of the same date, soldiers volunteering for general service have the option of choosing whether their future pension shall be reckoned according to those of the Indian forces. I am of opinion that the soldiers electing the latter electronstructure. are entitled to all benefits for themselves or their families claimable under the Indian regulations, including those of Lord Clive's Fund. I am also of opinion that, under a liberal construction of clauses opinion that, under a meetal construction of chauses 65 of the general order, and of the paras, of my despatches (para, 12 of No. 27, and para, 14 of 28), on which it was founded, the officers of H.M.'s Indian forces electing general service do not forfeit for themselves or their families the benefits which they would have derived in the local service from Lord

A PRINCELY JOB?

Now that the Messrs. Schlagentweit have completed their scientific explorations in the Himalayas, and are engaged in laying the results of their laborious researches before the public. the question is raised, by whose authority such a large sum of money has been placed at the disposal of foreigners previously unknown in this country. It is stated that not less than £30,000 has already been expended, and that £10,000 will be required in addition before the accounts connected with this expedition are finally wound up. From the first appointment of these gentlemen it has been felt that a positive wrong and a cruel insult were inflicted on the many civil and military officers in the service of the late East India Company, who were at least as competent as the strangers to undertake the task assigned to the latter. Especially unjust was it to ignore what had already been done towards obtaining a magnetical survey of India by the Company's own servants, and to confide that delicate operation to comparatively untried men, who had not the shadow of a claim to such an invidious distinction. Until quite recently it was supposed that General Sabine and Sir Roderick Murchison were chiefly responsible for this unhappy selection, and even Dr. Hooker did not altogether escape a certain degree of unpopularity under the imputation of having given an unmerited preference to foreigners over his own fellow-countrymen. It now appears, however, that these distinguished savans had nothing whatever to do with the original appointment, but were merely invited to suggest a series of instructions for the guidance of the expedition. Dr. Hooker, indeed, not only repudiates all share in the responsibility, but dwells with some bitterness on the unfair treatment experienced by the Company's own officers. The question is therefore asked more emphatically than ever, to whom is the country indebted for the probable expenditure of £40,000, the returns for which appear to be slight and far from satisfactory? No positive answer has yet been given, and probably never will be, but suspicions point to an illustrious personage with a strongly-marked partiality for everything German, and whose influence with a late and highly-esteemed Directorand at that time, we believe, Chairman-of the Company was paramount over every other consideration but personal honour. It is confidently whispered, in short, that the national gratitude in this instance is due to the same inventive genius and cultured taste that produced the shakoes of our infantry, and the treeless gardens at Kensington Gore. We do not, of course, vouch for the fact, but such is the generally accredited rumour.

A SCIOLIST ON INDIA.

WE are indebted to Mr. John Bourne, C.E., for the latest and one of the happiest illustrations of the truth that "a little knowledge is a dangerous thing." Having paid two short visits to Scinde and the Punjab in furtherance of his abortive attempt to improve the navigation of the Indus, he now presumes to deliver his opinions in an oracular manner on all that pertains to the colonisation of India, and in particular takes upon himself to lecture, in no measured terms, upon the entire system of administration. His views are dogmatically stated in a letter addressed to Thomas Bazley, Esq., M.P., and headed "The Cotton Crisis, and How to Meet it." After premising that, in common with many others, he had long anticipated a violent interruption to the supply of cotton from the United States, he proceeds to show that "India is the quarter to which we can alone look for prompt, large, and practical relief." One reason of this is the abundance of labour in that country, whereas it is notorious that there are large tracts of naturally fertile land either wholly or in part uncultivated, because of the deficiency of labourers. The encouragement given to Coolie emigration is accepted by Mr. Bourne as conclusive evidence of "the jealousy with which the Indian Government regards the settlement of Europeans in India," forgetful of the fact that the treaty with the French, at least, was negociated by the Home Government without reference to that of India. We agree with him, however, in his proposition that "India can never become a permanent source of supply for the cotton which England wants, unless the production of this cotton is directed, as in America, by English enterprise, and is aided by English capital." "In India, as in America," he continues, "we must have intelligent and energetic men acting as cotton planters, who will employ native labour under scientific supervision, who will introduce capital to increase the productiveness of the soil, and who will establish all necessary apparatus for suitably cleaning and packing the cotton after it has grown." All this is perfectly true, nor can we satisfactorily answer his scornful inquiry as to where capitalists are to be found willing to submit to the indignities hitherto heaped upon European settlers by the Bengal Government. But it is quite absurd to talk of India being colonised by an English population; and equally unjust to sneer at the pains taken to make Englishmen fully acquainted with the difficulty of preserving their health in that ungenial climate. "But wherefore," he asks, "all this suspicious solicitude for the health of English immigrants? In all other colonies immigrants are left to find such matters out for themselves." In the first place India is not a colony at all, but without raising any such quibbling objections it may be fairly answered that the climate of other countries to which the tide of emigration flows is not unfavourable to the European constitution; and, moreover, when the exodus began very little was known, one way or the other, regarding those unexplored regions. In the case of India, however, it was very different. Long experience had taught not only medical men, but all who had ever lived more than a few years in the plains, that no European constitution could with impunity brave exposure to either the hot winds or the rains. Mr. Bourne is certainly climate is quite as congenial to the constitution of an English population as England itself." Even in the plains there is nothing, he says, in the climate to prevent the English official "from living there from youth to age," and therefore these "hollow objections" are "only another evidence of that covert repugnance to European immigration which, though constantly denied by words, is constantly demonstrated by facts." But although the English official does contrive to live in the plains it is almost invariably at the expense of his health. notwithstanding occasional visits to more temperate regions; nor is he, as a rule, required to expose himself in the same manner that would be necessary for a cultivator of the soil. Mr. Bourne, indeed, appeals to his personal experience as having been twice in India without suffering the slightest inconvenience, but he prudently omits to state the duration of each visit. He further states that sixty English workmen whom he sent to Kurrachee "worked the same hours there as in England without any ill result-though this proceeding was reprobated by the Government officials there as an inconvenient innovation." Here again he. fails to give the all-important data: besides, it is well known that for the first year after their arrival in India Europeans may take liberties with themselves which they would not dream of hazarding at a later period of their sojourn.

Having thus proved to his own satisfaction that India is as healthy as any other part of the world, Mr. Bourne proceeds to point out the principal impediments to its colonisation. These are " the state of the land tenure, the disgraceful condition of the courts of law, the defective state of the police, and the want of a local machinery for local objects." At the first glance we were not a little disposed to admit the force of these objections, had he not ventured upon fuller explanations of his meaning. "The principal revenue of India," as he correctly states, "is derived from the land." But then he goes on to say that "the theory there, as in England, is that all the land in the country belongs to the State, and it is leased out to the occupants upon the best terms which can be obtained." Surely Mr. Bourne does not mean his readers to understand that such is the case in this country! It is more important, however, to hold up to the reprobation of all just men his proposition that "as it is greatly to the interest of the Government that English skill and capital should be attracted into India, holdings of land should be given to Englishmen in preference to natives, and the land should be granted on such terms as to induce them to settle in the country. * * * The land in the hands of the Government should therefore be put up to auction and sold to the highest bidder, subject to a moderate, and, as far as practicable, a uniform landtax, which land-tax should pay all the expenses of the State after its military expenditure has been reduced in consequence of the security afforded by English immigrants." It is not easy, indeed, to reconcile this recommendation of a land-tax with the dogma enunciated in the previous sentence that "it is quite indispensable that the land shall be alienated from the Government in perpetuity, so as to create a class of lauded gentry who may each have an interest in the improvement of his estate." Therefore they should pay a landthe first to discover that in the Punjab "the tax! "It would be highly desirable," Mr.

Bourne unblushingly continues, "that these estates should be acquired by English instead of by native proprietors, to which end the sale of them should take place in England; full information as to the extent of these estates, the quality of the land, and other particulars being previously published for general information." It is difficult to repress one's indignation at such a barefaced proposal to supplant the natives in their own land. And this from a member of the Manchester school! Of that school which makes such a parade of its universal philanthropy, and prattles about equality of rights and free trade! It is no more, indeed, than might be expected from their innate egotism, their canting Christianity, their deeply-engrained selfishness; but Mr. Bourne is, we believe, the first who has possessed sufficient cynicism to openly avow their true principles and motives. Fierce and implacable as Azrael, he declares that "the laws and the persons that at present hinder the influx of British settlers, must be promptly and remorselessly swept away." The Courts of Law are "in a most unsatisfactory condition," in a great measure, apparently, because the proceedings are "conducted in the vernacular, with the introduction of so many Persian phrases as to make the jargon hardly intelligible, even to the natives themselves." This is, unhappily, too true, but what is the remedy proposed by Mr. Bazley's friend and correspondent? It is simply the substitution of the English language-as if that would be more intelligible to the natives. Not that Mr. Bourne condescends to take much heed of their interests—all that he cares about is "the successful settlement of the English in India." To attain this end there are five things to be done. First, all impediments are to be removed, "whether in the law or in the offi cials." Secondly, every collector is to furnish plans and all particulars relating to the estates and lands in his collectorate. Thirdly, railway and other public companies are to be invited to acquire tracts of land, to be afterwards sold to their shareholders or to others. Fourthly, "the whole of the English soldiers sent to India should be sent out with the understanding that they are not to be brought home again, but that after a moderate period of service they shall be settled on tracts of land on the frontier, which they shall hold rent free in perpetuity, on the sole condition that they and their successors shall render military service for it when required." We have given the ipsissima verba of the fourth prescription, lest we should be suspected of exaggeration or caricature. What becomes of the objections to a local army of which we heard so much only twelve months ago? And which is the frontier that is to be thus settled by our emeriti? For how many generations would military service be rendered by the unfortunate settlers on the Indus? Again, what is to become of the present occupiers of the soil? After all, what does it matter? Manchester must and will have cotton, even though, Fifthly, the waste lands should be given, not only gratuitously, but with a bonus to "such persons as might be disposed to reclaim them." It is not, however, to be supposed that the English manufacturer is prepared to pay such a price for cotton as cotton. He is not going to allow anything for want of skill, or badness of roads, or length of carriage. Let the cultivator lose by the transaction, if necessary; but on no account must the profits of the manufacturer be diminished, or the price of his goods enhanced. The Indian Government must, therefore, be called upon to propound a plan for supplying Lancashire with cheap cotton, and for making India "an acceptable place of abode to English settlers." "If they have no adequate expedient for this end, there is nothing else for it but to turn them out, and to put in others who can resolve this question"-to wit, John Bourne, Esq., C.E. If the ministry contest this point, they too are to be summarily dismissed, and "the Conservatives, led on by Lord Stanley, and the Manchester party," are to reign in their stead. Angels and ministers of grace deliver us from such a union! The Conservative cause has suffered enough from its supposed sympathy with Papacy, but a coalition with the Manchester faction would be a degradation to which that great party is not likely to submit. Mokanna has now lifted his veil, and the face is not that of a prophet inspired from on high. It is disfigured by earthly passions and gross desires,

With features horribler than Hell e'er trac'd On its own brood;—no Demon of the Waste, No churchyard Ghoul, caught lingering in the light Of the blest sun, e'er blasted human sight With lineaments so foul.

The natives of India will now understand what sort of " progress," what sort of " development" it is they may expect if ever this thoroughly selfish and ignoble faction should gain the ascendancy in the British Cabinet. Like the aborigines in the United States, they would simply be improved off the face of the univarsal airth."

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE STAFF CORPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,-Be so good as to answer the following question, important, I think, to officers at home about to enter the Indian Staff Corps. An officer obtains leave for three years, on m.c., under the old furlough regulations, having chosen them many years ago, when the option was first given by Lord Dalhousie. He now gets placed on the Staff Corps, in which officers are to be under the new regulations. Were he to be changed to these, his leave would be curtailed to eighteen or twenty months, and the benefit of the option just alluded to destroyed as regards leave in India, &c. Can this be the case, or does he simply remain by the old, having chosen them, and obtained leave under them ?-Yours faithfully,

MADRAS ARMY.

[An officer entering the Staff Corps accepts all the rules of that corps, and is amenable to them, and them only, without reference to previous engagements of any kind. This is quite fair. It is optional to join the Staff Corps, or to volunteer for general or for local service. If the Staff Corps be elected, it must be without reservation.-ED. A.I.M.

A SOP FOR THE HOME SERVICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL." -The Secretary of State for India has ac-SIR,corded to the Indian army a boon which you designate, in your paper of 9th inst., as "a sop." Allow me to express a hope that he will extend it to the Home Service. There are many old servants whose position is altered, and prospects is prepared to pay such a price for cotton as would render its cultivation remunerative as compared with that of other crops. What he wants is not cotton at any price, but cheap being then ignorant what would be the effect of jun, Mr. W. Campbell, Capt. Clumkings, Major and Mrs. Old-

The words of your leader in reference changes. to the Indian army are singularly applicable:-"To those who regret the change of masters, or see no good opening for themselves, under the new conditions of promotion above a certain rank, a pension or a bonus, reckoned according to years of service, would hold out a fair inducement to make way. * " "-I am, your most obedient ONE WHO IS INTERESTED. servant.

Assistant Adjutant-general at Head Quarters.

AND

J. F. COLLIER, Esq.,

Of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Horse Guards, October 12, 1860.

His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief has been pleased to sanction the publication of "A Manual of Military Law," by Colonel Pipon, Assistant Adjutant-General to the Forces, which he considers will be a most useful addition to the books required by regulation to be in the possession of the Officers of the Army. It contains much instructive matter.

PREFACE.

The Mutiny Act and Articles of War having undergone considerable amendment in the present Session of Parliament, it has appeared to the authors a tting opportunity to lay before the military profession a concise treatise on the laws under which they serve.

In so doing they have not confined their attention to Courts-martial, but have endeavoured to provide the soldier of every rank and every service with the means of ascertaining his privileges as well as his duties and liabilities.

The Acts relating to the Militia have all been enumerated, but their bulk renders it impossible to give them at length in a work like the present. The Government having pledged themselves to consolidate the Militia laws next Session, perhaps there may then be some hope of presenting them to the reader in a comprehensive form. The Militia Bill of the present session, as it introduces some new and important provisions, is given at length in the Appendix.

A full abstract of the Laws affecting Volunteers and Yeomanry Corps occupies a separate chapter, and the Act whereby they are enabled to acquire lands for practice grounds (which at the time these words are written is yet before Parliament), will likewise be added.

A shorter and more popular notice of these Acts might have been more agreeable to the majority of readers, but in the hope of making this book useful as a book of reference, not only to Volunteers, but to magistrates and other civil dignitaries, it has been deemed more advantageous to ensure accuracy by quoting the words of the enactments, than by curtailment to risk the omission of important matter. Any reader disinclined to peruse the Acts at length, may find any subject on which he desires to inform himself by reference to the Index.

The question of Tolls on the Metropolitan Bridges having lately excited some controversy, a notice of the exemption clauses in the several Acts will be found in the Appendix, where also the late General Order relative to retired pay to Adjutants of Volunteers has been subjoined.

The authors feel that they owe some apology for publishing a law book in the present novel form; but after much consideration and many friendly suggestions, they have preferred to compress matter which would well have filled a more bulky volume, into this handy and inexpensive shape, in order to bring it within the reach of every one.

Before concluding this preface, the authors are bound to record their obligations to that very useful and elaborate work, "Hough's Military Precedents," without the assistance of which their labour would have been much extended. They have also to acknowledge the assistance of "Simmons on Courts-martial;" "D'Aguilar on Courts-martial;" and H. B. Thompson's "Military Forces of Great Britain."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE investiture of Sir Hugh Rose with the insignia of the most exalted Order of the Star of India, and the ravages of the cholera in the Punjaub, constitute the chief news brought by the Bombay Mail of the 12th September. H.M.'s 51st and 94th Regiments, stationed at Meean Meer, have especially suffered from that terrible pestilence. By the morning of the 30th August the Royal Artillery had lost 14 men; the Bengal Artillery the same number; the 51st Foot, 185; a wing of the 94th, 137; and the 5th European Cavalry, 25; besides 13 women and 17 children. The virulence of the disease, however, had by that time exhausted itself, and fresh cases were both fewer in number and of a milder character. Among the victims was Lieut.-Col. Irby, of H.M.'s 51st.

It is a relief to turn from this disheartening prospect to glance at the gay doings at the Government House on the occasion of the recent honour conferred upon Sir Hugh Rose, o.c.s. Full particulars of the ceremony will be found in the next page; the whole affair appears to have past off exceedingly well, except that the silk and velvet robes which the Viceroy should have worn as Grand Master of the Order happened to be on board a steamer that was overdue.

The Commander-in-Chief's General Order on the employment of Indian officers, which we give in another column, has been severely criticised by the local press as altogether uncalled for. Those officers have certainly little reason to congratulate themselves on the recognition their services have received at the hands of the supreme military authorities in this country. Laudantur et algent.

It is stated that the Madras army is to be immediately reduced to the extent of twelve regiments of native infantry. We again furnish a long list of officers, chiefly on the Bengal establishment, who have elected to serve in the Staff Corps; and we may take advantage of this opportunity to answer two questions that have been submitted to us. The names of officers who go to the Staff are not removed from the cadres of their respective regiments, but remain on them (in italies), to regulate the promotion of their juniors. This was dis-tinctly stated in the Amalgamation Order. The Military Finance Department has been inally arranged as follows:—Col. C. Balfour, c.B., Chief of Department; Capt. G. B. Malleson, Secretary to Chief; G. W. Kellner, B. H. Hollingbery, and A. P. Simkins, Esqrs., Assistant Secretaries.

The rains appear to have been unusually heavy in all parts of India, and in Bombay the fall was 104 up to the departure of the mail. At Benares a very severe earthquake, accompanied by a tremendous hailstorm, had caused fearful destruction of life and property -upwards of two hundred natives being buried beneath the ruins of their houses.

On the 26th of August, while the Commander-in-Chief was being installed a Knight of the new Order, a meeting of natives, including several forgers, was being held for the purpose of getting up a petition to the Secretary of State for India, for the removal of Sir tary of State for India, for the removal of Sir Mordaunt Wells from the Calcutta Bench. That learned judge has given unpardonable offence to the Bengalees by daring to speak the plain truth, and by endeavouring to suppress the habitual practice of perjury and falsification of legal documents.

The Rev. James Long having expiated his gross fault in connection with the "Nil Darpan" publication, by undergoing a months' pan" publication, by undergoing a months' imprisonment, was liberated on the 24th August, and is about to return to this country, and will no doubt be heard of in Exeter Hall. We fear that he will not speak of the Planters with as much kindness, sympathy, and humour, as Mr. Spurgeon did of the Gorilla.

Mr. Seton-Karr, we may remark, has a second time tendered the resignation of his seat in the Legislative Council; but the Governor-general has declined to accept it.

The Cabul correspondent of the Delhi Gazette states that on the 1st of August cholera was raging at Candahar, 600 to 700 persons perishing daily.

Among our advertisements will be seen a notification to the effect that about Midsummer of 1862 an examination of candidates for the Indian Civil Service will be held in London. If duly qualified, the eighty best will be selected for the final examination in native languages, the general principles of jurisprudence and the elements of Hindu and Mahommedan Law, Political Economy, and Indian History and Geography, which will take place in the year 1863.

Sir William O'Shaughnessy, the founder of the electric telegraph system throughout India, is, we believe, about to resign the service. His retirement will be a matter of regret in many auarters.

THE ORDER OF THE STAR OF INDIA. INVESTITURE OF SIR HUGH ROSE.

The first investiture of the new Order was held with all due pomp and ceremonial of state at Government house on the 26th August. At eleven o'clock the large assemblage of European gentlemen, military and civilian, who had been invited to attend, passing through the guard of honour formed by the grenadiers of H.M.s 75th Regiment, found the great hall prepared for the occasion, along both sides of which the crowd in attendance formed, leaving the centre free for approach to the throne, which was placed at the upper end. Gradually the throne-room filled with groups of the higher military and civil officers of the Government, with a few native princes and chiefs. Precisely at eleven, his Excellency Sir Hugh Rose arrived with an escort of Lahore Light Horse, and immediately after the guard presented arms, and his Excellency the Viceroy, preceded by the usual brilliant staff and native attendants, passed up the hall to the throne. His Excellency himself wore the collar and decorations of the Order, which we have before described, and which are very beautiful in their effect. As soon as the Viceroy had taken his stand on the dais of the throne, the guard again presented arms, and the Commander in Chief with his staff advanced up the hall in like manner, and saluted the Viceroy. Lord Canning then, in that clear tone and regal style which is characteristic of him on such occasions, spoke as follows :-

"GENERAL SIR HUGH ROSE,-I have received the "GENERAL SIR HUGH ROSE,—I have received the Queen's commands to present to your Excellency her Majesty's grant of the dignity of a Knight of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India; an Order declared by her Majesty to be instituted as a public and signal testimony of her regard for the princes, chiefs, and people of her Indian Empire, as a commemoration of her resolution to take upon herself the government of the British territories in India and as ward conspicuous merit and loyalty.

"The Secretary will read the grant."

(The grant was here read by the Secretary, Col. Durand, c.B.)

The Secretary having read the warrant, Lord Canning proceeded to invest Sir Hugh with the collar, star, and ribbon of the Order, saying:-

"I now deliver the grant into your Excellency's hands.

"It is the gracious intention of the Queen that in the execution of her commands nothing should be omitted which may serve to testify her Majesty's consideration for an officer who has by his devotion and distinguished services merited this mark of his and distinguished services merited this mark of his sovereign's royal favour, and which may at the same time tend to show all due respect and veneration for her Majesty's said Most Exalted Order. "Therefore, in the presence of this assembly summoned for the purpose, I now, in the name and on behalf of the Queen, invest your Excellency with the Insignia of the Star of India; and I earnestly hope that your Excellency may long live to wear on your breast these emblems of high honour which her Majesty has been graciously pleased to bestow upon you in recognition of your great services rendered to her Crown in India."

The band then struck up the National Anthem, which was the signal for a royal salute from the fort, and the Viceroy left the throne by the upper exit. The whole scene was a magnificent one and the ceremonial as imposing as became the occasion: the conventional sombre hue of English dress occasionally being relieved by the preponderance of colour given by the numerous military and civil uniforms, with here and there a native gentleman in all the glories of as much gold and jewellery as he could fairly carry; and even the simplicity of the white muslin of austere Brahmins, like the Rajah Radhakant Deb, gave a pleasant relief to the more brilliant costumes. At each end of the transverse throne-room proper, a space had been set apart for the ladies of the Court, and few more strikingly beautiful scenes could be met with in any state displays than when the gallant Sir Hugh advanced to Lady Canning and the bright throng of ladies surrounding her, to receive her congratulations, with the insignia of his new and well deserved honours upon him. -Englishman.

CONSOLIDATED STAFF SALARIES.

For some time past a committee has been sitting in Calcutta, consisting of the various secretaries and heads of departments, for the purpose of drawing up a scale of consolidated salaries for members of the staff corps. The controllers of military finance in the three presidencies have been asked to report on the subject, and a decision will soon be arrived at by the committee and published authoritatively by Government. What scale the committee may ultimately adopt we know not, but it will interest our military readers to learn the nature of the recommendations made to its members by one of the controllers. The full details we do not feel at liberty to publish, as, however liberal and at the same time just they may be, and however likely it is they will be sanctioned, having been approved of by Colonel Balfour, we do not wish to excite false hopes on the one side nor to embarrass Government on the other.

The scheme to which we refer, classifying all military appointments which are on the same footing, calculates them at the highest rate, as if held by a major-general, and makes a gradation list for the other ranks according to the following scale, which approximates to that contained in the Royal warrant as nearly as the use of even numbers will admit. Thus although the difference between lieutenant-colonel and major-general is Rs. 470, between major and lieutenant-colonel Rs. 190, between captain and major Rs. 280, between lieutenant and captain Rs. 150, yet, in order to fix the new consolidated salaries at sums of fifties or hundreds, the difference is thus calculated-between lieutenant-colonel and major-general Rs. 450, between major and lieutenant-colonel Rs. 200, between captain and major 250, between lieutenant and captain Rs.150. The pay of the deputies and assistants has been arranged on the same plan; but in calculating their staff salary, the proportion which their salaries ought to bear to those of their chiefs, rather than the present rates, is taken into account. Thus, the officers holding the appointment of adjutantgeneral, commissary-general, judge advocate-general, controller of military finance, inspectorgeneral of ordnance, and quartermaster general, might receive pay according to their rank.

If a Maj. Gen. If a Bt. Col. or If a Ifa a Lieut. Col. Major Captain Rs. 3,000 Rs. 2,550 Rs. 2,350 Rs. 2,100 and their deputies, reckoning the Staff salary at Rs. 1,000-

If a Bt. Col If a Captain Lieut. Rs. 1,400 Rs. 1,250 Major Rs. 1,650 or a Lieut. Col. Rs. 1,850 Placing all the assistants or first assistants on the one level of Rs. 800, they would receive-

If a Bt. Col. If a If a Major Captain Lieut. Rs. 1,450 Rs. 1,200 Rs. 1,050 or a Lieut. Col. Rs. 1,650

The second or deputy assistants might be calculated at Rs. 600-

If a Lieut. Col. If a Major Captain Lieut. Rs. 1,250 Rs. 1,000 Rs. 850 Rs. 1,450 and the third assistants, styled in the Commissariat deputy assistants, might remain at the present rate of Rs. 500-

If a Lieut. Col. If a If a Ifa Major Captain Lieut. Rs. 1,150 Rs. 900 Rs. 750 or a Col. Rs. 1,350 While grades below might be reckoned at Rs. 300-

If a Lieut. Col. If a If a Major Rs. 950 Captain Rs. 700 Lient. Rs. 550 and those still lower at Rs. 100 all round.

The scheme proposes to treat the Military Secretary and Chief of the Military Finance Department like the Home Secretary and Chief of the Civil Finance Department. The Deputy and Civil Finance Department. Assistants in the Military Department should, on account of the importance of their duties, receive respectively, as Staff only, Rs. 1,200, Rs. 1,000, and Rs. 800. The Military Accountant, the Superintendent of the Cossipore Foundry, the Gunpowder Agent, the Superintendent treated like the Deputy Secretary. It is proposed to allow brigade majors at the rate of Rs. 450, as follows :--

If a Major If a Capt. Rs. 1,300 Rs. 1,100 ... Rs. 850 ... If a Capt. If a Lieut. Rs. 700 and to fix the Staff salaries of the Presidencypaymaster at Rs. 900, and of other deputy-paymasters at Rs. 600.

Of more importance to the army generally are the rates proposed for officers of irregular infantry and cavalry corps. Those which are still regular should still continue to receive pay at the old rates until converted into irregulars :-

	f a Bt. Col. r a Lt. Col.	If a Major.	If a Capt.	If a Lieut.
CAVALRY.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Commandant	1,500	1,300	1,050	900
Second in command	. –	950	700	550
Two senior attached	l
officers		_	550	400
Two junior do. do	. —		500	350
INFANTRY.			4
Commandant	1,400	1,200	1,000	850
Second in command	_	900	650	600
Two senior attached
officers			500	350
Two junior do. do		-	450	300

The scheme recommends that the adjutant should receive Rs. 180 per month, and the interpreter and quarter-master Rs. 120 in addition, while Rs. 100 per month should be allowed to cover all expenses for the repair of arms and accoutrements. House rent to officers on permanent duty at the Presidency should be given per month at the rate of Rs. 180 to general and field officers, Rs. 135 to captains, and Rs. 90 to subalterns. There should be no other charges, petty or contract, unless when an officer is ordered on special duty at the public expense.

We must repeat that the above are mere recommendations, which may or may not be adopted. Looking, as we do, on the staff corps as the most valuable boon given to India in return for the local army, and as likely to do more than rival the Civil Service in the course of time, we heartily approve of a liberal scale of salaries on some such scheme as that which we have indicated. But the more liberal the State is to officers whose appointments are necessary, the more stern should it be in lopping off every superfluous appointment and in exercising the strictest economy. One of the first results of the recent boulversement in the military departments is the appointment of Captain Malleson as secretary and of Messrs. R. H. Hollingberry, G. W. Kellner, and A. P. Simkins as assistant-secretaries in the military finance department. The first three gentlemen have richly deserved their promotion. Messrs. Hollingberry and Kellner are uncovenanted officers who, in the civil finance, army clothing, and stud departments, have accomplished reforms, one-half of which would have for ever established the reputation of men "in the service."-Friend of India.

THE MERIAH SACRIFICES.

It must be confessed that Captain McNeill's Report on the operations of the Agency for the Suppression of Meriah Sacrifices for the season ending May last is a very discouraging document. For more than twenty years have a number of able officers been doing their utmost in the way of persuasion, and, when necessary, by employing stronger measures, to put down this most atrocious custom. Over and over again has it been explained to chiefs and people with how much abhorrence the custom is regarded by all civilised men. And by giving special encouragement to their trade with the low country, by administering justice among them after the most approved patriarchal or Punjab fashion-" under a tree"-by these and by other means, has it been attempted to bribe them into civilisation, but in vain. Captain McNeill tells us that some of the Khonds frankly confessed that it was compulsion alone which prevented them from killing human beings as a propitiatory offering to their goddess; and some of the rescued Meriahs stated to him that the Khonds of another part of the country "openly acknowledged that the only reason which kept them from sacrificing was the of Studs, the Superintendent of Army Clothing yearly repeated visits of the agency, and that its and the Agent for Gun Carriages, should be discontinuance would be the signal for a return to the old state of things." These men, who so frankly acknowledge their bloodthirsty propensi-ties, are described as "more civilised" than their neighbours in Chinna Kimedy, who, it appears have recently added to their predilection for blood the habit of giving lying or evasive answers. "The Khonds of nearly every district in Chinna Kimedy," writes the agent, "when interrogated regarding the renouncement of the Meriah. instead of giving direct and distinct answers as formerly, endeavoured to avoid the question by giving evasive replies to the questions put to them, such as-How can we sacrifice Meriahs when the Sirkar has taken them away? Not-withstanding these assertions," it is added, "Lieut. Crawford succeeded in rescuing thirty Meriahs this season." And the total number rescued throughout the agency was fifty-three. These instances are in themselves sufficient to prove how little good, of a permanent character, has been effected by our past efforts. Nor, however humiliating this conclusion may be, is it to be wondered at. For, it must be borne in mind, that these sacrifices form a part of the religious faith of the sect of Khonds by whom they are practiced; until therefore that faith is destroyed, we can only expect a sullen acquiescence in orders prohibiting them. What the belief of the Khonds is. may be best told in the words of Mr. Kave. The quotation is doubtless familiar to many of our readers :-

"The Khonds are divided into two great sects. They have certain common articles of faith. They all believe that the Supreme Being, or God of Light, the source of all good, created for himself a consort, who became the Earth-Goddess, and was the source of all evil. The Supreme Being, the source of good, created the world and loved it, and the Earth-Goddess became issues or God's revolts. Then she Goddess became jenlous of God's people. Then she rebelled against the Supreme Being, and introduced moral and physical evil into the world, and from that time there was strife between the powers of Light and Darkness.

"And so far this is the common faith of the Khond."

Light and Darkness.

"And so far this is the common faith of the Khond tribes. But here begin the divergencies of sectarianism. The issue of this great strile between the powers of Light and Darkness is the grand subject of dispute between the two contending sects. The one believes that the God of Light utterly overcame the Earth Goddess and last ever since held her in the Earth-Goddess, and has ever since held her in thrall, employing her as the agent of his will—the instrument of his rule. The other holds that the Earth-Goddess is still unconquered; that she holds in her hands the balance of good and evil—that the destinies of man are under her control—and that whatever of happiness is vouchsafed to him is only by her sanction or concession, by the dispensation whatever of inspiniess is voticisated to him is only by her sanction or concession, by the dispensation of blessings in her own gift, or the withdrawal of that antagonism which might prevent their emanation from the God of Light. And thus regarding the supremacy of the Earth-Goddess, they recognise the necessity of a propitiation, and they believe that, only by the worship of the Power of Darkness, through the agency of human sacrifice, her favour can be purchased for the tribes.

"Therefore, by this one great sect of the Khonds, the abomination of human sacrifice is esteemed a sacred rite. The atoming efficacy of the sacrificial blood is an article of faith among these barbarous people, cherished with as much solemn conviction as it has been by some of the most civilised nations of the world. It is necessarily a very lively, operative faith, one that can never exist in a state of semi-animation; it must be everything or nothing to a faith, one that can never exist in a state of semi-animation; it must be everything or nothing to a man. If he entertain it at all, it must be a part of his daily life. It must enter largely into all his worldly calculations. The health of his children, the state of his crops, the condition of his flocks and herds, his immunity from the ravages of wild beasts, from the assaults of his enemies, from the storm-blast and the lightning-stroke, all depend upon the observance of this one ceremonial rite. To neglect it is, in the belief of these people, to draw down upon them the anger of the Earth-Goddess, and with it all human ills. Of all superstitions it is the most enslaving; for it is based on fear—ahiect fear of immediate retribution. fear—abject fear of immediate retribution. The worshipper of Tari Pennu, or the Earth-Goddess, dare not neglect the act of propitiation. All that he has is too immediately under her almighty control.

This graphic account of the Khond faith will enable such of our readers as have not made themselves acquainted with the subject to understand why, as detailed in the following extract from Captain McNeill's Report, five thousand Khonds determined last January to sacrifice a victim-a resolve which was only prevented at the last moment by the use of force:-

in the Karoonde and Jeppoor Khond Tracts, and the crops and cattle suffered much in consequence. The Khonds, dissatisfied and uneasy in their minds at the relinquishment of the Meriah, were only too anxious to revert to their long-cherished rite—and, anxious to revert to their long-cherished rite—and, with this object in view, they appealed to the Paut Rajah of Tooamool for permission to sacrifice, and asked him for a Meriah; this he declined to give, informing the Khonds that human sacrifices had been prohibited, and that he could not, and would not countenance any attempt at its revival, but at the same time offered buffaloes and sheep, but the offer was declined by the Khonds, who immediately after held a consultation at 'Bissomgherry' of Tooamool, when it was arranged that, be the consequences what they might, a public sacrifice should take place at the full moon of Poosoo, this being the usual time for these ceremonies.

"The question was then raised where a victim

"The question was then raised where a victim could be procured, as the Paut Rajah had refused his assistance, but the difficulty was got over by a Khond, named 'Bottybis Magee,' stating that he would hand over for sacrifice a 'Toorie,' who, though not purchased as a Meriah, was an Agrarian slave, purchased for five rupees. The offer having been accepted, the intended victim, an elderly woman, was removed to the village of Puckregoodah, and there heavily ironed.

"An attempt on the part of the Paut Rajah to rescue the intended victim was unsuccessful, as the Khonds, having received information of the Paut Result the intended victim was unsuccessful, as the Khonds, having received information of the Paut Rajah's intended visit, removed the Meriah, and secreted her on the Hills. Finding his own unaided endeavours unsuccessful, and as the rumour that many thousands of Khonds would assemble or were likely to assemble daily, became more frequent, the Paut Rajah sent me an express to that effect, and Paut Rajah sent me an express to that effect, and urgently requested the assistance of a sebundy guard. This express reached me on Friday, Jan. 25, at three P.M., while the Rajah of Kalahundy was paying his visit. Within an hour after receipt of the express, a guard of fifty-eight sebundies, under a trustworthy sirdar, started for Puckregoodah, and, after an arduous march of fifty-two miles, accomplished in thirty-eight hours, over a very hilly and rugged country, succeeded in rescuing the intended victim as she was being removed to the post erected for her immolation. The assembled Khonds, whose numbers amounted to at least 5,000, found themnumbers amounted to at least 5,000, found them-selves at the very last moment deprived of what they fancied no power could dispossess them, they having been knowingly and purposely kept in igno-rance of my presence in the neighbourhood by the Kassipoor people.

"Annoyed at this sudden and unexpected visit of "Annoyed at this studen and discrete visit of the sircar troops, a most determined attempt at rescue was made, but the sirdar of sebundies making a judicious disposition of his small party, and of fifty matchlockmen sent by the Paut Rajah, was enabled to defeat the attempt of the Khonds, though he was obliged in self-defence to fire when attacked by the whole of the assembled Khonds, who out-numbered the sebundes alone in the ratio of 100

Such an event as that above described, after so many years of active exertions to suppress the Meriah sacrifice, is the reverse of reassuring. And, seeing that past efforts have resulted in failure, the question as to how these tribes are to be dealt with in future is one of great interest. Captain McNeill can only suggest constant supervision and yearly visits to eradicate the great evil of infanticide (which is another of the barbarous practices of the Khonds) and of the Meriah. But we think his report shows that they are not insensible to the fear of punishment, and it might be worth while considering, therefore, whether the present comparatively light punishment of imprisonment should not be made more severe; whether in fact the offences should not be punished as are murders or attempts to murder, as the case might be. If this plan were adopted, after due warning had been given to the tribes, it is, we fancy, more than probable that the custom would cease. Its abandonment from a conviction of its sinfulness must be left to time, but if the perceptions of the Khonds were assisted by those two important agents in the work of civilisation—the hangman and the missionary—the period of its final extinction might be considerably hastened .- Mudras Athenœum.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE INVESTITURE OF SIR HUGH ROSE with the insignia of the Star of India, in Government House, on Monday, August 26th, did not, as a spectacle, come up to the expectations of the pub- who are most valuable, the men of high honour,

The ceremony should have taken place, like the last durbar, in the Marble Hall, instead of in the confined Throne Room, when the officials and residents of Calcutta who had been invited would have been able to see and to hear in comfort. Though the brevity of the ceremonial was disappointing, and the want of all that heraldic display which in England would have been associated with such an investiture was felt, the sight was impressive. Lord Canning was more agitated. and hesitated more in delivering the few words of his address than he has ever been known to do in the many durbars he has held. It was unfortunate that the silk and velvet robes which the Viceroy as Grand Master ought to have worn, and with which he should have invested the Commander-in-Chief, had not arrived, being in the missing Galle steamer. The most impressive part of the display was thus wanting. The insignia of the Order, with which the Knight was invested, and which the Viceroy himself wore as Grand Master, consist of a star, a badge, and a collar, the value of which is, as we have before stated, nearly £900. The star is of five points, in diamonds resting on blue enamelled ground, with the motto, "Heaven's light our guide" circumscribed in brilliants, and the whole surrounded by rays of gold. It is worn on the left breast of the coat. The badge is a cameo portrait of the Queen on a ruby ground, surrounded with a circle in which the motto is inscribed in rubies. This is surmounted by a star of five points in brilliants, and the whole is attached to a blue ribbon with white edges, to be worn over the right and under the left shoulder. The collar consists of the lotus flower alternating with crossed palm branches, set between two chains of gold, from the centre of which hangs a badge as above, surmounted by a crown .- Friend of India. SIR HUGH ROSE AND INDIAN OFFICERS .- We

(Friend of India) regret the publication by the Commander-in-Chief of the General Order on the employment of the officers of the late Indian army. Sir Hugh Rose, we doubt not, has been actuated by the best intentions, and at first sight it may seem a graceful act to issue such a manifesto on the occasion of his own investiture with the insignia of the first Indian Order of Knighthood. But we believe Sir Hugh's own reputation would have stood higher, and the officers to whom he addresses himself would have been better pleased, had his military advisers induced him to withhold such a General Order. It is unnecessary. If the Commander-in-Chief has been so liberal in dispensing his patronage to Indian officers, he may rest assured that he will receive full credit for doing what, after all, was only his duty. Any gracefulness which may have accompanied his patronage is at once dissipated by his evident anxiety to publish his disinterestedness to the world. The order is uncalled We by no means agree with Sir Hugh Rose that the list of Indian officers who have received appointments is a numerous one, or that anything but an approach to bare justice has been done to men who issued from a series of campaigns covered with glory, only to find their hopes disappointed and their career cut short. We should not, however, have alluded to the subject, were it not that we consider the results of the General Order of the 26th July, 1860, to have been, so far from "most satisfactory," most disastrous. We hailed that Order when it was issued as a pledge on the part of the Commanderin Chief that merit would generally be preferred to mere seniority and interest. But a system has resulted most demoralising to the officers of the army. "The trouble taken to ascertain the services of officers" has held out a premium to the merely mediocre man, who can stoop lowest to flatter his superiors and beg for testimonials of services, while it has repelled the highspirited officer, who disdains to ask for certificates like a menial out of employment, and who looks to the Adjutant-general's office and his superior officers as the guardians of his reputation. Under what we cannot better describe than the "chit" system, there are endless heartburnings, and the public service is deprived of the very men is because we feel assured Sir Hugh Rose cannot be aware that this is the tendency of the order of July, 1860, that we draw his attention to it. assure him that neither the army nor the public require a self-gratulatory general order to enable them to estimate aright the services of so distinguished a soldier.

WIND ENGINES .- At the last meeting of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society some papers were read on the introduction of wind engines into India to pump up water and irrigate the land. Mr. Peill, of London, has for some time been supplying engines of this description for irrigational purposes in England, as well as in Australia and New Zealand. Mr. Peill says, "If there is any wind at all, and you have water under the surface, it may be distributed night and day without labour or expense over the land." He suggests the formation of a society to subscribe about £3,000, for the erection of about twelve engines near Calcutta as an experiment. He offers to contribute £50 towards the expense. and anticipates a handsome return upon the outlay. Mr. Bingham, of Chynpore, doubts whether Peill's wind engine will be able to stand against the sudden gusts of Indian winds. A gentleman in Roorkee says similar engines could be turned out at the works there, and supplied at a much lower price than if made in England. Mr. B. Leslie, civil engineer, has taken out a patent for a water-raising wind engine. He was present at the meeting of the society, and explained the operation of the machine by a model.

RAILWAY GRIEVANCES.—The petition of the native passengers of the East Indian Railway represents their grievances in a much more sensible manner than that lately adopted by the inhabitants of Madras. They complain that the sun beats into the carriages, and the rain is liable to come in at all times. The carriages are con-The respectable though stantly overcrowded. poor natives who travel third class are mixed up with the lowest class of people, and both meet with the same contemptuous and harsh treatment from the railway subordinates. The memorialists do not confine themselves to complaints, they suggest remedies. They ask for inexpensive purdahs to the sides of the carriages to protect them from the sun and rain; native ticket collectors to expedite the process of collecting in Howrah; and the "separation of the decent portion of the third-class passengers from the lowest ranks, either by the creation of an intermediate class between the present second and third (for which they are willing to pay at the rate of one pice and a-half per mile), or of a cheap fourth class." We trust the effect of these demands will be to open the eyes of the railway authorities to the necessity for a fourth class. The petitioners make a significant admission when they say "they cannot but in justice state that insults from the native subordinates. who are generally Mahomedans or upcountry men, having no regard for the feelings of the people of Bengal, are more frequent than from the Europeans under whom they act." Civility has its price, like any other commodity, all over the world, but though you get less of it for three pies a mile than for eighteen, still you are entitled to some. But first and second class passengers have also their grievances, and not the least of them is the intolerable delay that takes place in starting from Howrah in the ferry. It takes as long, frequently, to get from Howrah to the Armenian Ghat as it does from Serampore to Howrah.

Morussil Courts .- A case came before the Calcutta Supreme Court on the 5th and 7th August, which reveals in an unmistakeable manner the dark dealings in Mofussil Courts. Inderchund Baboo brings an action against Summut Dass, his agent, for not accounting to him as principal, and to recover Rs. 3,270-10-6 as money received to the plaintiff's use. The defendant pleaded payment, and a set off amounting to a sum in excess of the plaintiff's demand. The plaintiff had a suit pending before the Bhaugul-pore Judge's Court, and sent defendant and Courts to keep the omlah pleased by giving them sweets." A sum of Rs. 3,500 was to have been paid to the omlah in case of success, but as the appeal was eventually dismissed the hoondees for this amount were returned, and are not involved in the present case. The defendant admits that he paid 1,000 rupees to the omlah. He gave five notes of Rs. 100 each, in halves, to the Sheristadar, two to the Nazir, two to the Peshcar, and one to the record-keeper. The Chief Justice, in remarking on the case, said, "both parties have shown themselves guilty of very disgraceful conduct." The Court expressed no opinion one way or other whether this money was actually paid over to the omlah as the defendant stated, but they thought it right to direct the evidence of the defendant to be taken down, in order that it might be transmitted to the Judge at Bhaugulpore and the Government for further investigation.

TRADE WITH THIBET .- The Indian Empire quotes the returns which Mr. B. Hodgson, when our resident at Khatmandu, obtained from the Nepaulese Government, of the trade between Thibet and British India through Nepaul. The imports were Rs. 356,000 of thirteen annas each in value, and the exports from Thibet into Nepaul were Rs. 727,400, or say the value of the whole trade thirty years ago was £100,000. The goods from India were chiefly broad-cloth, pearls and corals, and the Thibetan goods, gold and rock-salt. "The chief dyeing and cloth manufacturing towns in Eastern Thibet are Chitishur and Chitung, but they are so completely incapable of meeting the ordinary demand that an injunction is annually issued by the Lhassa Government prohibiting the sale of cloth to the general public until the whole of the Lamas of the Gelupa monasteries at Gendeng, Dephong and Sera, are supplied with the yearly clothing which they receive from the Government. Now at Gendeng there are 3,300 Lamas, at Dephong 7,700, and at Sera 5.500: so that these manufacturing towns are apparently unable to keep up a stock in hand of even 16,500 pieces of cloth, and the laity and Lamas of the less favoured monasteries are kept without cloth, whilst the requisite amount is being worked up."

An Exploring Party.-We trust the present eagerness for geographical exploring expeditions will continue. We see from the Hills that a party consisting of Lord W. Hay, Colonel Torrens, and Captain Clarke left Simla on the 17th July for Thibet and Cashmere. They intend to leave the beaten track at Kote Kangra, to cross the watershed through the Dunken pass, and over the river Singhey Chu into Thibet, which they must have reached by this time. "Their road then will lie along the right bank of the Singhey Chu direct to Leh, the great thoroughfare of commerce between Thibet, China, Turkistan, and Russia on one hand, and Cashmere, Punjab, and the plains of Hindustan on the other. From Leh, after a few marches further on the Thibet side, they re cross the watershed into Cashmere, and so home. Captain Clarke is a very successful amateur photographer."

THE OUDE TALOOKDARS .- We are glad to see Mr. Yule, the new Chief Commissioner of Oude, dealing honestly with the system of Talookdar magistrates. It is a novel experiment, and no good could come of his predecessor's plan of coddling it. Noticing the fact that nineteen appeals were made from twenty-one revenue decisions by Sirdar Bikram Singh, while of 917 criminal decisions only seven were appealed, Mr. Yule says "he is not inclined to depend much on any inferences from appeals, and their results; these admit of manipulation either way, but he is very much gratified with the opinion which the district officers have had cause to form of the proceedings of all the honorary assistant commissioners (with the above unfortunate exception), and he has no doubt of the general correctness and impartiality with which these gentlemen have performed the duties entrusted to them. The work may not seem much, but it is very good indeed to begin with." He notices with pleasure that in one division "it has always been the another mooktear to look after it. It appears in practice to refer cases to talookdars for decision, of the fund will be lodged.

manly modesty and strict conscientiousness. It | the evidence that "it is the custom in all the | though not invested with powers, and that many cases have thus been satisfactorily settled. candid and unrestrained intercourse between the district officer and the landed gentry is essential to the success of the talookdaree system, and to a good deal more than that."

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY .- A diagram issued by the Public Works Department shows that in 1860 on the East Indian Railway open for 248 miles, the largest income from passengers was owing to the Gya pilgrims in February and the Doorgah Poojah in October, when in one week special trains yielded Rs. 34,000, the third class 29,000, the second class 11,000, and the first class 4,500. The largest quantity of coal carried was in February, yielding Rs. 35,000, and of goods in December to the extent of Rs. 24,000.

THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL has moved at last. Mr. Grant has appointed a Committee consisting of Messrs. Wauchope and Montresor, Captain Raban and Mr. T. Prinsep as Secretary, to report on the introduction of the new constabulary into Bengal. No such Committee is needed, Sir Bartle Frere in his Bill, and the Police Commission of which Mr. Wauchope was a member, having already done the work. for even this amount of action we are thankful.

AEROLITES .- At the last monthly meeting of the Asiatic Society some interesting communications were made regarding aerolites which have fallen in various parts of the Sarun district. Three pieces of the stone were found, the largest at Peeprassee and the two smaller ones at Bullooah. about three miles distant. The smaller pieces were found to fit exactly on to one side of the larger piece. One of the natives who saw the aërolite fall said he was sitting in a field, together with a number of villagers on Sunday, the 12th of May, when they heard three loud reports, succeeded by a rumbling sound which gradually died away. At some distance they observed a cloud of dust rising from the ground. On proceeding to the spot they found the stone with the ground thrown out all around it. A similar account was given regarding the descent of the other stones.

CHOLERA IN THE PUNJAB .- The cholera is very much on the decrease, the number of deaths on the 30th August having considerably diminished, and very few new cases having occurred. In short, we may hope that the pestilence is stayed by God's blessing. The 51st are doing well, and the 94th suffering in a modified degree. The Artillery have had no cases for three days past. Up to the morning of the 30th August the return of deaths in the Meean Meer brigade was as follows :-

THE CALCUTTA FAMINE RELIEF COMMITTEE have now closed their operations. A meeting of the committee was held on the 22nd of August, when a special vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. H. W. I. Wood, for his unceasing exertions as honorary secretary; and also to the Bengal Printing Company, for grauitously executing all the printing work required by the committee. The total amount of subscriptions, both Indian and home, is Rs. 9,41,673, of which Rs. 689,13,7 consists of bills not yet realised. There has been a sum of Rs. 3,59,000 sent to Agra, and Rs. 5,75,000 to Lahore. The charges for advertising, &c., amount to Rs. 3,953,11 1, and there remains a balance of Rs. 7,673,5,9.

THE MYSORE GRANT .- The interest on fifty lakhs of rupees, invested in India Debentures by the Secretary of State to the credit of the Mysore Family Fund, has already been made payable in India. The Government of India, therefore, is now to pay to the Mysore Princes the sum of 38,000 rupees per mensem, or 16,000 rupees in excess of what those princes used to draw before. Sir Charles Wood intends shortly to appoint trustees,—of whom Prince Golam Mohamed is to be one—in whose custody the aforesaid securities

MILITARY FINANCE DEPARTMENT .- The remodelling of the Military Finance Department by the Government has resulted in the following arrangements, which, as regards the personnel, both covenanted and uncovenanted, seem to us excellent, and likely to ensure the highest efficiency for the important work to be done. Chief of the Military Finance Department, Colonel C. Balfour, C.B.; Secretary to the chief Military Finance Department, Captain G. B. Malleson; Assistant secretaries, G. W. Kellner, R. H. Hollingbery, and A. P. Simkins, Esquires. All these names are well known in connection with the financial, audit, and pay operations of the administration, and with such a body conducting the military portion of the State expenditure, there is every attainable certainty of the Government and the public being well and economically served .-Englishman.

COTTON CULTIVATION.—The useful little triglot paper, the People's Friend, mentions the visit paid to Etawah by Mr. P. Saunders, deputed to inspect the cotton districts of Northern India. After expatiating to the native traders on the great advantages likely to be secured by cotton cultivation at the present crisis, he was met by the following plain statement of obstacles:-the want of a good road towards Gwalior; the seizure of carts by Government servants and railway emthe irresponsibility of the zemindars, especially those living on the banks of rivers, in saving cotton from destruction when accidents by fire or water happen to it in transit; and, lastly, the want of a summary process for the recovery of advances made, and for the punishment of a dishonest contractor. The native, even more than the European, capitalist feels the want of a summary contract law.

NEW CAVALRY UNIFORMS .- The three new re giments of dragoons added to the British line by the conversion of the Company's Light Cavalry corps are to be uniformed in three colours, as fol--one regiment will wear a scarlet tunic; one a French grey; and the third a white. The headdress of the three regiments is to be a helmet of white felt, with brass mountings, and a ventilating aperture at top, similar to the helmet worn by the 6th Dragoon Guards, Carabineers, which is the most becoming and military-looking helmet in the British army. We have not heard, and per-haps it has not been decided, to which regiment each colour has been assigned. The clothing will be issued in the coming cold weather, when the new Cavalry corps are organised. The new Infantry regiments, formed from the Company's European corps, will be dressed in red tunics, similar to the rest of the British line. The changes in the Artillery uniform, consequent on its conversion, are trivial and inexpensive.

JEYPORE.-Mirza Kochuk Sooltan, the son of the ex-King of Delhi, who had concealed himself here for the last five months, has been apprehended on the 22nd Aug., at the information of a mookhbir. It is said that he was at the hospital for three months, but no one was able to recognise him as the ex-king's son. He had assumed the name Abdoolla Beg, and his two wives are also residing here. Another person, by the name of Secunder Khan, who was in the Government employ on the road establishment on a salary of fifteen rupees a month, has been apprehended on the suspicion of his being a prince of Delhi.— Delhi Gazette.

DELHI, August 26 .- One of the oldest inhabitants of Delhi died yesterday-Nawab Hussun Ally Khan, uncle of the late Nawab of Jhujjur. This chief was well-known and respected in former days by the European residents, but the mutiny sent him, like the others, under a cloud, and he has since been poor and needy. The late Joe Skinner used to call him the dooneea dar (man of the world), and although no evidence of his complicity in the horrors of 1857 exists, he was just the sort of person to shout with the

Mr. J. F. Cockburn has been appointed honorary assistant magistrate in Maunbhoom.

CHOLERA IN THE N.W.P.-The number of natives who have died of cholera in the Delhi district is 880. In Goorgaon, 1,173; in Kurnoul, 108. Elsewhere the mortality has been slight.

THE TREASURY AND THE BANK OF BENGAL. Arrangements are in progress for the transfer of the Treasury to the Bank of Bengal, but we Friend of India) do not think it probable that these arrangements can be so rapidly matured as stated by some of our contemporaries. The different denominations of the new currency notes will not be ready till the end of the year, the time when the bank must call in their circulation does not expire till March, and it is not likely that the Treasury will be abolished so abruptly as to cause public inconvenience. On the transfer being duly completed, the large Treasury building will then be available for public offices. Should the negotiations of Government for the Writer's-buildings not terminate successfully, it is understood that the large block of which Spence's Hotel forms a part will be purchased. With this, and a new pile opposite the Supreme Court corresponding to the Dalhousie Institute at the foot of Dhurumtollah, the public offices would be much more cheaply and conveniently accommodated, and the appearance of the vicinity of Government-house would be improved.

THE FRONTIER.—We have received, says the Englishman, special telegraphic intelligence from Dehra Islam Khan, that a serious affray has taken place between a number of Wuzeerees and some Sowars of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry, in which the Wuzeerees were defeated with some loss of life. In their retreat they made an attack upon a village, and then directly asked for terms of

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE FAMINE.—The distress from famine in the district of Quilon in South India has not yet been removed. After Colonel D. H. Stevenson had submitted to the Madras committee photographs showing the state of emaciation of the people a further grant was made. The total sum raised in Madras has been Rs. 73,425, of which Rs. 7,000 has been sent to Travancore and Rs. 43,000 to the North-West Provinces.

FRUITS OF IRRIGATION.-The Madras Government has sanctioned an increase of 23 lakhs of rupees in the rent assessment of the western Delta of the Godavery district, owing to the irrigation works.

Mr. H. A. Fletcher.—We notice the death of Mr. H. A. Fletcher, the agent and manager of the Madras Railway, on his way to Suez. The cause of his death is said to have been a sunstroke received in the Red Sea. He was much esteemed in Madras.

THE CINCHONA EXPERIMENT .- The Madras Times notices the progress of the Cinchons experiment, as reported by Mr. MacIvor in his letter to Government of 9th May. The present successful results have been attained, not by ad hering to any formal instructions, but by studying the plant in its new home, and experimenting on it. With much shade and moisture, and retentive soil, as in Java, and sowing in January, three to four per cent. of the seeds germinated. In March with a lighter soil 15 to 25 per cent. germinated. In April, in a soil composed entirely of burned earth, from 60 to 90 per cent. came up. There are now in the Ootacamund Gardens upwards of 2,000 plants in a flourishing condition. Some of the 463 imported plants are in the most luxuriant health. It is proposed to retain all the young plants at the gardens till June or July, 1862, the best season for planting, when from 50,000 to 80,000 will be ready to be planted out.

THE PARAMATS.—The Rangoon Times describes the habits of the Paramats of Burmah, a sect who can best be described as Buddhist Protestants. They seem to believe in the personality of the Deity, and in the principles of good and evil as distinct. Charity and peace are their great ethical tenets, and they are distinguished by their quiet, and by virtuous industry. They are to be found all over Burmah. The sect sprang into existence fifty years ago, and the then King Bodo was a Paramat,

THE MUGHS .- The Arakan News says the Mughs are now so wealthy, owing to the rice trade that they have become gentlemen farmers and despise menial labour, engaging Chittagong immigrants to till their fields. Many of them are shop-keepers and merchants, and the import trade of the province, amounting to £160,000 ayear, is chiefly in their hands. So much for the absence of caste and for using animal food. British rule has done for the Mughs on the North East what it is doing for the frontier tribes on the North West. A century ago both the Por-tuguese and ourselves found the Mughs most annoying enemies. They were as bold pirates as the Malays.

LIBEL CASE .- Some statements recently appeared in the Madras Times affecting the character of Mr. F. Johnson, the contractor of the Madras pier works. This gentleman brought an action for libel against the journal in the Supreme Court of Madras, laying the damages at Rs. 100,000. The case was called on the 23rd of July, and the counsel for the plaintiff stated that defendants had made an apology which was accepted. They further agreed to a verdict being entered with nominal damages, to pay the whole of the costs, and Rs. 3,000 as part of expenses incurred by plaintiff in sending out his agent to conduct his affairs. The counsel for the defendants handed the apology to the registrar, who read it aloud. All parties, including the presiding judge, were agreed that this was the most satisfactory termination to the case. In addition to this the Madras Times publishes in its leading columns a full and courteous apology to Mr. Johnson. The law costs, however, of that journal will amount, it is said, to £1,000.

GUILLOTINING.—The Madras Advertiser says a native was guillotined at the Grand Bazaar of Pondicherry on the 16th of July. He had recently become a Christian. His crime was the murder of an infant. An execution had not taken place in the settlement since 1825.

ORIENTAL RICE COMPANY .- The Rangoon Gazette publishes the prospectus of the Oriental Rice Company Limited, of which Messrs. Gladstone, Wyllie and Co. are agents. The company undertake to purchase unhusk and clean rice, and to sell it to shippers at a certain percentage above the market price of the coarse paddy.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS .- There is a rumour current in the Bazaar that H.M.'s 56th regiment are under orders to proceed to New Zealand, and that H.M.'s 95th Regiment from Poona are to replace them at Bombay.

RAILWAY FORT.—The Deccan Herald states that it is intended to erect a fort at the Sungum, near Poonah, to protect the railway, and keep up the communication between that town and Bombay, in the event of an emeute. What has come of the resolution to form earth forts in all the large stations of India, which was so much discussed in 1858?

-The Poona Observer understands that " great changes will take place in the Commissariat Department shortly. Col. D. Davidson, Commissary General, is about to retire at the end of October next, and Colonel C. Birdwood, who is now on furlough to Europe, will be made Commissary General; the retirement of Colonel G. Pope, the present Deputy Commissary General, will cause Major J. B. Dunsterville to succeed him in that appointment, and in the case of these appointments being confirmed, it is evidently clear that Major R. Shaw, who was Assistant Commissary General at Poona, and now Clothing Agent at Bombay, will be thrown out of the Department. We also understand that Major W. Gordon, the Assistant Commissary General, who had served with the Central India Field Force under Sir Hugh Rose, and who is now on furlough to England, does not intend to return to India.

BOMBAY ARTILLERY.—It is in contemplation to remove the company of artillery now stationed in Bombay to regimental head-quarters at Kirkee, This arrangement is, we believe, to be carried into effect to make room in Fort George for the establishment of the European General Hospital. Should this measure be adopted, the officer commanding the artillery in Bombay with his staff will not accompany the company to Kirkee, but remain in charge of the ordnance on the fort ramparts.

THE LATE REV. C. GREEN .- Some six thousand rupees have already been subscribed among the friends and congregation of the late Rev. Mr. Green, pastor of Trinity Chapel, for the purpose of founding a Green Scholarship in connection with the Indo-British Institution. Another subscription list is also in circulation with the view of obtaining a sufficient sum to erect a tablet to the memory of this truly good pastor. About five hundred rupees have been subscribed for this purpose.

BEHRAMIEE KERSAJEE, the Librarian of the United Service Institution at Poons, recently delivered a lecture on the ancient connection between the Indians and Persians. He thus traced their affinity from mythology. "The Yama of the Hindoos in most respects resembles the Yimo, or Jamshid, of the Persians. The Trita of the Hindoos is the same with the Thractano, or Feridun, of the Persians. The Janaven ceremony of the Hindoos resembles the Kusti ceremony of the Parsees. The Soma and the Homa ceremonies are also similar. The Yeds closely resemble, in language and metres, the most ancient and genuine productions of the Parsees, namely, the Gathas, or Songs. are various allusions made in the Vedic Hymns to the Hindoos having occupied the colder climates before their settlement in India. From the first Fargard of the Vendidad, in which "the winter of ten months' duration is assigned to Airyana Vaejo, thus pointing to a position far to the north, at a great distance from the Jaxartes. it is clear that the nations in question for a long time lived together somewhere near Bactria." He concluded his lecture with the aspiration, "let us preve by our intellectual pursuits, by our education, and by our habits and feelings, that, while we are one in blood with our European brethren, we are also one with them in mind and heart." The Asiatics must accept the faith of their younger Aryan brethren first. We are glad to see the important question of race and linguistic affinity discussed by native scholars who ought to be able to throw new light upon it.

The Ramosee received instructions not to allow the drum to be roughly handled, but "a respectable-looking Hindoo," in the ardour of his devotion, had thumped it so violently that the

The Ramosee brought the man up before the magistrate on a charge of assault, which was dismissed for want of evidence. Nothing will convince the mass of the Hindoos of the deceits practised upon them by the low class of officiating priests.

GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE.—During the session of 1860-61 there were eighty students in the various classes of the Grant Medical College. Bombay. The college has now been affiliated with the Bombay University, which, we trust, will exercise a healthy influence upon it, by making the matriculation examination a little more difficult than it has been for the last two years. The primary evil at the root of our useful medical schools in India, is the ignorance of English shown by students when they enter them. This has been now almost entirely cured in Bengal, chiefly through the strict entrance examinations of the Calcutta University.

Goa .- We (Times of India) hear from Goa that great dissatisfaction exists in the territory from the interference of the Governor-general, Viscount Torres-Novas, with the election of deputies to Cortes, in Portugal. The Portuguese colonies have had the right since 1822 of returning representatives to Cortes, and the Goa territory is divided, for electoral purposes, into the three divisions of Salsett, Bardez, and Goa proper. The elections in the first and last named divisions were peacefully conducted, the people re-electing their former representatives. The member for Bardez, however, having fallen under the displeasure of the constituency, the people determined to elect one of themselves, a native of Goa, as their new representative, and their choice fell upon Mr. Jose Julio Rodrigues, a gentleman of great experience, at present occupying a high post in Lisbon. For reasons we have not had explained, the choice was obnoxious to Viscount Torres-Novas, and by the aid, it is complained, of a military demonstration the Viscount has thrust a Captain J. M. Mello Mendouga upon the people as their member. Extreme indignation is expressed at the course that has been followed, and the city of Goa is perplexed by the unwarrantable and arbitrary proceeding of the Viceroy.

THE FIRST BOMBAY FUSILIERS .- There is a rumour that this regiment will probably leave India for home service in a few months.

CAPTAIN DODS, late of the Inam Commission, will leave shortly for Candeish, having been appointed to superintend the parceling out of the waste lands in that province to pensioners. This important movement has been long under consideration, and we are glad to see that at last a decision has been made.

THE CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA, has declared a dividend at the rate of ten per cent. per annum (free of income-tax) for the half year ending on the 30th June, 1861.

FREIGHTS.

To London, £1. 15s. to £2. 10s. To Liverpool, £1. 2s. 6d. to £2. 15s.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Sept. 12).—Cotton Piece Goods.—A good demand exists for 40-in. Grey Shirtings of 6, 7, and 81 lbs. weight, and the best makes obtained full and higher prices; the prices, however, close less steady; other weights are little inquired for, and the quotations show no improvement. Grey Longoloths are moderately inquired for, though prices show but little improvement. Grey Domestics, up to 16 lbs. of 80 to 99 yds. and short widths, are in good demand, and the prices have rallied. Grey Madapollams have improved a little in value and demand. Grey Jacconets are in steady inquiry at former prices. T Cloths are very steady in value, 6 lbs. and under move most readily. Grey Drills only of heavy kindis can be placed, but at no improvement in price. Grey Mulls remain neglected; good makes, however, are saleable at low figures. Grey Cambrics remain unaltered. Farms.—An active inquiry continu d to prevail for both Mule and Water Twist. Woollens are dull at former values. Metals.—Copper is in more active demand, and a good business has been done at advanced prices. Iron is also in good request, and has changed hands at our quotations. Yellow Metals sunchanged. Steel is duil for tubs, which are quoted lower, while fagots are inquired for at somewhat better rates. Speller without change. Lead firm and quiet. Quicksilver duil and lower.

Exports (Bombay, Sept. 12).—Cotton.—There has been but a smail business done in this staple during the past fortnight. Buyers do not seem disp sed to enter into operations for ready cotton, the stock of which is very small and of inferior quality, and available only without selection. New cotton commands a better demand, and is sought for future delivery; but no extensive transactions have taken place, in consequence of holders demanding extreme prices, which buyers are unwilling to concede. Since the arrival of the English mail of the 19th ultimo prices have undergone a slight decline, and speculation is less active among the natives. Oitseeth.—The market still continues bare of stocks, and although some inquiries are making for tuture delivery, they have not induced any sales, as the helders ask extreme prices. Linsred is firmly held. Rapeaced is similarly held for high prices. Sesame is not available in the market, and though firmly held is in little request. Coffee.—Mocha, which is arriving in small quantities, finds market for local consumntion. Mathor is not to be had. Pepper is inquired for by native shippers at higher rates. Sallpetre.—Mooitam is moderately inquired after at former prices. Scinde is quoted lower. Madder Root.—Not to be had at Market. Opium.—The upward tendency noticed in our last has continued, and since the receipt of the usual Galle telegram of commercial advices from China, business has been done at Rs. 30 to 40 advance over the rates last very of the supplies are moderate, and but for the absence of the usual specularive element from the market we ought to have seen better rates than those ruling at present, which are Rs. 1,540 for old drug.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, August 31.—One month only has now to elapse to bring us to the close of the coffee season of 1860-61. We have nothing to add to the remarks in our last issue, only one vessel having sailed. She took to London 7,738 cwts. of plantation coffee, and 1,979 native; total, 9,717.

In the Legislative Council considerable progress has been made with the various bills. The Volunteer Ordinance was, at the instance of the Governor, recommitted-Council restored to his Excellency the power of removal without reason assigned, and agreed to other changes which made the law acceptable to the executive. Instead of coming into force on 1st of October, as originally intended, the Ordinance is to operate when pro-claimed by the Governor. The Bankers' Bill has passed, so that Government will henceforth derive a evenue of 1 per cent. on the average circulation of paper money in the colony. The Joint-stock Companies Bill has passed through all the preliminary stages, has been referred to the law officers of the Crown, and will doubtless be passed at next meeting of Council. Mr. Lorenz's Police Courts Bill has been read a second time, and Council will consider it in committee on Wednesday next. It is understood that the Colonial Secretary will oppose the provision which permits appeals from the facts.-The unofficial members of Council have protested against the power of veto given to the Governor, in addition to his personal influence and his double vote in Council. The Galle Face Burial Ground question has been discussed in Council, and has excited much public attention in consequence of the painful scene witnessed at the funeral of Mrs. Leslie, mother-in-law of the Scotch chaplain. The funeral service was read outside the graveyard fence, in consequence of the acting senior colonial chaplain, as one of three trustees, having considered it "expedient" to enforce the conditions of certain trust deeds which exclude from the British burial ground all who do not profess the doctrine and discipline of the Church of England. All good men will agree that the conditions of such deeds are "more honoured in the breach than the observance." Presbyterians and Nonconformists are too numerous and too powerful to be subjected, as they have been, to systematic insult, through the medium of trust deeds granted in violation of those principles of religious liberty and equality which now command the adhesion of the mass of the community. The Presbyterian Church is really the Established Church of this colony, if there be any Established Church, and twothirds of the Europeans who have made Ceylon what it is, belong to this church. And yet, in addition to this graveyard matter, there is the distinction made of salaries, which in the case of Presbyterian chaplains are £150 lower than those paid to the Episcopal chaplains of equal standing.

Mr. Smart is pursuing his task of examining the railway routes. The railway question seems again to have gone into the limbo of uncertainty, for we hear nothing further of a tender from Messrs. Brassey. If the contractors will work only through the intervention of a company, there is no likelihood of progress, for, the very words "Railway Company" are an abomination in the ears of the people of Ceylon.

The weather continues to be very unusual,hot sunshine, keen winds and copious showers, taking their turns. The result at Colombo is the more or less prevalence of small pox, measles and hooping cough. - Overland Colombo Observer.

THE STRAITS.

NETHERLANDS INDIA .- By the Dutch mail steamer we (Singapore Free Press) have Java papers to the 14th August. A company has been formed at Samarang to carry a railway from that place through the plain of Damak to Souracarta and Djocjocarta. A great deal of rain has fallen over the whole of Java, and inundations have taken place in different places. In Banyumas and Pachitan, but especially in South Kediri, much damage has been done. In the last-named district, which suffered so severely from the floods in February, much destruction of life and property has again occurred. Eleven persons and two hundred cattle were drowned, nine desas, with two hundred and twenty-seven houses, have been laid waste, and a great quantity of paddy destroyed. The sugar cane and other crops have also been much in-

The accounts from Banjermassing are of the same nature as those received in previous months. Expeditions are sent out in different directions and destroy the enemy's bentings or stockades, but no sooner have the troops retired than the rebels again re-assemble in as great numbers as ever, and the same fruitless expeditions must be repeated. The troops are harrassed and many valuable lives lost, especially of officers, in these affairs, which appear to lead to no useful result.

Small-pox was committing great ravages in some parts of Moluccas. Amongst the coast population of Halmaheira, who have retired to the mountains, the disease is very fatal. The dead are left unburied, or are thrown into the rivers. At Kao on Halmaheira, an Alfura girl, of nine or ten years of age, was buried alive by her parents, because, being the first person on whom the disease was shown, she was considered the originator of it. Notwithstanding her prayers and entreaties to be taken to some other place and abandoned to her fate, the poor child was bound and thrown into the grave.

The Xulla islands had been visited by ten pirate prahus, which had done much mischief.

Eruptions of the volcanic mountain Nobo, on the south-east coast of Flores, took place on the 4th and 18th of May. The first eruption occurred at noon, and consisted of showers of ashes and reports like heavy discharges of cannon. The second was of a similar nature, and was accompanied by shocks of earthquake in a vertical direction.

Accounts from the Batu islands, on the west coast of Sumatra, state that earthquakes still continue to take place at the island of Simo. The scanty population remaining after the frightful occurrences of the 9th of March, had almost wholly forsaken the island.

Claims of Officers.

M.s Indian Service who have been placed out of employment by the late changes and reductions. All officers thus situated, and desirous of employment, are referred to the general order of the 26th July, 1860, and desired to frame their application in accordance with its instructions.

The results of the G. O. of the 26th July, 1860, have been most satisfactory.

The trouble taken to ascertain the services of officers has been more than repaid by the knowledge which it has give the C.-in-C. of the qualifications of officers under his command; by the means which or oncers under his command; by the means which it has afforded him of rewarding merit, and, at the same time, of placing officers in those positions where their qualifications can be turned to the best account for the good of the service.

The statements of services of all the officers on whom the C.-in-C. has conferred appointments, or promotions, prove that they have deserved them by good and gallant conduct in the field; or useful service out of it.

The little of the conferred service or useful service or the field of the conferred service out of it.

The list of these officers, publised in general orders, is a numerous one; and is most creditable to the

Two of these appointments his Excellency has al-

when he inspected them.

An Adjuntancy is a post to which all officers, desirious of making a career, should aspire. It is a good preparation for the Adjutant-general's department, or personal staff. A staff officer should be as efficient in the field as he is in the office. If he is one and not the other, he fails in his vocation by half. An Adjutancy makes officers acquainted with discipline; the character, feelings and requirements of soldiers; every description of drill, official business and correspondence, and military law. A good Adjutant is an officer of promise.

The C.-in-C. is most anxious to retain the services of the officers of her Majesty's Indian army vices of the officers of her Majesty's Indian army affected by the late changes, whose qualifications, military zeal, and Indian experience, render them valuable acquisitions to the service and to the State. Their loss would be a serious detriment to both. And in this sense, and for this reason, this general order is issued.

Sir Hugh Rose bears in mind how many enterprising spirits have been called to India by the field which it offers to honourable ambition; how many military capacities have been developed and formed by Indian service

Regulation of Cash Payments.

Foreign Dept., Fort William, July 30. FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

From Military Finance Department, to Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, No. 412a, dated the 12th July, 1861.

No. 412a, dated the 12th July, 1861.

With reference to Docket No. 647, dated 5th July, 1861, forwarding a Report from the Audit Board, dated 21st June, 1861, and Resolution No. 7,872, of 27th June, in the Financial Department, passed thereon, on the mode of inserting in the Public Accounts the charges for April, 1861, I have the honour to state that the object of the Audit Board's proceedings is to cause the cash payments made within the year to be considered the expenditure of the year. Now this is the principle on which the English Public Accounts are kept, but with this marked difference in its partial effect—viz., that in England the cash payments made within the year agree in most instances with the liabilities incurred within the year, and for which the grants are made, that is the pay of the troops for March being payable in England in March, the year's liabilities and the year's payments run together for the year ending in England the 31st March; the actual expenditure of the year is rightly closed with the disbursements of the year is rightly closed with the disbursements of the year is rightly closed with the disburse. ing in England the 31st March; the actual expenditure of the year is rightly closed with the disbursements of the year. In India, on the contrary, the payments for April's charges are made in arrears, those for April being only paid in May, and the year ending 80th April closes with the last month's charges undisbursed; that is, omitted from their accounts. So, in like manner, as respects payment for most of the supplies delivered in April, the ordinary practice being to pay the value thereof in arrears; thus the payments in the year do not cover the liabilities of the year, or, in other words, the charges disbursed in the year are not the charges of or for the year. The result of the Board of Audit's referthe year. The result of the Board of Audit's reference now affects the military estimates in a way which will not again occur; these estimates have been prepared in the only way which estimates could be drawn out on a calculation as to the probeen prepared in the only way which estimates could be drawn out on a calculation as to the probable liabilities arising between 1st May, 1861, and 30th April, 1862. In the month of April, 1861, there was a larger sum due for the pay, &c., of the army than that which will be due. For instance, I calculate that 120 lakhs were paid in April, 1861, and I hope only 100 lakhs will be required in April, 1862, the payments for 1861 being paid in May. It has been ruled that sums so paid fall into the accounts of the year 1861-62, instead of into those of 1860-61. of the year 1861-62, instead of into those of 1860-61. As the charges for April, 1861, will exceed those of April, 1862, by about twenty lakhs, the actual expenditure in 1861-62 will appear to be above the estimate for the military charges of 1861-62 to that amount, but in reality there will be no such excess for this alteration in the mode of exhibiting the cash dishursements which will only add the request of the cash of disbursements, which will only add the money out-lay to the accounts of 1861-62, instead of the past year 1860-61.

2. The great principle should, however, be kept in view, so that the payments and the charges of the year may be in unison. Any great discrepancy between these two transactions opens out wide difference and complications in the comparisons between the charges of one year and another; but I am willing to act on the decision of the Board of Audit. ever although it occasions a serious difference between the liabilities and payments of the year, and I must now endeavour to carry out the details so as to ensure a closer agreement between the expenditure and the liabilities.

Fort William, Aug. 16.—No. 716.—Under instructions from H.M.'s Sec. of State for India, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct that an uniform rule shall be established at the three Presi-dencies in accordance with the rule in England and elsewhere, by which captains of companies defray the cost of the repairs of arms out of the contingent allowance drawn by them.

Examination of Veterinary Surgeons.

Military Dept., Fort William, Aug. 19.—No. 722.— The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Rt. Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 278 of July 8, 1861, are published for general information :-

1. "Since the date of my despatch [June 7, 1861], 1. "Since the date of my despatch [June 7, 1861], No. 233, I have received a communication from the Secretary of State for War, enclosing a letter from the principal veterinary surgeon, Woolwich, who, with reference to the doubt expressed in your military letter, No. 41, dated 2nd April last, as to the practicability of examining veterinary surgeons in India, in order to test their fitness for promotion, expresses an opinion that it is very desirable that if the Royal Warrant of July 1, 1859, be adopted, it Berar.

should be fully carried out, and states that no difficulty was encountered in doing so, in the cases of the 2nd and 6th dragoon guards, both in India, the examinations being written and carried on confiden-tially between the officer in command of the regiment and himself.

2. "Lord Herbert concurs in the opinion that no sufficient ground has been shown for a modification of Clause 3 of the Warrant requiring veterinary surgeons to be examined as applied to India.

3. "Under the new organisation of the army in India, there will henceforth be no regimental employment for veterinary surgeons of the local service, but those now in the service may be promoted under the Royal Warrant of July 1, 1859, their examinations being conducted by means of written questions prepared by the principal veterinary surgeon in this country, in the mode above described. scribed.

4. "In carrying out this arrangement, a list of the veterinary surgeons who have served the required periods for promotion should be sent home from time to time, in order that the examination questions may be prepared and transmitted to India."

This cancels the decision communicated in letter from the Rt. Hon. the Secretary of State for India, dated 7th June last, published in G.G.O., No. 625 of July 16, 1861.

The Constabulary Police.

It having been determined to withdraw military guards from the duties of ordinary watchmen, and to replace them by constabulary policemen or special watchmen, their expenses being borne by the several military departments employing them, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct that monthly contingent bills shall be submitted by the heads of departments employing such police constables or watchmen; that the bills shall be supported by the vouchers of the officers supplying the police constables or watchmen, and by the declaration of the officers who hire them; that they have been employed for the period for which pay is drawn; and that this course is the most efficient and economical. The heads of departments will send in their bills in the form laid down by the Military Finance Departments to the divisional paymasters, who will disburse the amounts if properly vouched for. ### The Negapatam Industrial School.

The following Order of Government, dated Aug. 3, directs the abolition of this school:—

In his letter above recorded, the Collector of Tanjore suggests, for reasons therein given, the abolition of the Government School at Negapatam, and the conversion of the building, now occupied as such, into a cutchery for the Taluk of the station, and, also, for an office for the deputy collector in charge of the Salt Department.

The school was established in 1837 for the instruc-

The school was established in 1837 for the instruction of the offspring of the indigent Protestant population of the place, not only in reading, writing, and arithmetic, but as the prospectus, issued at the time, contemplated—in such trades and occupations as might enable them to earn their own livelihood; and, in sanctioning it, the Government expressed a hope that the school would eventually be self-sup-

From the report above referred to, which is confirmed by the Director of Public Instruction, it appears that the scheme, which has now had a trial of nearly twenty-four years, has not answered expectation. There exist, moreover, it is stated, mission as the Negapatam, which provide for the educations.

They direct, to abolish the institution in question. They direct, therefore, that it be closed on the 15th August, 1861. The collector will, accordingly, in conjunction with the director, take the necessary steps for this purpose, and dispose of the books, school furniture, &c., in

The director recommends that Mr. Trutwein, the head master of the school, be granted a gratuity of three months' salary. It is observed that, under the rules laid down by the Government of India in their Resolution of July 31, 1860, Financial Department, Mr. Trutwein is not entitled to any gratuity, his

Mr. Trutwein is not entitled to any gratuity, his period of service being less than five years.

In the concluding paragraph of his letter, Mr. Arbuthnot proposes that the sum—viz., Rs. 2,627 per annum, "saved by the abolition of this school, be transferred to the grant-in-aid fund, and that, in its disposal, special consideration be given to the claims of the schools now existing at Negapatam." This is approved and sanctioned. approved and sanctioned.

The question of appropriating the school-building to the purposes proposed by the collector will be considered in the Revenue Department.

Finding.—The Court finds the prisoner guilty of the charge preferred against him.
Revised sentence.—The Court having carefully re-Revised sentence.—The Court having carefully reconsidered its sentence, agreeably to the instructions contained in the Judge Advocate General's letter, and having taken into consideration the remarks contained in it, does now sentence the prisoner to imprisonment for two years, and further to make good at his own expense the loss sustained by her Majesty, in accordance with the provisions of the 22nd Sec. of Art. 20 and 21 Vict., Cap. 66.

Approved and confirmed,
W. R. MANSFIELD, Lieut.-gen., C. in C. Head-quarters. Poons. 3rd Sept.

Head-quarters, Poona, 3rd Sept. REMARKS BY THE C. IN C.

REMARKS BY THE C. IN C.

I regret that it is out of my power to accede to the prisoner's petition for mercy. It is absolutely necessary, for the safety of the State and the protection of individuals, that highly-trusted official men should be held severely responsible when they are convicted of using, on their own account, money committed to their charge, or of fraudulent breach of trust. I can discover no extenuating circumstances in this case.

In its first sentence the Court sentenced the prisoner to one year's imprisonment and hard labour.

soner to one year's imprisonment and hard labour. On its being pointed out to the Court that the latter on its seing pointed out to the court that the later part of the sentence was unlawful, under sec. 22 of 20 and 21 Vict., cap. 66, the sentence was modified to two years' imprisonment.

As it appears to me that the object of example will have been sufficiently met by the first sentence. of one year's imprisonment when divested of hard labour, I am willing to abate the term inflicted by F. S. Constant, arty., Hyderabad.

Officers comg. regts., brigades, and divisions, in imprisonment is remitted.

Courts Martial.

Poona, Sept. 9.—Several instances have been lately brought to the notice of the C. in C., of the meagreness and unsatisfactory want of thorough examination of witnesses in the proceedings of district court martial.

Such want of care, in the performance of a most important responsible duty, is alike prejudicial to the interests of discipline and to the right of prisoners to be fairly tried; in the one case extenuating circumstances and the value of circumstantial evidence in aid of the defence against the prosecution, are apt to be slurred over or to remain undiscovered altogether, while in the other the confirming authority is left without the means of making a decision which cumstances and the value of circumstantial evidence may be satisfactory to his own mind.

The weight of such considerations becomes the more evident from the fact, that a court martial can only be reassembled for revision of verdict and sentence, but not for the purpose of recording fresh evidence, however loose and unsatisfactory its original proceedings.

ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM.

The report of the directors states that the steamers and barges which were in preparation when the last report was presented have since been completed and despatched to India. Two of these steamers have safely arrived at Kurrachee, and the machinery of two others has safely arrived in Calcutta. No time will be lost in preparing to establish those vessels on the river. Some of the new vessels are swifter, and the others capable of carrying far larger cargoes than any vessels hitherto sent out for river traffic in India. The total cost of these steamers has been paid, as well as the charges for conveying them to India. The company has no outstanding debts whatever, and, when payment is received on account of insurances which will shortly become due, it will be seen that these expenses have been met without trenching sensibly on the proceeds of the call recently made. There is little doubt that cotton will be extensively cultivated in India, and the cargo vessels of this company are especially adapted to the duty of carrying large quantities of cheap merchandise with profit at low rates of freight. The recent agitation in India on the subject of the Incometax prostrated for the time all commercial operations there, and this, together with the great calamity of the famine in the North-west Provinces, told unfavourably upon some of the voyages of the steamer Sutlej, plying on the Indus. But this temporary depression has almost passed away, and that vessel has continued to run without interruption, with fair average freights, during one of the driest seasons on record, and consequently with the water in the river very low. consequence of this success, and of the arrival on the Indus of other vessels of the company, the directors have called upon the Government to discontinue their steamers on the Indus, which there is every reason to believe will now be done. The Indian Government has paid to this company the first year's subsidy for the navigation of the Indus, and it is hoped that a like payment for the current year may be received on its completion. Four steamers and ten barges have been sent to Calcutta for the Ganges traffic. Some of the barges have been launched, and are ready to begin work as soon as a steamer can be set up, and this it is fully anticipated will be the case by the close of the present year. Grants of suitable land have been obtained from the Government for the company's use. The directors have been fortunate in securing, on advantageous terms, a very eligible piece of ground in Calcutta for a buildingyard and workshops; a steam-engine and proper implements for the yard have been provided, and the business of the company there now progresses to the satisfaction of the Board. The different vessels which were in course of construction in this country having been completed and sent out, it is the intention of the managing director to proceed immediately to India to see the work of the company there vigorously pressed on.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

REGISTRATION OF NIJ-JOTE LANDS.

It is wonderful of how slow a growth is Indian legislation in matters of plain common sense. Acts that are not wanted, and Amendments that are wanted to render Acts not wanted intelligible, are spawned with marvellous fecundity, but there seems to be an insuperable obstacle in the way of practical measures of real public utility. The recent disturbances in the indigo districts have brought to lightthat is, to the knowledge of the official world, for non-officials have long been acquainted with the fact-that it was customary with zemindar planters to retain in their own occupation a certain quantity of land, to be cultivated by their own hired labourers. Sometimes, indeed, they found it inexpedient to plant the whole of this unlet portion of their estates, and, therefore, rented small or large lots to their regular tenants for some particular crop. So long as planters and ryots lived together in harmony there appears to have been considerable laxity in the measurement of such lands-the planter, however, usually acting with great indulgence and liberality towards all ryots who furnished him with the specified quantity of indigo. But after the rupture of all friendly ties the ryots took forcible possession of the planter's lands and cultivated them on their own account, but without paying any rent, or in any other way acknowledging his proprietary rights. Encouraged by their past success they now invent all sorts of excuses for the appropriation of these lands, and altogether deny the just claims of the European Zemindar. It was, therefore, suggested by the Landholders and Commercial Association of Calcutta that the collector of each district should be empowered to "register the fact of possession of property when called upon to do so, that on any subsequent occasion he should acknowledge that the registration was made, and that on the production of his certificate to that effect, the magistrate and police should be bound to keep the party so registered in possession until a competent court decided that his tenure was invalid and incomplete, and that he was not the proper party to be in possession." Nothing could be more fair and reasonable than this proposition, but the Sudder Court, wedded to old usages, and averse to any change for the better-especially if the innovation be for the benefit of the "adventurers"-could see no necessity for such a measure, as a Registration Law was already in existence. Of course they closed their eyes to the fact that this law applies only to the registry of deeds, and does not at all embrace the point at issue. The object in view, as explained by Mr. Lushington, in his official letter to the Legislative Member for Bengal, is threefold:-

"First, to enable holders to have all objections members, but rather as in obedience to some provisionally settled whilst there is time to before the sowing season is over, instead of suffering as now they sometimes suffer, the loss of a season, whilst an unfounded objection is under what is called summary enquiry. Second, to enable holders called summary enquiry. Second, to enable holders to obtain, once for all, such provisional security in a tenure as will enable the police to maintain them in possession until ousted by the decision of a court of law. Both these objects are undeniably just and reasonable; both, if attained, by substituting stabi-lity and certainty for what now seems to depend very much on the accident of no quarrels either with remindars or ryots arising, will secure private enter-prise and the public peace. And third,—which is an object of no less importance,—to secure lawful holders as much as possible from unjust claims. It be brought forward when they will either injure the opposite party, or benefit the unjust claimant, but will only involve a legal decision in favour of the rightful possessors; than when, as now, they can be brought forward at a time when the mere claim will be ruinous to the rightful possessor, and when the unjust disputant loses nothing when the case is given against him."

The attainment of these three objects is certainly "worth much trouble and thought in endeavouring to mature a law that will have such beneficial consequences." The Sudder Court, however, discovered that this could not be done without encountering many difficulties, and they were little disposed to depart from their ordinary routine duties for the sake of " common people," who were not even so much as uncovenanted servants of the Government. Verily, these old gentlemen are the Bourbons of India. They forget nothing and learn nothing. . They still seem to regard themselves as an exclusive and Brahminical caste, unmindful of the fact that their prestige has been swept away, and that a new order of men and things has succeeded to their effete traditions. The Lieutenant-governor, however, was not to be diverted by their anile objections from adopting a course, not only just, and even necessary in itself, but which might possibly diminish the odium he has brought upon himself by his recent escapades. He persisted in his adherence to the landholders' suggestions, and instructed Mr. Seton-Karr to frame a law for the demarcation and maintenance of the legal rights of both planters and ryots, and, consequently, for the removal of a fruitful cause of misunderstanding and chronic irritation. The Board of Revenue, we should have said, is not a whit wiser in its generation than the Sudder Court, but is equally in want of the infusion of new blood.

RAILWAY GUARANTEES.

Mr. James Mills has rendered good service to shareholders in Indian Railway and Flotilla Companies by directing public attention to the true nature of the Government guarantees. It is unhappily indisputable that an immense sum of money has been fruitlessly squandered on the construction of the different lines now in progress; for which the Government is chiefly to be blamed. The Directors have had very little power over the works in India, and, indeed, it seldom happens in any company that they are chosen in reference to their peculiar fitness for the management of its affairs. In some few cases they are elected by reason of the large interests they have at stake, but far more frequently because of the influence they are supposed to possess in high quarters. The Indian Railways are no exception to this rule. A glance at the list of Boards have been appointed without much reoccult law of which the bulk of the shareholders has no cognisance. There is little doubt, we imagine, that the principal inducement to invest money in these distant enterprises was the idea of at once receiving a handsome interest under the guarantee of the Indian Government. But how many of these shareholders are even now aware of the fact that this interest is merely a loan, and not a free gift? There is a vague notion, indeed, in some quarters that when the net receipts exceed five per cent., the surplus will be appropriated by Government in liquidation of its present advances, but this is coupled with the belief that, if there be no profits beyond that minimum, the Government alone will suffer. Many suppose, as Mr. Mills correctly observes, that "the interest paid by the Government to the shareholders on the money advanced" by the latter is merely a return for the present use of that money, just as in the case of a loan. In fact, however, the entire works are held in security for the repayment of this interest. The shareholders are bound by agreement to complete their lines and put them into the most perfect state of repair before the Government will take them off their hands; and then all losses incurred in working, and all sums advanced as interest, will first be deducted from the purchase money. And it must also be remembered that the Government reserves to itself the right of regulating fares and freights, and of exercising an absolute control over the local management. It also demands that the mails shall be carried free of all charges, and that its goods and passengers shall be conveyed at half rates-in return for its concessions with regard to land. As the great object of the Government is to develope the resources of the soil by facilitating the means of transport, it is naturally tempted to reduce passengers' fares and the carriage of goods to the lowest possible charges, without taking much thought for shareholders' dividends. In the case of the Indus Flotilla the action of the Government is still more injurious to the public weal, for, in addition to the five per cent. interest, there is a charge of seventeen per cent. against revenue, in the form of "a fund to be set aside of ten per cent. on the capital for insurance and contingencies, and seven per cent. for depreciation; making, with the interest, an amount of twenty-two per cent. per annum, which is to be deducted from the purchase money should a sale of the vessels to the Government take place." Is it our object, then, it may be asked, to depreciate the value of Indian Railway Stock, or to create a panic in the minds of those small capitalists who have thus invested their humble savings in implicit reliance on the faith and security of the Government? By no means is that the case. The purport of these few remarks is simply to rouse the majority of shareholders to take an intelligent interest in the expenditure of their money, and in the general management of the enterprises in which they happen to be concerned. We would urge them, in the first place, to revise their lists of directors, and sternly reject every member of the Board who is not especially qualified for the discharge of the important duties he has gest the propriety of a coalition of the different directors will suffice to show that the various taken in hand. And secondly, we would suggard to the business qualifications of their companies, with a view to obtain from the British Parliament their emancipation from Government control. It is far better for them to go without their interest for a year or two, than for the sake of an immediate convenience to jeopardise permanent advantages. Under private management-if proper care be taken in the selection of managers—the various lines now in progress will be completed both more rapidly and efficiently than under the existing system. The main difficulty, of course, is in raising money, but this would never have arisen had the Government, as in duty bound, exercised a wise surveillance over the expenditure of the funds entrusted to its keeping. The introduction of a more sound and economical system will of itself remove all prejudices against such investments, and money will never be wanting where reasonable security is to be obtained.

THE MILD BENGALEE.

We have now lying before us Mr. Morris's Reports on the state of Nuddea and Jessore, which prove beyond all doubt the existence of a very wide-spread combination on the part of the ryots to withhold their rent, and generally to annoy and ruin the planters. It would be wrong, indeed, to suppose that the majority of the peasants were pursuing any very definite policy, or had any very clear notion of the ultimate results of their insane and violent conduct. The bulk of the population, as usual, were merely like sheep in the wake of an enterprising bell-wether. They followed the example and did the bidding of a few unprincipled and unscrupulous leaders, who seem to have been chiefly actuated by an unreasoning hatred of "the stranger." Lying and perjury are old offences in India, nor is any one surprised to hear that frequent recourse is had to forged documents in support of illegal claims. But somehow there has long been a general belief in this country that the true Bengalee was a meek, gentle, inoffensive creature, grateful for kind treatment, but too abject to resent a wrong. This picture bears no resemblance whatever to the original. Cringing and craven he may be, but the Bengalee is addicted to violence, to every grade of deceit and treachery, knows nothing of gratitude, and neither forgives an injury nor remembers a kindness. One of the worst enemies of Mr. Kenny, of Salgamoodia, was a Mahomedan gentleman, Meer Golam Azim, with whom he had lived on terms of intimacy for eighteen years. To this man Mr. Kenny presented a handsome copy of the Koran, in 1855, as a token of friendship, and two years afterwards, when the Ameer was about to depart on a pilgrimage to Mecca, he placed his family and his property under the protection of his English neighbour. Again, in February, 1860, when Mr. Kenny took leave of him preparatory to a visit to Europe, this loving Bengalee shed bitter tears, and bade him God speed. A few months later he had stirred up the neighbourhood against his absent friend, whose mulberry trees were cut down, his fisheries destroyed, his outhouses broken down, his land seized and appropriated, and his indigo seed, to the value of £4,000 sterling, left to rot in his godowns. Another case is even personally they had nothing of which to com-

27 rupees, Mr. Kenny insisted upon his paying 56 rupees. A very little inquiry threw a different light upon this plaint. Some years previously this man, with two others, rented some land, for which he paid as his share 27 rupees; but on account of arrears of reut by these parties the land was sold, and came by purchase into the hands of Mr. Kenny, who had previously sent Azecm to Pubna for medical treatment, and maintained him there for six months at his own expense. Then, when blindness supervened, he gave him a monthly allowance of 2 rupees, and still later rented to him for 56 rupees a piece of land that was worth 112 rupees per annum. Azeem Kahar could not deny the truth of these statements, and we are told "finally seemed ashamed of himself," as well he might be. Mr. Morris remarks upon this, that he was probably instigated by others; "but this only shows how easily natives are led astray, what little regard they have for moral obligations, and how fallacious may be our jud gments in regard to their popular demonstrations!" Perhaps, by this time, Mr. Grant himself may be somewhat sceptical as to the true purport of the crowds that gathered around him vociferating for the redress of their wrongs. And what had Mr. Kenny done that he should be made the victim of such malignity? Let Mr. Morris answer on his behalf:-

"He has given every facility for the introduction of settlers on his property; light terms of rent were imposed, total remissions of rent, varying from six to eighteen months, being at first granted; houses were built gratis; assistance afforded for the purchase of cattle and ploughs; loans without interest were also generally given, when required, at seasons of festival or domestic calamity, and these aggregate or restran or domestic caramity, and these aggregate upwards of a lakh of rupees as per separate account-book. In the case of old and even new ryots, per-petual leases, at light fixed rates, were conceded, on the verbal, though unfortunately not on the written, understanding that a small portion, not on an average exceeding one beegah in ten, of indigo should be sown for him. Lastly, embankments were raised entirely at his own expense, whereby large tracts of country were saved from inundation, and the soil was greatly improved, so that rich and teeming crops came to supply the place of swamp and jungle. The natural result was, that the tenantry became rich and contented. They looked to him for protection, and appealed to him in their difficulties. He on his part wielded the influence, and exercised the authority which naturally pertains in the East to the proprietor of extensive estates."

Now mark the change :-

"In one year, i.e. since June last, his position has been entirely changed. On his return from England he found his authority as a zemindar gone. Not only were the ryots as a body opposed to sowing indigo as formerly, but a formidable combination was organised, the object of which was to ruin him in every possible way. His rents were withheld, his servants were maltreated when sowing or attempting to sow on lands claimed by him. without provocation of any kind, but simply because of their adherence to him, they were assaulted; while others, independent ryots, who wished to side with him, were deterred either by ill-treatment or inti-

The leaders of the combination, however,-Mr. Morris continues-had no real injury to avenge. On the contrary, they had nothing to remember but acts of kindness and consideration, and in the village of Baraipore, which was distinguished for its hostility to the factory, the inhabitants admitted that their village had been established by Mr. Kenny only three years ago, that their houses had been built for them, that their rent for the first eighteen months had been remitted to them, and that worse. One day, while Mr. Morris was hold-plain. Why, then, did they withhold their ing Cutcherry, a blind and aged ryot was led rents? The reason assigned was highly chainto the tent, loudly demanding justice. He racteristic of the people. They had declined the world,"-that is, "the fashion of the times." and the same excuse was made in several other villages. In many instances, indeed, the ryots were not content with refusing to execute their own contracts, but they also prevented their more honest and sensible neighbours from acting aright. To a certain extent they were even encouraged by some of the magistrates. probably in the hope of currying favour with the Bengal Government. Thus we find a Mr. Platts laying down the following very extraordinary exposition of the law regarding combinations :-

"' No charge respecting the combination can of course stand. The Report of the Indigo Commissioners has sufficiently proved that the cultivation of indigo is unprofitable, and that it is a compulsory cultivation. To combine against such a cultivation is, in my opinion, not only not illegal, but is, in a is, in my opinion, not only not liegal, out is, in a measure, justifiable, and advising men not to pursue an unprofitable cultivation has not been made punishable by any law; so that, even if certain of the defendants have so advised their fellow ryots, they have committed no offence. And again:— 'The evidence adduced by the complainant shows, indeed, that caste-power has been exercised to a indeed, that caste-power has been exercised to a considerable extent, to bring into the combination factory servants and others who were unwilling to join it, but the law officer, in his futwa of the 30th January, 1861, declares that the exercise of that power for the purpose under consideration, or for any similar purpose, is not a punishable act."

It is not surprising that the ignorant peasants should have inferred from such absurd and unjust decisions that they would be supported by the Government in their opposition to the planters. The result is thus clearly and concisely stated by Mr. Morris:-

"Private cultivation has everywhere been more or less impeded. Ryots favourable to the factory, as well as factory servants, have been grossly maltreated without cause. I have shown how at Nohatta one ryot, who had settled with the factory, had his house wantonly defiled; at Balliakandee a factory gomastah had his nose slit; at Salgamoodia a respectable ryot who had seceded from the combination and ioined Mr. Kenny's service had his house attacked joined Mr. Kenny's service had his house attacked and the jewel wrung from his wife's nose. While at Joradah I saw a factory servant who sustained a most severe beating for having dared to write out notices of enhancement of rent. Two of the bones of his right arm were broken. Cases like these have a very dangerous effect on the body of the people. The Bengalee, individually, is a timid creature, and invariably succumbs under pressure that affects his invariably succumbs under pressure that affects his person or caste. The animus towards the planters has also been shown in the matters of bazaar supplies; goats, milk, sugar, fruit, and straw, have been withheld from pure vindictiveness. At Salgamoodia Mr. Kenny's cattle were a pitiable sight; straw for fodder exenny scattle were a pittable sight; straw for fodder was unprocurable save from a distance and at great expense. Another alarming symptom is the prevalence of perjury and forgery; all the deputy collectors engaged in trying rent suits, whom I have seen, have brought this to my notice. How, indeed, can it be otherwise, when in the majority of contested suits the verdict upholds certain statements and documents strain expectition to other statements and deciments. as true in opposition to other statements and docu-ments which must necessarily be false? Does not ments which must necessarily be false? Does not also the state of the criminal files, given above, to a certain extent confirm this? That hundreds of prosecutions instituted by ryots have fallen to the ground can only be attributed to the plaints being fundamentally untrue."

This statement also justifies the severe remarks which on a recent occasion fell from the lips of Sir Mordaunt Wells, and against which the native community are now angrily protesting. The valuable suggestions with which Mr. Morris closes his report are worthy of particular notice; but this article has already run to such an unreasonable length that any observations we may have to make upon them must be reserved to a future opportunity.

CORRESPONDENCE.

IN MEMORIAM.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL." SIR,-Alexander John Colvin, whose death appeared in the Times lately, deserves more than a common obituary notice. The man, who, by his declared that whereas his lawful rent was only to pay what was due because of "the air of courage and judicious arrangements, put an end to infanticide at Allahabad, and encouraged Lord William Bentinck, as his lordship himself expressed it in a letter to Mr. Colvin, to pass an Act for the abolition of Suttee, an Act which did his lordship more honour than all the other Acts of his administration, though generally humane, progressive, and civilising. I am not the only one who will have to mourn the loss of the best, kindest, and most generous of friends, whose heart and purse were ever open to distress and misfortune.

Mr. Colvin, like many other noble men, sprang from the middle class of life; his family were originally from Tassah, near Keady, county of Armagh, Ireland. His father, who is remembered to this day with deep affection by hundreds, was honourably known as the head of the house of Colvin, Bazett and Co., of Calcutta, where he died in 1818, and a monument was erected to him in the Cathedral, formerly the Church of St. John, to commemorate his worth and his noble and generous conduct throughout a long life. His only daughter, and an only daughter of the present deceased, are left, with a large circle of friends, to bewail their irreparable loss.

"A daughter and a sister mourn their earliest friend,
One who was dear from life's infantine dawn;
Behold them weeping! O'er the body bend,
And grieve their dearest, first companion gone."

I knew both men well, and have reason to remember with gratitude their kindness when I was young, poor, and inexperienced. I therefore offer this imperfect tribute to commemorate their worth, goodness, and generous feelings, which I shall feel obliged by your giving insertion to .- Your obedient servant. AMICUS.

EXTRACTS from the REPORT for the Year 1860.

EXTRACTS from the REPORT for the Year 1860.

"The success of the Company, even in its earliest years, received the marked attention, and elicited the surprised comments of writers best acquainted with the history of Insurance Companies.

"Fire Premiums for 1860 EQUAL the Total Fire Premiums for the SEVEN YEARS 1845 to 1851.

"Life Premiums for 1860 EXCEED the Entire Life Premiums for the EIGHT YEARS ending 1852.

"Purchase of Annuities in 1860 LARGELY EXCEEDS the similar receipts for the first TEN YEARS—1845 to 1854.

"This progress, it is believed, is unsurpassed, considering that it applies to each of the three branches of the business."

FIRE BRANCH.

FIRE BRANCH.

"The Fire Branch has certainly shown no exhaustion during the year 1860 of that impetus which had previously brought it to a position of the first magnitude among the Insurance Companies of the United Kingdom. The Fire Premiums in 1859 had advanced to the sum of £228,314.78.

3d. In 1860 the amount of Fire Premiums has arrived at a sum of £262,977. 198. 11d., showing an increase of £34 663. 128. 8d., exceeding the large advance of the preceding year; so that in two years the Fire Revenue of the Company has been enhanced by the enormous sum of £66,829. 178. 5d.

"The Parliamentary Report of Returns of Duty paid to Government for the year 1860 exhibits the augmentation of the business in a more prominent way, as it affords the means of comparison with other Companies. The Proprietors will be gratified to learn that the Increase of Duty paid by the Royal in the last year is more than double that of any other Company, either London or Provincial, whilst only one of those Companies even approaches to 50 per cent. of the advance of the soft increase of the whole of the Metropolitan Offices combined, whilst of the Provincial Offices it forms upwards of 30 per cent. of the total advance of the other 28 offices established out of London."

LIFE BRANCH.

"The Reports of the Company for several years have had invariably to announce a constant periodical expansion of Life Business, the new Policies of each succeeding year showing an advance over the one that had immediately preceded it. A similar result is shown in the year 1860, the Premiums on New Policies, after deducting Guarantees, being £15,079, 17s. 5d. above the amount received for the year 1859.

"But even this advance is small when compared with the sudden and remarkable momentum which has been given to this branch of the business in the present year (1861).

"It was not until the commencement of the year that the public seemed to have become fully acquainted with the fact that the Royal Insurance Company had published late in the last year an account of the investigation into the assets and habilities of its lafe Department, under a novel form, and in splain and intelligible a manner as the abstruseness of the subject admitted, together with the entire statements and valuations necessary for that purpose.

"It is conjectured, from the extensive notices of this Pamphlet and its accompanying Diagrams which have appeared in the Periodicals of the day, that it has largely attracted the attention of vast numbers of persons in all parts of the United Kingdom, as well as in other parts of the world. Indeed, a most satisfactory and conclusive evidence that such is the case is afforded by the fact that the Sum Assured on New Policies in the six months to the 3rd June of the present year, is actually fifty per cent, in excess of the sum assured in the corresponding months of the year 1860, although the latter amount in itself exceeded the sum assured in any like previous period of time.

"If this success be continued, the Royal Insurance Company would, with respect to the annount of its new business, be at once placed (at least with one or two exceptions) at the head of all the Insurance Companies doing business in this country; and the anticipations of the last Report, to the effect that the details of the Life

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE most gratifying intelligence received by the Calcutta Mail of the 9th September relates to the abatement of cholera in the Punjab. though not until upwards of five hundred European soldiers had fallen victims to its ravages The "butcher's bill" after a well-fought field would scarcely show a longer list of the slain outright, and in the latter case the death of the brave is not altogether a loss to their country. It is far otherwise, however, where an excessive mortality results from natural causes. Not only are so many valuable lives lost to their families and to the State, but the survivors are disheartened, and become disaffected to a service which subjects them to such horrible and inglorious perils. We all know how distasteful to the soldier is a tour of duty in the West Indian Islands, and it is much to be feared that ere long the East India stations will be regarded with as little favour. It will then, perhaps, be acknowledged, when too late, that a local European force did possess certain advantages. In the mean time a commission, under the presidency of Dr. J. McClelland, has been appointed to inquire into the first causes of cholera, and to report on the most efficient means for its prevention and cure.

As an antidote to the meeting of the native "gentlemen" who disapprove of Sir Mordaunt Wells' antipathy to perjury and falsification of legal documents, an Address, signed by his Highness the Maharajah of Burdwan and a long list of influential natives and Europeans, has been presented to that learned judge, in acknowledgment of his strenuous exertions in the cause of honesty and sound morality. Singularly opportune, too, has been the seizure of a large quantity of forged stamps and seals at Midnapore, in a house adjoining that occupied by the Darogah. It appears that Messrs. Jardine, Skinner, and Co., who have large estates in that district, have lately been compelled to have frequent recourse to the Law Courts, in consequence of the deplorable relations that now exist between zemindars and ryots in Lower Bengal. In the course of these proceedings one of their agents obtained possession of a deed that bore on its face the evidence of forgery. Following up the scent, he speedily came upon the lair of the "professional gentleman," of whose practices the police and his neighbours generally were perfectly cognisant. In the house of this ingenious individual were found "heaps of used gen uine stamps, with forged imitations of them, above two hundred forged documents relating to almost every estate in the district, and in all fifty-three forged seals." These seals are necessarily dated more than sixty years back, and bear the names of Kings of Delhi, Maharajahs, Nawabs, English Commissioners, and even of the redoubtable Jan Koompanee Bahadoor.

For the rest, the news from India is highly satisfactory. There was every prospect of a most abundant harvest, and generally a healthier tone pervaded the markets. Even the dealers in opium had recovered their confidence now that the worst was known, and better prices were realised for that baneful it is far more probable that it was a political movement organised by the faction inimical to foreign intercourse, at the head of which is Prince Mito. Nothing is said in the China papers of the death of the Emperor, as reported from St. Petersburgh, but it is quite possible that that event has actually occurred.

In our last summary we ventured to express the regret that would be felt by the Anglo-Indian community at Sir William O'Shaughnessy's retirement from public life. It is now our agreeable duty to mention that Sir Charles Wood has gracefully recognised the distinguished services rendered by the founder of the Indian telegraph system, by awarding to him the highest pension that can be claimed by a medical officer after thirty-five years' service, namely £700 per annum-instead of the £300 a-year to which he would otherwise have been entitled. But though prevented by the state of his health from returning to the scene of his past achievements, Sir William has no intention, we believe, of leading a life of idleness. Ambitious of being useful to the last to his fellow-men, he proposes to offer the benefit of his vast and varied experience as a Consulting Telegraph Engineer to all, who may be engaged in undertakings of that character.

LIEUT-COLONEL H. W. NORMAN, C.B., Deputy Adjutant General of the army, left Calcutta on the 2nd September, by the steamer Rangoon, for a cruise to the eastward; being compelled by ill health, resulting from the pressing duties of the Presidency office, to take leave to sea on medical certificate.

Casualties by Death in the Armies of India reported since last Publication.

HAYLEYBURY AND COMPETITION.

Sometime in June last the Lieutenant governor of Bengal was requested by the Government of India to give expression to his opinions as to the relative merits of the civil officers of Government, who have been appointed under the old rules, and under the competitive system. The Lieutenant governor, to this end, called upon the several commissioners, and other officers of experience under his orders, to submit the results of their observations on this subject. We understand that these officers have now responded to this call, and that the opinion generally given expression to is, that while there is little to choose between the two as to talent, those officers appointed under the competitive system excel the others in education, in experience of men, and in general knowledge; the Hayleybury men surpassing them in energy and decision of character. As office men the former are said to have a decided advantage, from the habits of stu-dious application imbibed from the severe training they have undergone; but that, once removed from their desks, they are listless and indifferent to their other duties, showing great want of energy when their physical rather than their mental qualities are taxed, and displaying little inclination to acquire any knowledge of the people, from personal intercourse, apart from that necessitated by their daily attendance in court or cutcherry. The Hayleybury men, on the contrary, are described as being chiefly conspicuous for their active, energetic habits, and the greater interest they take in all avocations which compel their removal from the confinement of the desk to the comparative freedom from restraint of their out-of-door duties, and the partiality for field sports (in which they show a marked difference to their competitive brethren), which brings them into personal intercourse with the people of the districts in which they are located. These, we understand, are the opinions of the gentlemen who are believed to be the best capable of forming any, from personal knowledge and experience of both classes. This difference in physical constitution between the two we can readily understand. The superior attainments of the competitive man have been acquired by a close and incessant application to study, which has left no time for the enjoyment of recreations, such as the Hayleybury man has freely indulged in, and imbibed a taste for. This is the natural result of the "cramming" system rendered necessary to qualify for successfully undergoing the severe, and in many respects absurd, ordeal of the competitive examinations. Both men may, and doubtless do, spring from the same class, occupying a similar position in society. The physical and mental organisation is the same in each: but in one the strain on the mental qualities has been so incessant as to detract greatly from the development of the physical powers, so much so as to have produced a feeling of disinclination and distaste for all pursuits involving any bodily exertion.

The Hayleybury man with his energy, active habits, and capabilities of enduring fatigue, will doubtless prove the more efficient revenue officer and more active magistrate; but the other, with his well-trained mental faculties, his application, and sedentary habits should undoubtedly prove the best judge. But will he last? We believe not. Our experience teaches us that, as a rule, bodily exercise is more necessary to health in India than it is in Europe; that without it the body speedily becomes enfeebled, and the organs of life deranged. The strongest and healthiest men we have met are those who have systematically followed the chase. We believe this to be a subject well worthy the grave consideration of the Government here and at home; and leave it for them to digest.—Englishman.

CHOLERA IN THE NORTH-WEST.

For six weeks has this terrible epidemic raged, till now it covers very nearly the area of the famine districts, extending from Benares on the moves principally in the lines of the great rivers valley of the Ganges and neighbouring hills, in and reaching south as far as Agra, Gwalior and It seems to be creeping up by Nusseerabad. Cabool into Central Asia, whence if it follows its former track it may find its way into Europe. It has numbered among its victims not less than five hundred English soldiers, chiefly in Delhi, Meerut, and Lahore. It has produced its usual effect among large masses of men, in causing intense mental depression, approaching panic, in producing a state of mind and body which leads to collapse, and becomes its most powerful auxiliary. As a rule the disease has hitherto spared the native and attacked the European, especially in the neighbourhood of military stations. This is its fifth visitation of the North-Western Provinces during the last paper by twenty years. In an instructive Dr. Murray, of Agra, published in the last number of the "Indian Annals of Medical Science," we have an account of the four previous attacks, with the main features of which the present epidemic corresponds. Flowing like a wave along the line of commerce the ravages of cholera are always confined to the hot and rainy seasons. In 1842 it appeared at Cabool in a most virulent form under the name of "Black Death" and marched south to Indore, which it reached in 1847, disappearing each cold season, till it crossed the Nerbudds and spent its force in the Deccan. In 1840, beginning at Indore, the wave again flowed back by exactly the same route till it rested at Umballa in 1851. In 1855, starting from its native lair in the low swamps of Bengal, the third attack passed up the Gangetic valley by Benares and Allahabad, and along the base of the Himalayas, as well as by the great commercial route through Agra, Bhurtpore, and Ajmere, to Lahore. In 1860 the last outbreak again began in the East, reached Allahabad in the hot season, and Gwalior soon after the first fall of rain, but confined itself to the Agra and Muttra districts. Again the native troops and prisoners escaped, and the English soldiers suffered most. Where quinine was administered at an early stage to check the effect of the miasmatic atmosphere of the rainy season, the cases were generally favourable. Drunkenness on the part of the men, which has been more than once recommended in the present case, led to consequent prostration and left them more open to collapse.

Cholera is a great and terrible mystery, and in inquiring into it we are everywhere met with inexplicable problems. In the present visitation, for instance, Meean-Meer has suffered most severely, and Anarkullee has been spared. Now, the latter was the old cantonment of Lahore, described by medical men as "a vile hole, a very nuisance upon the face of creation." The troops were moved to Meean-Meer, where the site and barracks were unexceptionable, and yet the epidemic has preferred it to Anarkullee. But it is surely impossible that cholera should continue much longer to elude the search and defy the laws of science, any more than smallpox did. Government, it is said, has resolved to appoint a commission of medical and engineer officers, but such fitful efforts will do little good. We believe that several careful observers, stationary at the principal cities, Benares, Allahabad, Cawnpore, Lucknow, Agra, Meerut, Delhi, Umballa and Lahore, could do more than any Committee moving from place to place. Such a chain of observers, working together and communicating with each other, might do something in observing the temperature, the course of the wind, the quantity of ozone in the atmosphere, the direction n which the epidemic spreads, the rate at which it travels, the classes of people first attacked, and the kind of dwellings, the state of their conservancy, ventilation, &c. in which the first cases appear. This is a want in India, and we should be glad to see all the medical officers in the country combined in carrying out such a system of observation for years to come. Still, all this has been done, to a certain extent, especially in Europe, where they made out accurate maps of the spread of cholera, proved that it travels about as fast as an active pedestrian would cross a country, and east side to Dehra Ghazee Khan on the west, and main roads. Some observations on the state of the atmosphere in cholera epidemics have been made in this country. An east wind is especially dreaded when the wind ought to be westerly. In India, as everywhere else, the most crowded, worst ventilated and drained, and, in all respects, least sanitary places are generally first invaded, and suffer most. Except in investigating such questions as these we know not what a Commission can do. A cordon of stationary observers would certainly effect more. But whatever may be the result of the present inquiry, we trust that henceforth it will be a recognised part of every surgeon's duty to prepare and forward to headquarters such observations. In the hands of one officer well qualified for the task, the secret might be wrested at last from such returns.

Amid all our ignorance this one fact we know -that cholera revels in the least sanitary localities. Our best physicians may be no more able to check the epidemic than to arrest Niagara, but of this we are certain-that where the air is purest its ravages are slightest. It is our duty to devote all our efforts to the sanitary improvement of stations and buildings. In our various military cantonments none can know better where improvement is most required than the doctor and engineer officer. They will do more than any roving commission. Every one of our principal stations is full of places in which endemic cholera is generated, and in which the pest is detained and aggravated. Improvement may only be gradual, but it will be certain. The immediate reform for which we call is that power be given to the local authorities to carry out at once all works of a sanitary character urgently recommended by a committee of medical and engineer officers. It is cheaper to cleanse and improve our barracks and their vicinity than to lose nearly a whole European regiment, as we have done five times during the last twenty years in one presidency.-Friend of India.

INDIA'S LAST AND BEST DIAMOND.

When reviewing the operations of the Geological Survey some two years ago, we asked if it were not possible to collect mining statistics in India, similar to Mr. Hunt's valuable records published from time to time in England. It unfortunately happens that India is the despair of the statist. Figures collected in India, unless only by Europeans and relating to Europeans, are valueless except for very general purposes. Any attempt to obtain statistical information from a native, if conducted by a European officer, is at once regarded as a preliminary to taxation of some sort, and is met by a refusal or by deceit; while, if made by native agency, it becomes a source of gross oppression, and the result is ludi-crously inaccurate. What is called the census of India, for instance, which fixes the population of the British territory at 132,000,000, was taken very much in this way. The police were called on for a return of the number of houses and huts in each town, and the whole was multiplied by five to represent the population. Notwithstanding the difficulty, however, Mr. Oldham, the able and zealous director of the Geological Survey of India, has collected and published the first of a series of mineral statistics. The returns refer to coal, and will be followed, we trust, by similar information regarding iron, copper, lime, building stone, slate, gold dust, and precious stones. Mr. Oldham does not pretend that his first attempt is free from errors. But he did his best, going from pit to pit, cross-questioning the superintendents and making inquiries of the proprietors and agents of the several companies. He has succeeded in giving us figures for three years, from 1st of October, 1857, to the same date in 1860, all accounts being made up to this period, known as "the coal year" from the circumstance that, before the construction of the railway, all the Raneegunge coal was sent down the river Damooda, so long as its waters, swollen by the rains, permitted the transit.

The result is not a cheering one for India. Over the vast peninsula, which has an area of 800,000 square miles, coal is found only in the Rewah to the south of the Soane, in the Nerbudda valley, and in the Sylhet hills on the far north-east. There is no workable coal elsewhere in the North-western provinces, none in Oude, the Punjab, Sind, Bombay, or Madras. This fact is the less cheering that iron and lime are generally associated with coal in the same formation, and that India, except in the east, is comparatively destitute of these great elements and necessities of modern civilisation. It is no great consolation to say that where coal exists it is abundant, that Beerbhoom, for instance, is one mass of mineral wealth. India is as large as Europe, and the coal of Raneegunge or lime of Sylhet is more useless to the cotton mills and building firms of Bombay or Madras than that of Newcastle is to Moscow. Coal is most bulky for carriage, and railway carriage will always be so expensive, that it will probably be cheaper for Bombay to use good English than indifferent Bengal or even Nerbudda coal. The following abstract contains the result of Mr. Oldham's inquiries :-

Districts.	1858.	1859.	1860.
Total in maund: Or in tons	3,162,819 226,140		10,088,118 870,206

These figures show the healthiness of the trade which, notwithstanding the local fluctuations, has steadily progressed. In the Ranee-gunge coal-field, which is now tapped by the East Indian Railway, and which will shortly be pierced by two branches, there were last year forty-nine collieries with twenty-seven steam engines at work. This is the result of little more than twenty years' operations. The number of collieries in the United Kingdom is 2,654, and the out turn of coal is 72,000,000 of tons annually, or two hundred times that of India.

Our readers will form a better estimate of the coal-producing power of India if we place in order, with the assistance of Mr. Hunt's mining records, the out-turn of all the coal countries in the world in 1857. We regret Mr. Oldham has not given the proportion of the coal area to that of the whole country.

	Proportion of	Production
Countries.	whole area.	in tons.
British Islands	1 10	66,000,000
Belgium	1 22	5,700,000
France	1 100	4,500,000
United States	2 9	4,500,000
Prussia	1 90	8 ,500,000
British North America	1 20	900,000
British India	—	3 70,206
Bohemia	1 20	300,000
Spain	1 52	250,000

Of the nine countries India is thus already seventh on the list. What a future for America is involved in the fact that nearly a fourth of her whole area, so far as investigated, is covered with coal! India raises a third more than Spain, and about the same amount as Warwickshire. The consumption of coal in India and by vessels leaving its ports we may estimate at 700,000 tons annually, the amount imported in 1857 from England being 329,157 tons. Reckoning the price of Indian coal in Calcutta at five annas a maund, or seventeen shillings a ton, and English coal at the same rate (though it is far higher), we have more than half a million sterling spent on coal every year in India,

As the trade and manufactures of India increase and as machinery comes to be more and more largely introduced, indigenous coal will become more important. The fact that the supply is in certain districts inexhaustible, and that the demand is annually increasing, is one full of hope for the coal companies and proprietors who already occupy, or like the Bengal Coal Company monopolise, the field. It is possible the Nerbudda fields, worked by the company just established, may supply Bombay and the southern portions of the North-West Provinces on the completion away by the floods of the succeeding rains, Even of the railway. But Oude, the Punjab, and Ma-1 dras must still look to their forests, which on both sanitary and commercial grounds it becomes daily of more importance to utilise and renew .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEPAUL, August 24 .- The party of travellers under Majors Sarel and Blakiston reached Chung King on the 28th April, and left that place for Cheng Tu on the 5th May; the country is surrounded with rebels, and there are great doubts of their making their way. The durbar, at the request of our resident, has written to Lassa, to obtain all the information on approach of any travellers from eastward. On the 15th the Maharajah Dhiroje, family, and suite, proceeded to Godavery to bathe, the day being the principal day of the grand jatra there, and which occurs but once in twelve years, and lasts for one month; and the Maharajah Jung Bahadoor and family proceeded thither on the 18th, and remained in his garden house there after having performed the ceremony of bathing. The other day our resident paid a visit to the minister by invitation, to inspect some articles intended for presentation to the Great Exhibition. The weather continues to be very pleasant.-Englishman.

R.A. Horses.—The removal of the horses of No. 5 battery 14th brigade Royal Artillery from Dum-Dum to Calcutta has not been productive of the wished-for improvement in the health of these animals. Glanders has again broken out. Within the last few days several horses have been shot, and others supposed to be infectiously diseased have been sent back to Dum Dum. A committee sat at the Fort on the 4th Sept., to inquire into this heavy mortality, and to suggest some remedial measures. We believe that the committee recommends the removal of the battery to an upcountry station as soon as possible.

TITALIAH .- A friend from Titaliah informs us (Englishman) that a Bootan force of about fifty men has descended from the Hills, and encamped at a place called Patker doho, about one coss from Mynagoree. This force is under the command of the brother of the late Soobah Mynagooree Doopseekatam, who fell ill a short time since, and making over charge of his Soobahship to a subordinate or servant, named Jump Bhote, proceeded to the Hills for change of air. He died there, and his brother has now come down to endeavour to obtain possession of the Soobahship from Jump peaceably if possible, if not he has avowed his determination of having recourse to arms. It is believed that Jump will not relinquish the Soobahship without having a fight for it. All is quiet on our side of the frontier, but our deputy magistrate has warned the officer in command of the troops at Julpigoree of the probability of hostilities breaking out in the neighbourhood of Choorabunder; he has furthermore warned the inhabitants on our side against taking part with either of the belligerents in any fight that may take place. . . . Our Titaliah friend, in continuation of his former letter, writes to say that Jump Bhote has fled without fighting, and the late Doopsee Katani's brother has taken possession of the Soobahship of Mynagooree. I'here has been no infraction of the peace, and all GWALLOR, August 21.—The cholera is still raging fearfully; yesterday we lost sixteen men of the 27th Inniskillings; in one day we lost twenty three men. Thirty-five children have died. The clergyman and doctor are highly spoken of, always in the hospital, and very kind to the patients. Neither of these officers spare themselves.

Darjeeling, August 29.—You will be glad to hear that most of the tea gardens are going a-head, and bid fair to yield a paying crop this season. Those who have not succeeded owe their failure to nothing else than had management. We cry in vain for a good road to this fine station. The road from Carragolah ghat to the foot of the hills will doubtless be a fine one when it is completed, but from all accounts nearly the whole of each dry season's work upon it is washed when that road is completed Darjeeling will still be badly off, until we get a roadway practicable for carts from the foot of the hills into the station, about thirty-two miles. For want of such a cart road we are now completely at the mercy of the Bootiah coolies, who carry up our stores at their own leisurely convenience, charging for that short distance about three times as much as the carriage of each package costs all the way from Calcutta to the foot of the hills, and about four times as much as it would cost to send such a package all the way from Calcutta to England. In two or three years the Government would save by such a cart road the entire cost of its construction, for they now have to employ the coolies to bring up all the commissariat stores, &c., &c., and do not, thanks to the bad management of their own officers, get their work done on better terms than private individuals. The difficulty of coming up to this place is as great now as it was ten years ago. Nevertheless, invalids do manage to get up somehow or other, and their speedily restored health in this glorious climate very soon makes them forget the troubles of their journey, the bolting of bearers, the duckings in flooded nullahs, the bad fare and bad attendance at dak bungalows, &c. Talking of dak bungalows, I cannot omit to warn invalids who may be coming up here, to avoid, if possible, entering the dak bungalow at Kishengunje. The dreadful stench exhaled from its rotten thatch and from the deposits of the myriads of bats which infest it, is positively sickening and dangerous. I hope, however, that the Lieutenant-governor will look in there, and take a sniff, for in that case the Department of Public Works is sure to be well pitched into about it. We hear that his Honour will be among us very soon. Certain folks are in a funk already, knowing how unsparingly his Honour roots out irregularities and abuses wherever his prying eyes discover them. The maladministration here is notorious, and the best friends of the superintendent are gladly anticipating the order for him to move on. Probably, however, he may have the nous to go before he gets the hint. The Lieutenant-governor should bring up his chief engineer. He is wanted .- Englishman.

Malwa.-Letters received from Malwa state that the rural classes of Malwa have shown a spirit of disaffection, consequent on some revenue arrangements recently made. The people profess to be determined to give their lives, but not the enhanced rate of rent.

TIRHOOT.—The indig ? season is rapidly coming to a close, and I fear the out-turns from most factories will be lower than anything yet reported. It is long since such a wretched result rewarded the labours of the Tirhoot planters, who had been so fortunate for years that they had begun to speculate on the certainty attaching to growing indugo in this district, and were ill-prepared for a reverse like the present. The opium cultivation will be largely increased this year, as the great addition to the prices recently ordered by the Government has given much satisfaction to the ryots. Five rupees per seer will pay the ryots well, and make the poppy cultivation very popular among them.

BERHAMPORE, August 25 .- The joint magistrate, Mr. Lowis, is going away, and we expect Mr. Geogeghan, one of the competitive civilians, in his place. There have been other changes, such as the transfer of the judge to Hooghly. The Mahomedan deputy collector, Deen Mahomed, has also been transferred to Noacally, whereto he goes with an unwilling heart. Mr. Dyson takes his seat. The "Dewany" continues to be the bone of contention at Moorshedabad, between the old dewan and the new man who has come up from Calcutta. The former has feathered his nest well, while the latter is in quest of replenishment for his fortunes. Moorshedabad is now very quiet, for Mr. Hossemer takes great pains to keep the budmashes in subjection. At Jungypore the trade is falling off. The river had risen very high, but the waters are subsiding, and the current is becoming every day less furious. The station is not very healthy during the rainy season, particularly in the Black CHOLERA.-We (Englishman) are indeed happy to say that we have received more favourable intelligence from Lahore, and that the cholera is, though perhaps not rapidly decreasing, certainly not on the increase. The troops have at last been marched out from Meean Meer, and the European hospitals emptied and fumigated, while the patients have been removed to the vacated barracks, which are large and airy. Three deaths have occurred in one of the companies of the 51st since they have left Meean Meer, but, on the whole, the men have benefited by the change. The men of the 51st left in the fort are doing much better than reported in our last intelligence, and the one or two cases which have occurred in the artillery within the last two days are progressing favourably. The whole number of Europeans who have died up to the 28th August is 315 men, 12 women, and 4 children. The criminal jail at Anarkullee and the station itself are free from the disease entirely.

Delhi, August 28.—I have very little to write about beyond the state of the weather, and that is alternately wet, dry, cool, and steaming hot. We had a very heavy down pour yesterday afternoon, and it lasted more or less all night; to-day is sunny and the air cooler. Delhi is even duller than usual; people are going away for a month's fling in the hills; amongst them our chaplain has applied for leave, and I believe obtained it. It is to be hoped that some one will be sent to officiate for him; indeed, it should occur to the Government and the bishop, that a large and important station like this ought not to be left without a chaplain, even for a week; the duties are heavy, especially in a sickly season, and if they are to be properly carried out, we ought to have an assistant, or two chaplains. There are two persons here, lately sent in from Baroda (I think) on suspicion of having been engaged in the brutal massacres of Christians in 1857. One is said to have been a khasburdar of the ex-king's, and if he is found to have been so, he is most assuredly as guilty as any rebel who has met his doom. But it is very difficult now-a-days to collect evidence to convict such criminals; there is no doubt that the Mahomedan portion of the Native population do their best to screen such, and the consequence is that the authorities are almost powerless. The amnesty will, of course, protect all but actual murderers; but I am much mistaken if there are not many of these not only at large in the city, but walking proudly about in their embroidered skull caps, looking defiance, and scowling at every unprotected European female they may chance to meet. They take special care to know that no European male is at hand before they venture to induige their feelings; or this species of annoyance might soon be made the excuse for indulging in a little retrospection at the expense of the murderous scoundrels. I believe it is settled at head quarters that there shall be no "relief" this season, except in those regiments where sickness renders it absolutely necessary, but this exception promises just now to be the rule. I am happy to add that sickness has almost entirely disappeared from Delhi, and that which is left is the type of low fever, so prevalent at this season, and which will always prevail where men (natives) sleep in the heavy dews at night, and sit with shaved heads in the rays of a blazing hot sun during the heat of the day. I think I am right in saying that few Europeans suffer much from it.—Englishman.

THE CALCUTTA DIOCESAN SOCIETY, established in 1841 by Bishop Wilson, to furnish with clergymen stations rot supplied with chaplains, has issued its report for the past year. On the society's list there are at present eight such clergymen, of whom five have been engaged or educated in India. They occupy Jessore, Purneah, Mynpoorie, Mozufferpore, Midnapore, Chittagong, Debrooghur, and Jhelum. As any increase in the ecclesiastical establishment will probably either take the useless and expensive shape of a bishop for Agra, or the useful and necessary form of military chaplains, we should like to see other large stations, where there are no chaplains, availing themselves of the help of of the latter was killed, and that several others this society to secure a clergyman. From the | were wounded. accounts published in the report, we regret to see that so few of the additional clergy act as missionaries. The society should keep this in view as a secondary but essential object, and England as well as India would subscribe to their funds. PESHAWUR.-From Peshawur we hear that a large body of Eranees lately crossed the Searsa frontier and gave a good deal of annoyance to the inhabitants. A body of Mooltan horse and a detachment of police were sent for their arrest and dispersal. The floods have subsided, but cholera is active in the neighbourhood. sometime since reported the arrest, and afterwards the release of a Mohammedan, who had made his appearance, mounted on a camel with the green flag, professing to be the emissary of Feroze Shah. The first lesson having been ineffectual, he has now, on his re-appearance, been imprisoned, and we hope will be taken proper care of.

SALE OF KHAS MEHALS .- From a return published in the Supplement to the Calcutta Gazette, it appears that since the order passed for selling the khas mehals, or estates of which Government is the proprietor, 166 with a sudder jumma of Rs. 60,763 have been sold for Rs. 6,00,953, or at the rate of ten times the jumma. Reckoning the whole 5,361 estates, however, at an average of five times the jumma, the State would benefit by their sale to the extent of Rs. 88,60,561. It is a curious fact that in Chittagong, where the largest number of small khas mehals is to be found, the people will not purchase them, declaring that the next collector is sure to resume them.

CAPTAIN SMYTH'S EXPEDITION .- The "Red Chops," or passports from the Pekin Government, for Captain Smyth's, or the Almorah expedition, which is to start next spring on the Central Asian journey of discovery, have not as yet been received by Government here; but no doubt whatever is entertained, from information furnished by Mr. Bruce, our envoy at Pekin, that they will be freely given by the Imperial Government; and that its friendliness will be evinced in them by the commands of the Chinese authorities being strongly expressed, enjoining safe conduct to the officers of the exploring party, and that the Thibet authorities shall furnish them every aid, and show them every attention in their power. It now only remains to be seen, in the progress and success of this interesting expedition, to what extent the power and in-fluence of the Court of Pekin prevail in Thibet; and whether we have not, by our destruction of the Tartar prestige in China, rendered the reigning dynasty as powerless to oblige as to annoy us. Certain it is that travellers recently arrived in India from Thibet speak slightingly of Chinese influence in that country of late years, and ignore any knowledge of the treaty of Pekin. Letters received in Calcutta from Mr. Bruce, and our other functionaries at Pekin, speak in the most satisfactory terms of the temper and behaviour of the Chinese authorities and the inhabitants of the The British officers have been treated with every deference and attention by the former, and ride, drive, and walk about the streets of the Chinese capital as free and unembarrassed as they would in London, with the exception of little harmless and inoffensive curiosity on the part of those citizens who are as yet unaccustomed to the aspect of "barbarians," but who are invariably civil and respectful.—Englishman.

ANOTHER LIBEL CASE.—The Phanix states that Mr. MacArthur, of the Meergunge Indigo concern, is about to bring an action for libel against the Lieutenant governor of Bengal damages laid at Rs. 10,000. The alleged libel was published in Part III. of the "Papers relating to the Cultivation of Indigo in Lower Bengal," which part, according to the letter to the Government of India from the Landholders' Association given above, was not furnished to the public in India till it had been circulated in England. The Phanix quotes the passages which it supposes will form the ground of action, from which it appears that there was an affray between some Indigo factory people and villagers, that one

While this was going on Mr. MacArthur was "sick and absent," Lushington expressed his regret, in writing to the Lieutenant governor, that he was unable to commit him for trial because, as stated in the Phanix, "he should do so without any hope of securing a conviction." These and "stronger statements" were published by the authority of the Lieutenant governor of Bengal.

Exports (Calcutta, Sept. 9).—We have a steadily increasing business in many of our staples, still mainly encouraged by the continued decline in the freight market. We have again to report an evident tendency on the part of dealers to enhance their demands, and in this they are supported by supplies keeping at a moderate range; in some cases prices show an advance, indigo manufacture closing with very bad results. Raw Silk lower. Silk Piece Goods maintained. Sugar active and higher. Sallpetre a good business.

Imports (Calcutta, Sept. 9).—Improved accounts arriving from the North-West Provinces have imparted firmness to importers, and with an increased disposition for business apparent amongst dealers holders are enabled to recover fully 1 anna a piece on the declined prices ruling for Grey Goods; at this advance there is an active inquiry. Bleached Goods are generally neglected, and at unsatisfactory prices. Salt has improved fully 10 Rs. the 100 maunds. Coals are still at unsatisfactory prices. satisfactory prices.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIEUTENANT WILLIAM DE NOUAL RAMUS, 20th Madras N.I., was charged before a court martial on the 27th March, 1861, with having misappropriated various sums of money belonging to Government, which had been entrusted to him as Adjutant of his regiment. The sentence was that Lieutenant Ramus undergo penal servitude for four years, and be struck off from the strength of the 20th N.I.

HYDERABAD.—The Rohillas and the Arabs are again troublesome in Morar; the Native Government have despatched some Sowars for their apprehension and punishment. The India Government, whilst admitting the claims which Salar Jung, the Minister, has established to the respect and support of the British Government, have stated that an absolute and general promise of protection to all his property and estates lying in the Hyderabad territory is one which his Excel-lency cannot give. The cholera, which broke out in the Godavery districts, has abated. The weather is exceedingly delightful.

Pondicherry.—The Madras Athenaum has been informed that the "last mail" had brought news to Pondicherry of the recal of the Governor of Pondicherry, who is to be replaced in his office by a Monsieur Bontemps.

CINCHONA CULTIVATION IN BURMAH .-- A memorandum by Dr. Brandis, of Rangoon, has been published, on the suitability of the Burmese hill ranges for cinchona cultivation, and on the best site for a sanitarium there. He would not commence cinchona growing on any of the mountain ranges until the experiment has been more fully established in those localities in India where it is now being tried. But when the time comes for introducing the cultivation into our Eastern Provinces, Dr. Brandis recommends as the most suitable spot the collection of mountains between the Salween and Sittang, known as the Yoonzaleen Range. They appear to form an equilateral triangle with Rangoon and Moulmain. A little southward of the spot in question the mountains become a distinct watershed between the Salween and Sittang. In South America the cinchona is found at an elevation of from 3,000 to 6,000 feet, in the immediate neighbourhood of mountain masses, which rise up to 18,000 feet, and are partly covered with eternal snow. The Yoonzaleen mass contains peaks from 5,000 to 8,000 feet high. The rain-fall is greater than in the plains; and the temperature lower and more uniform. The rocks are granite, gneiss, and quartz. The vegetation is entirely tropical up to an elevation of 3,000 feet, when teak disappears and pine forests begin. The population of the region is not above 1,500 souls. They are Sgan Karens, most of whom live in a semi-savage state, but some of the villagers are Christian, in connection with the American Baptist Mission.

MORTALUTY IN MADRAS.—The Madras Times analyses the report of Mr. Cornish on mortality in Madras. Last year about this time cholera committed great ravages in Madras among all classes; this year there has not been any unusual mortality from that disease. Whenever cholera is rife it is found that the Mahommedans suffer more than the Hindoos. This is partly accounted for by the greater cleanliness of the latter class, and partly by the number of burying places in the quarter occupied by the Mahommedans. In the case of small-pox it is found that Europeans suffer least and Hindoos most. East Indians suffer more from it than Mahommedans, showing that they do not resort to vaccination as they ought to do.

SHABBY .- The Madras Times understands that the Government of Madras has incurred the sore displeasure of the Secretary of State for permitting the despatch of Dr. Campbell in charge of horses and other presents from the Rajah of Mysore to her Majesty the Queen. "No change will be permitted in the practice heretofore in force--that is, that such gifts are invariably to be sold and the proceeds credited to the exchequer." In consequence of the receipt of this intelligence the Rajah of Travancore's scheme for sending a golden throne to the Queen is nipped in the bud. What is Sir Charles Wood afraid of? The Queen has received many presents from Eastern princes before now. It is not long since she accepted from one of them a golden bedstead with a canopy and hangings of Cashmere shawl, which were the wonder of those who inspected them, and are, we believe, in Windsor Castle at this moment.

THE GODAVERY .- The district engineer has forwarded to the Madras Government an account of the sudden rise in the river Godavery, which continued from the 17th to the 29th July. There has been no such inundation of the river since 1849. In three days the water rose from six feet ten inches to twenty nine feet three inches by the Dowlaisharam register. The town was in imminent danger for three days, but a large party of sappers and workshop employés succeeded by incessant exertions in repairing the embankment. The current ran down at so terrific a rate that no steamer could make way against it. At some distance up the river the ryots had cut the embankment to inundate their fields, which, they said, had deteriorated in fertility since 1849, in consequence of the want of the usual inundation. There has been no little loss to the peasantry in crops, cattle and houses, and to the State in the Godavery engineering works. There was no great loss of life.

THE LATE BISHOP OF MADRAS .- A sum of Rs. 1,565 had been collected up to the 15th of August for Bishop Dealtry's memorial fund.

CANNANORE, August 15 .- The weather is again fair, and we can thoroughly appreciate it after the long spell of rain we have lately experienced. Owing to the prevalence of cholera in the Parcherry, the men and families of H.M.'s 66th Regiment were removed from thence and located in vacant bungalows in the officers' lines. I feel happy in being able to inform you now that this disease has left the cantonment. We have had no admissions since Friday last, the 9th. Friday last an inquest was held on the body of Sergeant Page, of H.M.'s 66th Regiment, who was found drowned in a well in the compound of the bungalow occupied by one company of the regiment. The deceased had been late in returning to quarters, and to evade the sentry posted at the gateway, got over the wall, in the rear of the compound, and the night being very dark, fell into the well. Verdict, found drowned. bulletins of the Home News by telegram, conveying intelligence of reinforcements being required to be sent from India to New South Wales, reached here yesterday. Her Majesty's 66th regiment is getting in readiness, under expectation of being one of the corps that may be ordered for this service. This regiment is about 1,100 strong, with the following number of officers present:—1 lieut. colonel, 8 captains, 9 lieutenants, 5 ensigns, 1 paymaster, and 3 assistant surgeons .- Englishman.

CHINA.

Hono Kong, August 28.—The London Mail of July 10 arrived here on the 21st instant.

The past fortnight has not been marked by any such alarming event as that described in our last Overland Summary with regard to the British Legation at Yedo. We regret, however, to say that matters have not improved in Japan, according to the latest accounts. The unsuccessful attack upon the Embassy has been followed by a succession of daily alarms in the shape of reports to the effect that the attack was about to be renewed, and it has become only too evident that the dignity and security of the English Minister at Yedo is being made a plaything of by the people of Japan. Meantime Mr. Harris, with his Japanese guard, remains, as far as we can learn, entirely unmolested; this may either be attributed to the ill-success of all the previous attempts that have been made to act upon his fears, or to the fact that he has been more discreet and discerning in his personal deportment towards the people of the country than some of his colleagues have been. The following quotation from the North China Herald is another item of information regarding the late crisis :-

"Some curious revelations, we understand, have reached our Minister as to the real instigator of the attack on the Legation; and most curious of all, while it is traced to one of the great feudatory and semi-independent princes, the provocation seems not to have come from us at all, but from the Russians! A collision, of which many of the details are in circulation among the people, appears to have taken place at the island of Tsassima, in the Straits of Corea, early in June, during which it is said the prince's palace was bom barded, one of his villages and forts taken, and many of his followers killed and wounded. To avenge this outrage and defeat, hearing a great foreign chief was at Nagasaki, on his way to Yeddo overland, he instantly despatched one of his emissaries to follow him, and if he could not be slain on the way, to find the fitting instruments among the Loonins-never far to seek in Yeddo -attack the Legation, and bring his head, after massacring everybody in it. This is the popular version, and implicitly believed by many well-informed Japanese. That there was a collision at Tsassima with the Russians is certain. That the prince was ill-disposed to foreigners before any such provocation, is also known. That he should take this indiscriminate and wholesale way of avenging himself is only too much in keeping with their usual habits of thought and action—too much so at all events to be discarded as improbable.'

Nor is the alarm confined to Yedo; the accounts from Yokuhama state that the Consulate at Kanagawa is turned into a regular stockade, with a double palisade and numerous guardhouses all round it, the entrance being guarded by armed Yacunins.

The news from Pekin is, as usual, a little uncertain. Some accounts report the Emperor to be ill-probably wishing so to explain his long absence from the capital; other reports say that temperature at Pekin has been so high as 106 in the shade; the nights were cool.

From the three Northern Ports there is very little news; at none of them does trade appear to have got into a normal condition. Some of the troops are being withdrawn from Tien-tsin. New-chwang, although, by every account, situated in a large producing district, has not yet done much in the way of trade. With regard to Chefoo -or rather Yentae, which is the part occupied as a foreign settlement-it may be considered one of the most promising ports in China. It possesses an excellent harbour, and the country all around it is of the most beautiful description, only to be surpassed by some of the best Japanese scenery. The climate is pleasant and healthy, and the place altogether has exceeded the highest expectations that were formed regard-

The news from the Yang tsze river is confined to the fact that trade at Hankow is improving. There has been no fresh movement of the rebels during the past fortnight, it is not unlikely that they are gathering themselves up for an effort. Mr. Consul Medhurst has issued a notification warning British subjects against the slightest breach of neutrality, and referring to the Manila having, some time ago, drawn upon herself the fire of the Imperialists while engaged in landing a passenger at 'Ngan-ching. The Consol cannot afford protection to vessels so attacked, and he warns all against the danger they incur by any such breach of neutrality.

From Shanghai there is little news to record. It would appear that a movement is on foot to have gas introduced into the settlement. action of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce in the Customs question has been closely followed up by that of Hong Kong, but sufficient time has not elapsed to ascertain the sentiments of Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary on the subject. It is impossible, however, to exaggerate the importance of a speedy determination of all the matters at issue between the foreign trader and the Chinese Customs House. The former complains of undue exactions on the part of the Custom-house officials, and of vexatious and unnecessary delay in the transaction of business, which as time is money to the trader more than to most other men, is fully equivalent to an actual pecuniary loss. It is a great pity that this should be the case, and that an institution meant to do good should be in the hands of managers who are fast rendering it mischievous.

From Ningpo our correspondent writes -There is no news here worth communicating; it is the old story over again, troubles with the Custom-house, and squeezes on the part of the Mandarins; occasionally some report about the rebels, which is contradicted the next day. To day the report is, that Pook-fong-yuen, about thirty miles from Showhing-foo, has fallen to the rebels; this, the Chinese say, is true, as the place has been closely invested by the rebels for some time, and has been nearly taken several times. Yesterday, bills were posted up in the city and suburbs stating that the Chinese merchants would stop all trade unless the Taoutai did not stop squeezing, and also modify the Custom-house regulations, as at present nothing can be done in They also asked where the Taoutai would put all the money he is squeezing, or how he will take it away when the rebels come, which they will do before long if the Taoutai cannot alter affairs, as at present he is just driving all the people to be rebels.

At Macao matters are quiet; this city is ra pidly rising in favour as a summer residence; being so free from the noise and bustle of business, so agreeably situated, with a beautiful crescent-praya and excellent hotel accommodation, it is becoming much frequented by the people of this colony, who find in it a convenient retreat during the intervals of business.

Local matters go on smoothly. Certain cases against several of the police constables who were charged with extortion have fallen to the ground.

time to copy it into our present issuse, but its tenor is condemnatory of the working of the system, so far as the enquiries have extended; the statement is offered as "a first instalment of the reform which seems most practicable, and best adapted to existing circumstances." A meeting of the Sailors' Home Committee was held some days ago, and a building committee appointed to carry out the object of the subscribers. The temperature has continued to be mild for this season of the year; a few smart showers of rain have fallen during the fortnight .- Overland China Mail.

JAPAN.

We are in receipt of advices from Japan, which throw some more light upon the recent attack upon the British Legation at Yedo. The number of assailants killed and wounded on the premises is stated as twenty-four, and the whole affair appears, from the subjoined document, which was found in the pocket of one of the wounded. to have originated in the spontaneous desire of a band of men to " do the State some service," and so to render themselves famous whether they perished or survived. The idea, it will be admitted, is quite consistent with the state of Japan and the character of its people. Here is a translation of the document itself.

"I, although a person of low degree, have taken the earnest resolution to perform a great deed to the honour of the Sovereign, and to expel the foreigner, as it is intolerable to stand by and see the sacred empire violated by the barbarian. But, properly, the performance of such a deed as shall cause the might of the empire to sparkle in foreign regions, is difficult for the power of a person of low standing. Yet, I am simple of opinion, with a desire to combine a very little sincerity, and a very limited force, whereby partly to shower a thousand benefits upon the empire. Should this also tend by and by to expel the foreigner, and if I could tranquilise respectfully the imperial minds, it would, indeed, redound to my greatest honour, though but a person of low degree. I have thus taken the resolution, regardless of my own life.

We take the following Japan news from the North China Herald of August 10th:-

"At Yedo the Japanese seemed to expect another attack, as, besides the usual guard, they had the retainers of two Damois as an extra protection, and the precautions to meet it were daily increasing. The guards were going about in full armour day and night, lamps were stuck up at every ten paces or so, and large fires kept up all night at a distance of from forty to fifty paces, so that it was impossible any one could get into the grounds of the Legation unobserved. They are said to disapprove of the Marines being on guard, as in case of an attack they would be unable to distinguish between assailants and defenders, and would fire on both indiscriminately.

"Mr. Oliphant's wounds were not dangerous, but it was desirable that he should have the first surgical assistance, and he will therefore return to England ere long."

There are some hints as to the origin of the attack on the Legation in the subjoined extract from a letter over the cipher "S," which appears in the same journal.

The Shantung rebels seem to have been kept well in check during the past fortnight. The Chamber of Commerce has published a "It is difficult to give any reason for this cowardly attack. Many rumours are afloat; here well in check during the past fortnight. The by some incidents that occurred on the road when Mr. Alcock and party were journeying overland from Nagasaki to Yokuhama. It is said that when passing through the territory of one of the Princes they deviated from the road to examine a coal mine at some distance from it, notwithstanding the endeavours of the Yaconins to prevent them, one of the officers laying his hand on his sword and pointing to a rope drawn across the road indicating that the barrier must not be passed-a symbol always respected by the Japanese. Another report is that on meeting the procession of one of the Damios, whose cortege took two days to pass them, Mr. Alcock insisted on occupying the centre of the road -the Japanese themselves on such occasions fall on their knees and remain in that position until the great men have passed—this, in a country where human life is valued so lightly and personal dignity so highly, would be taken as an insult only to be washed out in blood.

"The people, as might have been supposed, are much annoyed at having their pleasures stopped here on account of a disturbance at Yedo; but the restriction will, it is hoped, have the effect of showing them that foreigners are not to be ill-treated with impunity .- Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, Sept. 17 .- Only one vessel has sailed during the fortnight, the Eliza Blanche for Melbourne, with 1,207 cwts. of plantation coffee, and 1,649 native; in all, 2,856 cwts. The Hotspur is ready to sail, and the Cornicallis is pretty sure to go before the 30th, the day on which the commercial year closes. We may, therefore, very fairly calculate on a total out-turn of plantation, 462,000 cwts.; native, 138,000 cwts: total, 600,000 cwts. This will be 16,000 cwts. below the crop of the year ended Sept., 1860. The plantation crop is as nearly as possible equal for each of the two years-about 460,000 cwts.; but native, even if it reach 138,000, will be 18,000 under the mark of last year, and no less than 60,000 below 1858-59.

What the deficiency in 1801-2 in both kinds will, be we are really afraid to say, but it is pretty evident already that a serious crisis is passing over the coffee planters of Ceylon. Several have already succumbed, as we and others know to our Messrs. Kershaw, Catto, and Whittaker, cost. all well-known planters, are applicants for the protection of the Insolvency Court at Kandy.

The Legislative Council has made fair progress during the fortnight. The Bankers' Ordinance, the Volunteer Ordinance, and the Joint-Stock Companies Ordinance have been Gazetted as passed. The first portion of the Amended Thoroughfares Bill has been discussed, and, by an overwhelming majority, Council has determined that elective and representative principles should be fairly tested on a small scale in the working of this measure. There is much work yet to be done before the session closes, and before Mr. Morgan ceases (by the expected return of Mr. Justice Stirling) to hold the post of Queen's Advocate, the duties of which he so worthily fulfils.

The weather has continued rainy and squally, and now we have indications of an early setting in of the north-east monsoon.

All hopes of the safety of the Queen of Freedom must now be finally abandoned.

The volunteer movement is making some progress in the face of all discouragements.

By a sad accident, Mr. W. G. Simpson, a re- | tions have also contributed.

followers of one of the Damios who felt insulted spected member of the planting community, has been deprived of life.

More than three-fourths of the revenue derived from imports are due to rice and cotton cloth; rice alone yielding just one half the monthly collection from imports. In the case of exports, coffee and cocoanut oil are the main sources whence revenue is derived; coffee alone, indeed, contributes about nine-tenths of the export duties.

It appears that of our imports at Colombo we again export to the value of about £20,000 amonth, mainly cotton goods to India, with some cotton wool to England.

The accumulation of cotton goods in stock is immense when compared with 1st September of last year—no less than 8,135 bales and cases against 1,434 in 1860. We are glad to notice, however, that in August, cotton goods to the value of £40,000 (the highest sum since January) were entered for home consumption .- Colombo Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

NETHERLANDS INDIA .- By the Dutch mail steamer we have Batavia papers to the 31st ultimo. Very heavy rains continued to fall in all parts of Java, causing the rivers to overflow their banks and producing much injury to the roads and bridges, while the crops were seriously damaged. This will no doubt be productive of great distress, especially in those parts of the island which suffered so severely from the inundations a few months previously.

The same unfavourable weather seems to prevail in many of the dependencies. In the island of Banda, throughout the months of June and July, heavy rains fell with very few intervals, accompanied by strong variable winds. The health of the inhabitants generally was not much affected by this unseasonable weather, but amongst the convicts, especially those who had recently arrived from Java, much sickness occurred, and not less than seventeen died during the month of July. The effect of this weather upon the cultures was very bad. Everywhere in the nutmeg parks the ground was covered with half ripe fruit, which had been detached from the trees by the rain and night-cold. Hundreds of trees which bore heavy crops have thus been completely stripped, and much of the fruit gathered in July is surrounded by thin mace, while the nuts are so watery and possess so little kernel that when dried they will only belong to the lowest class. The expectations of a more than usually productive crop for 1861, which was predicted from the appearance of the trees in the beginning of the year, are thus disappointed, and unless a very speedy change of weather occurred the crop on the contrary would be very deficient. Many trees, in bearing and otherwise, had been rooted up by the rain and land-slips.

A telegram from Sourabaya states that the Portuguese part of the island of Timor was in insurrection against the Government.

An embassy from the Sultan of Jambie had arrived in Batavia, and been received by the Governor general with due honours.

No recent intelligence from Banjermassing had been published.

The Java Bode states that on the 2nd September the Governor-general would deliver over charge of the government to the Vice-President of the Council of Netherlands India, Mr. A. Prins, and on the morning of the 4th leave Batavia for Singapore, on his way to Europe.—Singapore Free

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARIES in Western India recently appealed to the Indian public for pecuniary support in the present disturbed state of America, whence their funds are derived. The Free Church in Bombay liberally responded. Collections were made on the 11th of August, which amounted to Rs. 1,413. Other denomina-

Staff Corps.

Fort William, Sept. 5.-No. 784.-The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Rt. Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 302 of Aug. 2 last, are published for general information:

1. The Royal Warrant establishing the staff corps 1. The Royal Warrant establishing the staff corps for India permits officers now in staff employment, who may join the corps on its formation, to count their previous staff service towards promotion to the extent specified in the 3rd clause of the Warrant.

4. That this likely to occur is proved by an in-quiry recently made by an officer on furlough. This officer, a regimental captain, asks whether he can join the staff corps, receive the promised step of substantive rank, thus becoming a major, and then retire from the service with the honorary rank of lieutenant-colonel.

5. He has been informed that officers intending to retire from the service immediately, will not be permitted to join the corps for the purpose of gaining a step of substantive rank.

6. Previous staff service is allowed to reckon for promotion under the warrant, and the step of rank is conceded for the purpose of inducing experienced staff officers to join the staff corps, and thus securing the continuance of their services. But it would be quite inconsistent with this object, and would be a gross abuse of the privilege thus conceded, if officers were permitted to join the corps with the object of obtaining a step of rank by their transfer to it, and their quitting the service.

7. This cannot be allowed, and it should be made known that no officer will be permitted to join the staff corps for the purpose of obtaining a step of substantive rank and then retiring immediately.

8. Cases may nevertheless occur, and whenever it shall clearly appear that this has been done intentionally, I desire that each case be reported for my decision, and, under any circumstances, I shall

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

From M. J. Shaw Stewart, Esq., Under Sec. to the Govt. of Bombay, to W. Grey, Esq., Sec. to the Govt. of India, Home Dept.—(No. 3,118, dated Bombay Castle, July 8, 1861.)

Sir,—In a communication lately submitted to this Government, the Commissioners of Revenue and Police Government, the Commissioners of Revenue and Police have suggested, among other measures proposed by them with the view of diminishing correspondence, that they be vested with authority to grant leave of all kinds, under the standing rules, to all covenanted and uncovenanted officers subordinate to them, with the exception of leave to Europe, which should be referred for the decision of Government.

2. H.E. the Gov. in Council is of opinion that the power to grant privilege leave to the full extent might well be granted to the commissioners, but that special leave on private affairs, furloughs, and sick leave necessitating the departure of an officer sick leave necessitating the departure of an officer from his zillah, ought to remain in the hands of Government.

3. I am directed to solicit the sanction of the Government of India to the alteration of the rule as above proposed.

Public Works.

Public Works. Dep., Aug. 10.—No. 1,313.—Notification.—The attention of superintending and executive engineers, and of all local officers concerned in the direction or execution of public works, is directed to the importance of timely and full provision for works proposed to be constructed during the coming year.

2. The orders of the Government of India on the Punjab Public Works Budget for the current year, advert to the want of sufficient information as to the necessity for certain works, and as to the object and extent of others; the want of estimates in certain instances, and in others, their incompleteness or necessity for their modification. And on these and other accounts of a like nature several works which had been proposed for execution during the current year were struck out.

3. These defects should be guarded against in submitting the propositions for works to be included in next Budget. It is important that all should be well considered and matured, and should be accompanied with complete estimates and with all companied with complete estimates and with all ject to the approval of her Majesty's Secretary of the requisite information.

4. It has happened that application has been made in the course of the official year, and, in some instances, just after its commencement, for sanction for works of some importance not provided for; the necessity for which has been readily rejudge adv. gen., Northern div.

cognised, while, at the same time, it was equally obvious that it could have been readily foreseen, and that the work should have been duly included obvious that it could have been readily foreseen, and that the work should have been duly included in the Budget provision. It is not right that works of this character should absorb funds reserved for real emergencies—that is, urgent works, the necessity for which has arisen from unforeseen circumstances. If funds so reserved are drawn upon for works which ought to have been provided with funds of their own, there is risk of their falling short of the fulfilment of their proper object. This should be guarded against by thoughtful attention beforehand to all real wants.

5. In making their provisions for the wants of the coming year, executive officers of the Public Works Department will communicate with the several local authorities, military, civil, medical, and ecclesiastical, and with the heads or local representatives of other departments for which buildings are erected, or work executed, by the Public Works Department.

other departments for which buildings are erected, or work executed, by the Public Works Department—Educational, Post-office, &c. — and will give the fullest attention to their requests and propositions, in order that all may be arranged in the most entire accordance with the views of the authorities most directly concerned in each, so far as practicable, consistently with other requirements.

6. It will, of course, happen that many recommendations will, after all, be rejected by the Local Government, or by the Government of India, when individually considered, both on their own merits and in connection with the other propositions of the year, with the views of Government, and with the limitation of means. But their rejection will not then be due to neglect on the part of the local officers, whose duty it is to bring forward fully the expected local demands. local demands.

7. Next to guarding against the omission altogether of works that should be provided for, it is necessary to make the provision accurate and complete. It is not satisfactory to find, on proceeding to carry out a sanctioned work, that the provision to which the sanction was accorded was inadequate, owing to insufficient care and consideration. It is not meant that circumstances may not arise, calling legitimately for revision of estimates prepared with all care. But these occasions are very exceptional. When necessity for such revision occurs, or excess of cost of any work over the amount sanctioned and provided, it should be capable of clearest proof that it is not due to want of care at the time of preparation of the original estimate. When the reasons assigned for the insufficiency of the provision are obviously such as should or could have been known at the time when the estimate was prepared, they cannot be reckoned valid reasons for exceeding that estimate. And when circumstances occur, unavoidably vitiating any portion of a previous provision, or introducing new and unexpected requirements, immediate notice should be taken and clear explanation afforded, with the view of correcting the provision which had been made. So that ultimately in all cases the total notice should be taken and clear explanation afforded, with the view of correcting the provision which had been made. So that ultimately in all cases, the total cost of any work on its completion, shall not be an unexpected demand then coming forward for the first time, but only the consummation of demands already fully recognised and fully provided for. Careful attention is desired to these considerations in preparing estimates for sanction and insertion in the Budget.

8. In all cases of new works, executive officers 8. In all cases of new works, executive officers should first submit rough preliminary sketch plans, in simple outline, on a small scale, with the most important dimensions figured, in order that any necessary modifications of the general arrangement or design may be made, and general approval given, before time and labour are expended on elaborate designs and detailed estimates.

9. The matured designs and proposals for works, 9. The matured designs and proposals for works, complete with the necessary information and estimates, must be in the office of the Secretary to Government in this Dept. at Lahore, before 1st Dec. next. It is not desirable that the propositions to be submitted by any officer should be accumulated and sent in together, towards the expiry of the time prescribed, but rather that each should be submitted. examined and considered in its complete state, and, if necessary, further references be made before the time for preparing the Provincial Public Works Budget.

THE ESTABLISHMENT OF WORKSHOPS FOR EUROPEAN SOLDIERS IN INDIA. (From the Calcutta Govt. Gazette.)

From Lieut. col. W. Mayhew, Adj. gen. of the Army, to the Sec. to the Govt. of India, Military Department,—(dated the 25th April, 1861.)

Sir,-I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief in India, to forward, for submission to Government, the annexed scheme for the establishment of workshops in her Majesty's regiments serving in India.

This scheme appears after due deliberation to com-

This scheme appears after due deliberation to comprise the advantages of all the plans submitted by the regiments of the army on this subject.

Circumstances have hitherto prevented the carrying into execution this excellent scheme. Indeed, although the question has, from time to time, occupied the attention of successive Commanders-in-Chief as well as of Government, no general system of workshops, applicable to all regiments, have ever before been suggested; but it has been entirely left to the zeal and energy of individual commanding officers to provide means of amusement and employment for their men, aided by small grants of money from the canteen fund.

The importance and usefulness of workshops as regards the health and morals of soldiers are so well known, and so often acknowledged by the Government of India, that the Commander-in-Chief will not dilate on them. He will only observe that one of the chief causes of crime in the hot season, and the ill-health resulting from inebriety, may be traced to the total inactivity and relaxation of the mental the in-neath resulting from incoriety, may be traced to the total inactivity and relaxation of the mental and physical powers which ensue during the hot months; and that employment in the workshops is universally admitted to be the best and surest remedy for these great evils. For it must be borne in mind that not only do the workshops afford amusement and occupation to the workmen themselves, but that their comrades take an interest in the work.

A Scheme of Workshops for enabling European soldiers to carry on, in their leisure hours, the trades and occupations by which they gained their living before enlisting, and for affording opportunities to soldiers and to their children to acquire a knowledge of them.

1. The trades proposed to be practised and taught are as follows:—The painter, printer, blacksmith, bricklayer, carpenter, joiner, weaver, shoemaker, bookbinder, tentmaker, gardener, watchmaker, decorator.

2. Skilled workmen in some of the above trades are to be found in every regiment; and in corps having artisans skilled in other trades than these, the scheme is, of course, capable of still further de velopment.

3. The primary cost of establishment was, after a careful calculation, estimated by a Board as follows, iz.:—	Rs.

Blacksmith's tools for 2 men, and bellows	120
Tools complete for 2 carpenters, answering for 4 or 5 men	240
Tools for 10 shoemakers (with lasts)	275
Turning lathes	90
Gardener's tools, at Rs. 15 per company, for 10 companies	150
Bookbinder's tools	150

Total For engravers, watchmakers, &c., the canteen

ror engravers, watchmakers, &c., the canteen might make advances for tools.

For masons, painters, bricklayers, &c., &c., the ordnance department will supply the necessary implements, vide Anny General Order, 6th Dec., 1860, republished in General Order, Queen's Troops, 27th idem

For tent-makers, supplies may also be issued on payment of prime cost.

4. It will be observed that this is exclusive of the cost of arranging for suitable workshops, and of the expense of carriage from Calcutta or elsewhere, of the above-mentioned articles.

5. The average balance credit of canteen funds of

5. The average mannee creat of canteen tunds of the Majesty's British regiments in Bengal was about Rs. 1,200 at the end of last year. About half, therefore, of the regiments in Bengal are in a position at once to defray the primary cost of tools, &c. from their canteen funds. With the others the profits of a few months would suffice to cover the above ex-

6. Going on the above data, it is proposed-

1st. That authority shall be given to regiments to purchase the articles enumerated in paragraph 3 out of the balance credit of their canteen funds, due regard being paid to the usual charitable calls.

2nd. That Government be requested to authorise the conveyance at the public cost of these articles from Calcutta, or from whatever station they may be procurable. In the event of its being found advisable to send to England for any, special application, detailing cost of carriage, to be made.

Brd. That Government he requested to authorise the march of a regiment from one station to another. For the purpose of obviating the expense of transport, all, except light tools, will be considered as barrack fixtures.

4th. Some few trifling alterations and additions to the barrack buildings may be required for the establishment of the workshops, and the Commander-in-Chief feels convinced that the well-known benevolence of the Government, and their desire to promote the soldier's welfare, will induce them to lend a favourable can to appropriate on this head.

the soldiers weithre, will induce them to lend a favourable ear to proposals on this head.

7. The accompanying report from the officer commanding 1st battalion, 6th foot, shows how well the scheme is working in that corps. In other corps it is also progressing favourably.

8. Colonel Robertson's report points to the necessity for various departments to employ soldiers in such work about the horrages as their responses to such work about the barracks as they are competent to perform.

9. The provisions of this scheme, slightly modified, perhaps, are applicable to batteries of both Royal and Bengal Artillery, and to her Majesty's Indian regiments of European cavalry and infantry.

10. One of the chief objects of workshops is to instruct the children of soldiers in trades. In this view commanding officers are requested to do their utmost to induce a grant to allow their this political are received. commanding others are requested to do their utmost to induce parents to allow their children to receive the necessary instruction. Remuneration will be given to the soldier who teaches the child a trade, the amount of which will depend on the degree of efficiency which he has enabled the child to attain.

11. Tailoring has not been included in the list of trades, because a failor's shop already exists in all her Maistric variances.

trades, because a tailor's shop already exists in all her Majesty's regiments.

1st. It is as well to add a few details which suggest themselves, consequent on the adoption of the foregoing scheme. At the same time it would be unwise to restrict commanding officers of regiments as to the mode of practically carrying out the experiment, but they should be allowed a degree of latitude in this respect, reporting from time to time the result of their experience. From these Reports the Commander-in-Chief might best arrive at a just conclusion as to the most approved manner of workconclusion as to the most approved manner of working out the system; but Colonei Robertson's method appears worthy of general adoption.

2nd. Twice a-year, say on Christmas or New Year's day, or Easter Monday, prizes would be awarded to best work.nen, whether soldiers or children.

Brd. The tradesmen should be under charge of 8rd. The tradesmen should be under charge of quartermasters of regiments, and their charges for work done should be subject to a fixed tariff, approved of by the commanding officer of the regiment, or in accordance with H.M.'s regulations. A copy of the tariff should hang in the workshop.

4th. Implements damaged by neglect should be replaced at the cost of the workman. Those worn out by fair wear and tear, by the canteen fund.

5th. The profits from the exercise of his craft to go to the workman, every inducement heing given oth. The profits from the exercise of his craft to go to the workman, every inducement being given for its investment in the savings bank. This is imperative; without it the soldier will not work. Any tradesman, if a defaulter, to be debarred from exercising his trade, or a soldier making a bad use of his profits not to be allowed to work.

oth. Tradesmen to be as far as possible equally distributed among companies, so that in the event of the regiment being divided, each portion of it should be provided with artisans.

7th. Tradesmen, if well drilled and well conducted soldiers, to be excused ordinary parades in hot wea-ther; but invariably to appear on all general parades, and at all drills in the drill season, so as not to lose the advantages of previous instruction; and to take their tour of all duties, save those of fatigue.

their tour of an atties, save those of fatigue.

8th. In conclusion, and in support of these suggestions, it is submitted that a garrison system of workshops would never answer. It would be more expensive; for a garrison staff in charge would become a necessity, proper supervision would be almost impossible, and drunkenness and crime would result. The handing over garrison tools and implements The handing over of garrison tools and implements would be attended with endless confusion, involving an assessment of damages. Such a system could only be established at certain large garrison stations, and therefore one quarter at least of the regiments in this country, exclusive of wings and companies on detachment, would be deprived of the advantages detachment, valorded by it.

I find that the men are very desirous of being employed at their various trades, and there has not been a single application to leave the shops since their establishment; and though the men have received three or four rupees weekly more than those doing duty, still not one case of drunkenness has been brought to my notice.

On the 1st March last I applied to the Deputy-Assistant Quartermaster-General for the repair of barrack furniture, which was granted, and during that month the following articles have been repaired, viz.:—171 wooden cots, 10 large tables, 1 easy chair, 1 small table, 1 office desk, 3 fire hose, 90 iron cots, 37 lanterns, 100 boxes, 3 bedside tables, 1 cartyoke, 3 fire buckets, 3 chairs, 5 commodes, 32 forms, 1 writing-desk, 2 fire engines, and 3 filth carts.

The repairs have been executed with more expedition, and the workmanship was superior to that done by native mechanics; in fact, a large stock of furniture, which could not be done by natives, has been all cleared out by the men of my regiment.

PROSPECTUS FOR REGIMENTAL WORKSHOPS.

PROSPECTUS FOR REGIMENTAL WORKSHOPS.

In order to establish a regimental carpenter's shop, a complete set of tools should be purchased and paid for out of the canteen fund; a turning lathe, which is an expensive item, could be bought when the shop was flourishing.

The remuneration for workmen is laid down in the Queen's Regulations, page 285, paragraph 54, and should be strictly adhered to, except in some cases, when the work might be done by the piece.

The materials for work should be purchased by a committee of officers, under the supervision of the master tradesman, and handed over to the quartermaster tradesman, and handed over to the quarter-master or some other competent person, to be accounted for in a similar manner as regimental ne-would be lessened.

The profits realised from the sale of work after paying a small sum for the wear and tear of tools should be placed in a fund.

When a workman is discharged from the service, and if deserving, a set of tools might be purchased ont of this fund and presented to him, to enable him to gain a livelihood. In a short time this fund would increase largely, and might also be made useful in paying the master tradesmen a bonus for teaching the sons of soldiers a trade. This of course could be regulated by the committee, under the could be regulated by the committee, under the sanction of the commanding officer.

A waste book, showing the quantity of materials purchased and expended, and a ledger accounting for the nature of work performed, and the profits realised should be submitted for the inspection of the quarterly committee, as in the case of regimental necessaries. On arriving at a new station the price of materials would have, of course, to be considered.

The same rule should be observed in this case as in that of correctors. Exprises could be have a likely and the constant of the correctors.

in that of carpenters. Farriers could be beneficially employed in shoeing officers' horses, &c.; the accounts should be kept in a similar way to that of

The prices of work done by shoemakers are also laid down by regulation; but regiments generally allow them a little more, as they have to purchase their own tools, lasts, &c.

The price charged for non-commissioned officers' and privates' work, together with that of officers, will entirely depend on the marked price of leather, and must be regulated by a board of officers—the prices should always be published in regimental orders.

The rates of work performed for non-commissioned officers and men are clearly laid down in the Royal Warrant respecting clothing; that for officers will entirely depend on the nature of the work done, and should be regulated by a committee.

I consider that the tailor's shop should not be on the same footing as the carpenter's and blacksmith's shops, inasmuch as the two latter are far more proshops, inasmuch as the two latter are far more profitable; the tailors' work being absolutely necessary is always fixed at as low a rate as possible, in order to meet the pay of the soldier; and I would therefore propose that the tailor's shop should be left as its at present in almost every regiment in the service —namely, under the quartermaster, and the earnings of the workmen paid to them regularly every Scaturday night. Saturday night.

I am of opinion that soldiers' sons might derive great advantages from regimental workshops; but do not think that any arrangements could be entered into to apprentice a lad to the master tradesman.

certain sum monthly might be paid out of the fund above alluded to to the master tradesman for teaching a boy how to work; and in a short time he would commence to earn a little money, which the parents would soon discover the advantage of.

I think that all boys who enter the service should be compelled to attend one of the regimental workshops in the same manner as they are compelled to attend school; and on leaving the service they would not be in the helpless state they have hitherto been. They would also be better men while serving, as it is evident the boy, who has been compelled to train his mind for the acquirement of a trade, will make a more intelligent man than the boy whose time has been passed in idleness.

With the view of carrying out the establishment of workshops, it will be absolutely necessary that proper airy workshops be built in each barrack, each regiment to have its own-and every encouragement given to men to attend, such as leave from morning parades occasionally and always from even-ing roll calls.

The workshops should be near to each other, and as far from the canteen as possible; they should be under the superintendence of an intelligent sergeant, a man of good natural abilities, and a taste for mechanics, not necessarily a tradesman.

The hours of labour may be determined according to croumstances; but punctuality in attendance should be strictly enforced, and no one should be allowed to enter the workshops except those who are registered as workmen.

Since writing the above prospectus, it has been ascertained that unless the tradesmen work for the number of hours specified in the Queen's Regulations—viz., eight hours in the hot season, and ten tions—viz, eight hours in the hot season, and ten hours in the cold weather—at the regulated rate of working pay, the native mechanics would undersell the regimental workshop. As rifle instruction, ordinary parades, and drills will prevent the men being employed for the regulated period daily, as laid down by Regulation—in this case the non-commissioned officer superintending the workshops should keep a correct account of the number of hours of actual labour, and, at the termination of each week, divide the hours by eight or ten, accordeach week, divide the hours by eight or ten, according to the season of the year, and paying them for the number of days at 10 annas each.

Regarding the making up of camp equipment, the tailors, shoemakers, and blacksmiths combined could taniors, snoemakers, and blacksmiths combined cound be employed in making and repairing tents: no more tools than those shown as requisite for the former trades would be wanted. The tradesinen should receive the regulated rate of pay, viz., ten annas per diem; the cost of materials entirely depending on the bazaar rates of the station at which the regiment may be quartered.

Men of each regiment could be instructed in gun smithery by the armourers as follows:-For the first six months the armourer ought to receive a remu-neration of about Rs. 15 a month for instructing about six men, for the next three months the allow-who have filed false documents.—Bengal Hurkaru, should be punctually attended to, as a soldier has ance should cease, after which the men instructed should be paid for their labour similar to other tradesmen.

The armourer and three men would perform all the work of a regiment, oiling and petty repairs being only executed.

From the Secretary to the Government of India. Military Department, to the Deputy Adjutant-general of the army—(dated July 26, 1861). Sir,—With reference to the letters regarding the establishment of workshops in European regiments, I am desired to acquaint you, for the information of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, that the Governor-general in Council considers the scheme, as in operation in H.M.'s 6th regiment, an excellence, and sanctions its adoption generally, under the regulations proposed by his Excellency.

I am directed to observe that no new accome dation in the way of workshops can be constructed this year; but there are many stations where there are already more barrack ranges than the troops can occupy, and with the coming reduction in the strength of regiments, the number of these stations will increase.

8. The Governor-general in Council will be p pared, as proposed by the Commander-in-Chief, to defray the expense of carriage from Calcutta or elseexpense of carriage from Calcutta or elsewhere of the tools purchased by the canteen funds of regiments; and when tools are required to be procured from England, detailed specification should be made to Government of the cost of carriage to be incurred.

4. On the march of regiments in course of relief, the tools will be conveyed at the public expense, as his Excellency suggests, on the understanding that, in order to lessen the charges, all except tools of a light nature are to be considered as barrack fixtures.

5. A copy of the correspondence will be forwarded to the Public Works Department, in view to a consideration of the question of giving contracts to the men to execute such work as they may be able to perform, whenever it can be done without detriment to the public service; and that department will also be requested to report what arrangements can be made in the way of accommodation, at a small expense, when it is not immediately available.

6. The Governor general in Council considers it very desirable that some authentic account of the financial results of the scheme should be kept, and that, therefore, the work-shop accounts should be audited, not with the view of stinting the support of Government, but that Government may better judge of the success of the scheme.

7. The Military Finance Department will accordingly be requested to suggest in what manner this can best be done, and a further communication will be made to you on the subject in due course.

KISHNAGUR.-Mr. Herschel's accident is not likely to cause him much inconvenience: it is the small bone of his leg, or I should rather have said limb, which has been broken; a few days' rest will put all to rights. But Mr. Herschel's absence from office for even a day is a serious inconvenience to the public: the number of appeals under Act X. is past being numbered, and the majority of them have been pending from three to four months. In fact, since the good old days of Adam Ogilvie the Kishnaghur Collectorate has never been in such thorough confusion: it would require the service of two special collectors to work off the arrears within the next six months. Mr. Grant has no collectors to give, and he does not believe that appeals are lying over for four months. Did not Mr. Lushington assure his honour and the Government that the working of Act X. was perfection, and the planters were alone to blame-a reference to Mr. Herschel's collectorate file would prove who told the truth. Mr. Ryland, the deputy magistrate of Bongong, has distinguished himself during the past fortnight in seizing two gangs of notorious forgers, who have had a grand harvest since the planters were obliged to take the ryots into court for the recovery of rents. Khodoo Buscoo Biswas, seized near Mulnath, on the information of Mr. Larmour, appears to have been forger general for the district. From the receipts, leases, and seals discovered in his possession it is evident his services have been called into requisition wherever the ryots disputed their arrears of reut with the planter. All documents in the collector's and deputy collector's courts have, I understand, been attached, and it is believed Mr. Ryland will leave

SOLDIERS' WORKSHOPS. Common sense has at length been thought worthy of a hearing, even in India. The military authorities have actually arrived at the conclusion that there may be some truth in the old saying that "idleness is the parent of all mischief," and that if the cause be removed, the objectionable consequences will also be avoided. The bane of a soldier's life everywhere, but especially in India, is the want of employment and rational amusement. Enervated by the relaxing climate and destitute of intellectual resources, he sinks into a listless apathy, from which he can only be aroused by indulgence in such noxious stimulants as are furnished at the Canteen, or surreptitiously obtained from the native bazaar. The inevitable result is loss of health and temper, and the growth of a spirit of discontent easily susceptible of development into mutiny. Gardens, racket courts, and private theatricals have long been tried with great success; but in the hot weather, when most needed, these sources of recreation are seldom available. Besides, it is not amusement alone the soldier requires—he wants, also, to be employed, and to be allowed to exercise whatever talents or mechanical skill he may happen to possess. It is very important, too, that on his return to civil life he should be provided with some remunerative occupation to eke out the wretched pittance that represents his country's gratitude. It is, therefore, with very sincere gratification we reproduce in our present issue the official papers relating to the establishment of workshops in European regiments serving in the East. The experiment has already been tried in the 1st battalion of the 6th Royal Regiment, and has fully answered the highest expectations. The men have shown great alacrity in taking advantage of the means of employing themselves in a useful manner, and though three or four rupees a week have been earned by those thus engaged, not a single case of drunkenness has been reported. The trades which are primarily to be practised are those of the painter, printer, blacksmith, bricklayer, carpenter, joiner, weaver, shoemaker, bookbinder, tentmaker, gardener, watchmaker, and decorator; while the first cost of tools for a regiment is estimated at less than a hundred guineas, which are to be taken as far as possible from the Canteen Funds. In many corps, no doubt, the officers will be glad to evince their sympathy with their men by presenting them with sets of tools to start with, and such a token of good will would be received in a kindly and proper spirit. According to the Queen's Regulations, the pay of each workman is at the rate of fifteen pence for eight hours work in the hot season and ten hours in the cold, and it is recommended that the profits should be placed to the credit of a common fund. From this fund a set of tools may be purchased and presented to a deserving workman on leaving the service, so as to give him a fair start in his new career. Facilities for instruction will be afforded to all who desire to learn any particular kind of handicraft, and it is suggested that all boys who enter the service should be compelled to attend one of the regimental workshops as a necessary branch of their education. In the 6th Regiment there is also a reading-room supported by sixteen sergeants, fifteen corporals, and two hundred and forty-two privates out of only four companies, and it is said to answer exceedingly well. There can be no question that whatever tends to raise the soldier in his own estimation will also induce him to discharge his military duties to the best of his ability, and will in every way increase his usefulness to the State.

THE FORESTS OF SOUTH INDIA.*

THE rapid diminution of the supply of teak timber excited serious anxiety on the part of the Madras Government so far back as twenty years ago, though it was not till 1857 that a Conservator of Forests was for the first time appointed. For many years, indeed, prior to the creation of that office, the most praiseworthy exertions had been made by Mr. Conolly, the Collector of Malabar, to establish nurseries in order to replenish the forests that were so nearly exhausted. For this purpose he selected a large tract of land, twenty-five miles square, near the Beypore River, where he sowed vast quantities of seeds, and planted out thousands of saplings. The former, however, would not germinate, and the latter refused to strike root. By dint of much perseverance, and after many disheartening failures, Mr. Conolly did at last succeed in putting into the ground some 10,000 young plants, the greater portion of which throve to his perfect satisfaction. But from the beginning he confessed his ignorance of arboriculture, and again and again urged upon the Local Government the necessity of appointing a qualified person to the exclusive charge of the presidency forests and plantations. That Government, indeed, received Mr. Conolly's suggestions in good part, and did its utmost to obtain, through the Government of India, an experienced arboriculturist. This request was in due time forwarded from Calcutta to London, and some years afterwards the Court of Directors sent out-a small manual, called the "Forester's Guide." In the mean time Mr. Conolly had succeeded in raising 50,000 young plants, and the Government of India took heart to authorise an increase of the monthly expenditure from £22. 2s. to £31. 9s.—including £5 for the salary of the native sub-conservator. At length the authorities at home were roused to a sense of the expediency of taking more decisive measures for the preservation of existing forests, and the formation of new ones, and their choice happily fell upon Dr. Hugh Cleghorn, to whom the people of the Madras Presidency will owe an immense debt of gratitude to the third and fourth generation. Not only has he stopped the heedless destruction of teak vided an almost inexhaustible supply for the future, besides showing what can be done to keep up a sufficient supply of firewood, and by generally promoting the healthiness of the population. One inevitable consequence of the diminution of woodlands is the loss of moisture, and a very injurious chemical action upon the quality of the atmosphere. There is nothing more certain than that a proper quantity of vegetation is necessary to human health, and in no form is it more salutary than in that of forest trees thinly planted, and kept clear about the roots. In India the rapid growth of underwood is the source of ceaseless labour, but in the vicinity of towns and villages this very underwood is invaluable, both as fuel and as manure. Indeed, scarcely any one cause has been more destructive of forest timber than the barbarous and wasteful practice of burning the undergrowth for the sake of the ashes. The increasing demand for railway sleepers has, of course, contributed largely to the disappearance of the primeval forest, and it may easily be imagined that the contractors took no thought about those who were to come after them. All this is now changed, and it is really wonderful what great things Dr. Cleghorn has contrived to accomplish with an establishment so ludicrously small that not a few noblemen in England and Scotland would look down upon it with pity or scorn. Trees of all kinds have been introduced from Australia, and from all parts of the world at all similar in climate. Plantations have been formed covering many square miles, and roads and canals lined with beautiful avenues, at once a solace to travellers and a source of revenue to the State. Large tracts of barren sands and bleak moorland have been sown with the seeds of quick growing shrubs, which already provide firewood and furnish employment for hundreds of poor villagers. Hedges also are being introduced. or improved, to prevent the trespass of cattle and the consequent affrays that so frequently happen. A fairer picture of material progress no man need desire to look upon, and yet far greater results might be obtained by the exercise of a judicious liberality on the part of the Government. Possibly that may ensue on the decentralisation of the Government of India, and few objects are more worthy of a reasonable outlay than the conservation of the forests which supply timber for ships and building purposes, sleepers for railways, planks, poles, and logs for the engineering and military departments, and fuel for all ranks and classes of inhabitants. Much valuable information on all these points will be found in Dr. Cleghorn's recently published work on the Forests and Gardens of South India.

THE ANTI-RENT COMBINATION IN BENGAL.

At the risk of being thought tedious we must again, though very briefly, revert to Mr. Morris's Report on the district of Jessore. As the result of his personal observations and inquiries, the Special Commissioner distinctly expresses his conviction that "the ryots have, as a rule, wilfully and without sufficient cause withheld payment of their rents, and that this recusancy on their part has derived its force thirty-eight actions instituted in 1859-60 in mainly from the ill feeling that has sprung up the Jessore magistrate's office, there were 575 and other valuable timber, but he has pro-|in their minds towards the European planters on the subject of indigo cultivation." Until the recent enhancement in the price of cereals the ryots never dreamed of offering any objection to the cultivation of indigo; but when they discovered that it would pay them better to grow rice they naturally showed some reluctance to devote their time and capital to the growth of a less remunerative crop. No exception could have been taken to their refusal to sacrifice their interests to those of the planters had they been perfectly independent and in a position to please only themselves. But it so happened that they were under a double engagement to cultivate indigo on a certain portion of their lands. In the first place, they had received advances of seed and money on that specified condition; and, secondly, their very lands were let to them on low, and sometimes on almost nominal terms, with the same proviso. The planters have, of course, such protection as is afforded by the Law Courts, in which they will probably gain a decree which they cannot enforce on account of the craft or poverty of the ryots, at an expense tenfold greater than the amount of their claims. It must be remembered that, while the arrears of individuals are often ridiculously small, the aggregate of such on a large estate amounts to a very considerable sum. No one, for instance, in this country would think of prosecuting a tenant for a balance of 43d.; but if there were some thousands of defaulters ranging from pence to pounds, who systematically defied their landlords, we suspect that very little forbearance would be exhibited. Mr. Kenny, at any rate, tried the experiment of recovering what was due to him through the agency of our Civil Courts, and discovered that, independently of the trouble and vexation, he would have to expend at least a shilling to recover three halfpence. That he speedily desisted from such a losing game is not very surprising. The amount of litigation, however, which was engendered by these disputes is really deplorable. Whereas, in the twelvemonths between 1st May, 1859, and 30th April, 1860, only eighty-two suits were instituted in connection with indigo factories in the Jessore district, there were no fewer than 3,619 in the following year. And yet, says Mr. Morris, the planters rather erred on the side of leniency. "Instead of at once employing all the legal means available to enforce payment as each instalment fell due, they held back, trusting to the effects of time or to their own personal influence to bring about a better state of things. It is no light matter," he continues, "for a landlord, however just his claims may be, to confront the whole of his tenantry, and take them into Court. The institution of suits in the mass is like a declaration of war, showing that amicable arrangement is at an end, and that considerations of trouble and expense have been cast aside." Besides, it is almost as easy a matter to extract blood from a flint as money from a recalcitrant Indian ryot, notwithstanding that Mr. J. P. Grant has designated that individual as "a capitalist,"-apparently on the principle of lucus a non lucendo. Nor was it merely the Civil Courts that were overwhelmed by an influx of litigation,—the increase of criminal cases was in a similar proportion. Instead of in 1860-61; and in the Magoorah Court they rose from 194 to 805. To deny to the European planters the right of enhancing their rents, implies an exercise of power to which no Englishman will patiently submit, nor has the rise in Bengal been either exorbitant or arbitrary. Whenever the ryots have been willing to continue the cultivation of indigo no alteration has taken place, but it would be very unreasonable to expect that the planter zemindars would dispense with both indigo and rent. The foundation of these disturbances, however, was laid many a year ago, when the permanent settlement was so rashly effected by Lord Cornwallis. Since then the Government, having nothing to gain from the improved condition of Bengal, has stood aloog quite contented to leave the great zemindars in the full enjoyment of power and caprice. By degrees the actual occupation of the land has fallen into the hands of a sort of middle members of the store of the state of the store of the state of the store of the state of the store of the state of the store of the state of the store of the state of the store of the store of the store of the store of the store of the store of the store of the store of the store of the store of the store of boundaries. Indeed, owing to frequent inuadations, and consequent landships, the demarcation of estates must always be a fruiful source of violence or litigation, until the whole of Lower Bengal be properly surveyed by the officers of the Government, and certain landmarks established for future guidance. It is certainly most discreditable to our capacity articles, the store of the Alphan discreditable to our capacity articles, the store of the Alphan discreditable to our capacity articles, the store of the store of the Alphan discreditable to our capacity articles, the store of the store of the store of the store of the alphan discreditable to our capacity articles, the store of the store o Government, having nothing to gain from the improved condition of Bengal, has stood aloof, quite contented to leave the great zemindars

TEA CULTIVATION .- Another new tea company is announced, an unmistakable proof of the success of the tea experiment in Cachar. The Sylhet and Cachar Tea Company (Limited) will have a capital of six lakhs, in 3,000 shares of Rs. 200 cach. The property is partly in the neighbourhood of Sylhet and partly in Cachar. The estate in the former locality has been worked for some time. In the Cachar grant nothing has yet been done. The directors promise a dividend on the paid-up capital of 6 per cent. per annum up to January 1863, and then they will declare a dividend from the produce of next season. The spare capital of Calcutta is fast being diverted from Indigo to Tea.

LUCKNOW RAILWAY COMPANY .- We regret to learn from the report of a meeting of share-holders in the local journal, that the Luck-now Railway Company has failed to raise from local capitalists the necessary funds to carry on the undertaking. Mr. T. G. A. Palmer, of Allahabad, has taken over the whole scheme. This says little for the enterprise and intelligence of the leading talookdars and merchants of the province. Maharajah Maun Singh seemed to feel this, for as the meeting broke up he made the empty boast that he could have easily completed the line unaided. The Branch Railway Bill, now before the council, will give Mr. Palmer every facility in his spirited undertaking.

FINE HEAD OF HAIR.

FINE HEAD OF HAIR,

The BEARD, WHISKERS, and MUSTACHIOS are realised by the use of

THIS ELEGANT and FRAGRANT OIL

possesses wonderfully nourishing powers for promoting the growth, preserving and beautifying the human hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. In the growth of the beard, whiskers, evebrows, and mustachios it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood, the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects; mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandriff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per bottle.

PRICHARD'S AROMATIC STEEL PILLS for weak and relayed constitutions, are especially refor weak and relaxed constitutions, are especially recommended to persons residing in India and other hot climates. Their immediate action is to disperse that unpleasant feeling of relaxation and langour, by constringing and invigorating the muscular and nervous system, and strengthening the whole frame. By supplying the waste to which all weak constitutions are liable, they arrest that premature decay of nature so common in all hot climates. In boxes, 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

Prepared by W. PRICHARD, Apothecary 65, Charing-cross, London, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—DISTEMPERS OF FEMALES.—There are many derangements of the circulation and the nerves to which woman patiently, though unwisely, submits, till disease is established and health undermined. In all such irregularities Holloway's Ommant, diligently robbed upon the spine twice a-day, will have the happiest effect in regulating all erroneous action, and in calming excessive nervous sensonity. Holloway's Phis should be taken at the same time to improve the digestion, purify all the cooporeal organs, and direct the vital emergics, so essential to the maintenance of he-lith. The maladies of females, whether constitutional or functional, chronic or recent, usually so unmanageable, yet so absolutely necessary for their comfort, wellars, and happiness, soon yield to this treatment.

MAILS TO INDIA.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and Ghina, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Suuday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southan pton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR present issue will be found to contain much varied intelligence peculiarly interesting to military readers, received by the Bombay Mail of the 27th September. The Amalgamation Catechism is brought down to the 105th Question and Answer, and several other matters of equal importance are given under their respective headings.

Cholera appears to have almost entirely ceased in India, but is reported to be moving in a north-westerly direction through Central Asia. Should it follow its usual path it may be expected to reach London about the middle of the Exhibition season-a ghastly sample of the products of "the gorgeous East."

Owing to the unusually heavy fall of rains serious inundations have taken place at Ghazeepore, Allahabad, and Cawnpore. The c rops, however, promise to be abundant, and were ripening favourably.

The Viceroy had deferred his departure for the North-West Provinces until the 25th Oct., and was not expected to go further than Allahabad. H.M. steam frigate Ferooz was under orders to proceed on the 6th of the present month from Bombay to Suez, there to await the arrival of the new Governor-General. After conveying Lord Elgin to Calcutta, the same steamer will return to Suez with Earl Canning on board.

It was reported that Sir George Clerk and Sir William Denison were to meet at the new port of Sedasghegur early in October, for the purpose of transferring the province of Chnara from the Madras Presidency to that of Bombay.

The Cotton Commissioners, Mr. Haywood and Dr. Forbes, have safely arrived at Bombay, and were preparing to visit Surat. A good beginning has been made on the opposite side of the peninsula—the steamer Mayflower having ascended the Godavery as high as Chanda.

The prospectus has been issued of a new Company, under the direction of Sir Macdonald Stephenson, c.E., for the purpose of restoring the telegraphic communication between India and Egypt. It is proposed, in the first instance, to send out a vessel with 200 miles of cable, to repair the portion submerged between Kurrachee and Aden. Should that, however, prove to he improcticable, the old line with an artisterwards disposed of towards defraying the expenses of the adventure. In the worst possible case, no greater loss can be incurred than that of £50,000, whereas, in the event of success, very large profits may be confidently anticipated. If the line between Aden and the Indian coast can once more be put into working order, it is intended to relay the cable between Suez and Aden, keeping more closely than heretofore to the western shore of the Red Sea. The Government is willing, with the consent of Parliament, to continue to the shareholders of the present company the guaranteed interest of 41 per cent. on £800,000, in the form of annuities terminable in fifty years-no guarantee whatever being demanded by the new company. It is understood that the directors of the old company have entertained this proposition in a very favourable spirit, and will recommend that it be adopted by the shareholders at the meeting to be held on the 5th November. In the event of their refusal it is expected that Parliament will require them to carry out their engagement to provide telegraphic communication between Suez and Kurrachee.

We have to announce the death of Colonel Sir Claude Martine Wade, C.B., which took place on Monday, at Bath. The deceased was the son of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Joseph Wade, of the Bengal Army, and was born in Bengal, in 1794. He entered the military service of the East India Company in 1809; in 1823 was appointed diplomatic agent at Loodianah; in 1835 was placed in charge of our relations with Runjeet Singh and the States across the Indus; in 1838 was sent on a special mission to Peshawur, to join the Sikh army with Shah Zada-Timour, and was the first to force the Khyber Pass; he was appointed political agent at Malwa, Central India, in 1848, and received the honour of knighthood for "the tried judgment and ability" with which he conducted our relations with the Court of Lahore for seventeen years. In recognition of his services in Candahar, Cabul, and at the capture of Ghuznee, Sir Claude received permission, in 1841, to wear the Order of the Dorance Empire, and had also received the Star of the Punjab. He attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel in 1839, and received the local rank of colonel in the East Indies in 1855.

AMALGAMATION.

EXPLANATION OF DOUBTFUL POINTS IN THE AMALGAMATION ORDER OF 10TH APRIL.

His Excellency the Governor-General in Council directs the publication of the subjoined Questions on subjects of general interest and the Answers given by Government, in continuation of those published in Government General Order, No. 681, of the 2nd of August, 1861 :-

Question 92. Can an Officer now on the Staff, who entered the Service after the General Order dated 9th January, 1837, not having passed the prescribed examination in Hindoostanee, enter the Staff Corps under paragraph 69; and with reference to paragraphs 75 and 78, does this rule apply to Officers holding the appointment of Adjutant to a Native Corps?

Answer 92. An Officer who entered the Service after January, 1837, is ineligible to hold a permenent Staff appointment without having passed the usual Hindoostanee Examination, and he is, consequently, ineligible to join the Staff Corps. And though he may be holding an Adjutancy to a Native Corps, his case does not come within the provisions of paragraphs 75 and 78 of the General Order.

Q. 93. Whether time passed by an Officer (not belonging to the Corps of Engineers) in the Department of Public Works prior to its present organisation is to count as Staff Service under the Royal Warrant?

A. 93. All substantive appointments, but not appointments held temporarily for absent Staff Officers or otherwise will count as Staff Service.

N. B.-It is believed that, until within the last few years, any Officer (not of the Corps of Engineers) was usually considered to be ciating" in the Department of Public Works, though he might have held his appointment for a considerable period, and have been in the receipt of full Staff Salary.

The question is, will time passed in such a position count as Staff Service?

Yes, this was the case prior to the revision of the Department in 1854; Officers of Artillery, Cavalry, and Infantry, employed in the Department, were styled "officiating" or "in charge."

The appointments were, however, virtually per manent, for an Officer could only be removed by the appointment of an unemployed Engineer Officer; and there were not Engineer Officers enough for all the appointments.

The time passed in such a position will count as Staff Service, when there was an actual vacancy in contradistinction to a temporary vacancy.

Q. 94. [Paragraph 45.] Is it intended to be implied in the concluding portion of paragraph 45 of the General Order No. 332 of the 10th April, 1861, that Officers on the Staff who do not join the Staff Corps will henceforth be liable to be removed from their present appointments and employed in other duties in a manner that is not now usually done; and will an Officer joining the Staff Corps be guaranteed his Staff appointment so long as he does not prove himself unfit for it? while on the other hand, to an Officer not joining the Staff Corps, no such guarantee can be held out?

A. 94. The position of Officers who do not join the Staff Corps will be in no respect changed. Both Officers of the Staff Corps and those not joining it will be on the same footing with respect to tenure of appointment.

Q. 95. Will officers of the Indian army who do not wish to join the Staff Corps be eligible for staff employ, or will it hereafter be compulsory to join the Staff Corps on getting an appointment?

A. 95 When the Staff Corps is once formed, i.e. after 21st October, 1861, such officers will be available for any employ, Staff or other, at the discretion of the Government of India.

O. 96. An officer is at home on two years' furlough in 1856, and ordered out in consequence of the mutiny in 1857, having ten months of his leave unexpired, can he, if he joins the Staff Corps, take this balance of furlough without losing his appointment?

A. 96. Yes. He would be allowed the balance of his furlough, retaining his appointment.

Q. 97. An officer proceeds on fifteen months' leave, retaining his appointment; he obtains twelve months' additional leave and thereby forfeits his appointment, is his absence of fifteen months to be reckoned as Staff Service?

A. 97. Yes.

Q. 98. If an Officer now declares for Local Service, will his having so declared be a bar to his joining the Staff Corps?

A. 98. No, it will not.

Q. 99. Can an Officer having entered the Staff Corps retire from the Service and claim the extra £50 as pension offered in G.G.O. dated 8th March last, No. 79, provided he applies to retire before the 1st October next?

A. 99. Yes; but as shown in the Despatch No. 302, dated 2nd August, 1861, published in General Order No. 784 of the 5th September, 1861, it is not the intention of her Majesty's Government that Officers should enter the Staff Corps for the purpose of immediately retiring.

Q. 100. Should an Officer elect for the Local Service, will his claim for Regimental or Brigade Command, or for Staff employ generally, be diminished ?

A. 100. No.

Q. 101. With reference to paragraph 92, Government General Order No. 332, dated the 10th April, 1861, an unattached Officer being eligible for the Staff Corps fon the same terms as Indian Officers, and having therefore joined the Staff Corps], whether, having served on the Staff for a period of fourteen years and three months, will he be entitled to count this or what portion of this period as service in the Staff Corps?

A. 101. Service towards pension under the Staff Corps rules must be service as a Commissioned Officer; but the reduced scale of pension specially allowed to unattached Officers will be continued to them. See General Orders No. 322, dated 6th June, 1851.

Q. 102. Whether a Lieutenant in a British Regiment of Foot of eight years' service, who was appointed Officiating Assistant Commissioner, Tenasserim and Martaban on the 20th October, 1860, and confirmed in the appointment of Second Class Extra Assistant Commissioner, Tenasserim Provinces, in June, 1861, is eligible for the Staff Corps in India, and whether the service above-mentioned will count as service on the Staff?

A. 102. This Officer is eligible at discretion of Government to join the Staff Corps on probation under paragraph 75 of the General Order. Having been confirmed in permanent employ, his previous temporary employment will count as Staff Service: see Questions and Answers 26 and 40. But as this Officer held only temporary employment on the 18th of February last, he cannot be admitted into the Staff Corps previously to the 22nd October, 1861. After that date his claims will be considered.

Q. 103. Whether the period passed out of India by Officers of the Staff Corps either on furlough or on sick certificate will be counted towards the four years unemploy referred to in paragraph 98 of the amalgamation order?

A. 103. Yes.

Q. 104. Whether time passed by an Officer of Infantry as probationary Assistant Engineer is to count as Staff service?

A. 104. Yes, if he is subsequently appointed permanently.

Q. 105. Whether, as a special case, the time

Corps? (such Officers having given up during their absence from India, their chance of other permanent appointments).

A. 105. If the Officer held an appointment prior to proceeding on service to China, the time so passed will count for promotion in the Staff Corps, whether he volunteered for the service or

TRADE BETWEEN KURRACHEE AND CENTRAL ASIA.

Nothing can be more full of hope for our influence in Central Asia, as opposed to that of Russian traders, than the attention which has been devoted by the public, and the expeditions which have been planned or sent forth by the Government, to countries which have been ignored except by the sportsman since the war in Affghanistan. So disastrous was that war in itself and in its consequences to our prestige, that in our detestation of the policy of which it was the fruit we overlooked the fact that where it was folly to conquer as soldiers it was the highest wisdom to acquire supremacy as traders. The spread of small colonies of Englishmen along the Himalayan slopes; the impetus given to the cultivation of tea; the conquest of Pekin, the suzerain of the Mongolian tribes; and the imperious demands of geographical science, have all united to force on the Government of India and the authorities of Pegu and the Punjab the importance of establishing commercial relations with Central Asia. Accordingly, beginning at the Far East, Dr. Williams is now attempting to induce the somewhat suspicious and selfish King of Burmah to allow him to penetrate, by way of Bamo, into Yunan and the unknown south west provinces of China. Our expedition to Tumloong and recent treaty with Sikkim has opened up a path by which the traders of Lassa may communicate with the planters of Darjeeling. Next April, when the snows begin to melt, Captain Smyth and a party of officers, better equipped than any exploring expedition which has ever visited little known regions, will start from Almora through the Niti Pass into the heart of Thibet. The immediate results of these expeditions may be chiefly scientific, but their permanent effects will be of a commercial character.

Nor are the Puniab authorities less anxious to attract to the Indus and Kurrachee the trade of Western Thibet and Affghanistan. Sir Robert Montgomery has been for some time collecting information which will enable him to establish great fairs, where the merchants of Central Asia may exchange their wares for English manufactures instead of wearily carrying them to Bombay and Calcutta, thousands of miles, or preferring the far off markets and inferior articles on the southern frontier of Russia. The subject is, however, beset with difficulties of both a practical and theoretical kind, which start up the more closely it is examined. The Affghan traders, like most Asiatics, have no idea of the value of time, and are somewhat indifferent about a speedy sale of their goods. They leave their hills at the end of the hot weather, and have no intention of returning till the next warm season. By long journies they gratify the nomadic instincts which have never left them, and, in many cases, would rather go to Calcutta than be arrested at Mooltan. Then political economy urges that in a country like India, where transit duties are abolished, and which is under one Government, trade had better be left to itself. Whatever amount of truth there may be in these objections to a system of fairs which is essentially Asiatic, and which Russia has carried out so satisfactorily with the very people to whom we propose to offer greater advantages, we must remember that what is now desired by both Indian and Afighan traders, is a knowledge of each other's wants and capabilities. This an experimental Fair would supply, and we doubt not that at least by the cold weather of 1862 such will be established. By that time the passed on Foreign service by Officers who volun-railway from Kurrachee to Kotree, and the teered to do duty with Irregular Regiments in steam flotilla on the Indus will be in good China in 1860 counts for promotion in the Staff working order. The line between Umritsur and Lahore will then have been opened for some time, and that between Lahore and Mooltan will be far advanced towards completion.

Meanwhile the Affghan trade is most promising. The duties taken by the Dost are by no means prohibitive. The Pohindias are precisely the kind of carriers required, accustomed to the long tedious travelling, and ready to fight with any tribe which may attack them in the way. But the Cashmir commerce is in a state much less satisfactory. Maharaja Runbeer Singh, like Mehemet Ali, wishes to become the sole merchant in his His customs duties are pitched extravagantly high, and the proceeds form part of the capital with which he speculates. The present regulation is that all imported goods from India must go first to Jummoo, where they pay an enormous duty, which clears them to Shrinugur. If they are sent beyond that place, they again pay a second duty, at about the same excessive rate. The consequence is that few imported goods or British fabrics pass beyond Shrinugur, although the road is good from thence to Leh-the great entrepot at which unite the lines of trade from India, Eastern Toorkistan, Western China, and Thibet. The duties taken at Leh, which is also in the Maharajah's dominions, are very moderate. In fact, goods which have already paid at Shrinugur pay at Ladakh only at a nominal rate. Goods, however, from any other direc tion pay a higher tax, but still one far lower than is exacted at Jummoo and Shrinugur. The result is that British traders who have dealings with Yarkand, rather than run the gauntlet through the interior custom-houses, leave their own territory on the Kooloo border, and go to Leh, over the lofty passes between the Chenab and Indus, a far more difficult route than that from Shrinugur. This traffic, however, is still very small, and the fine wool from Yarkand is not allowed to leave the Cashmir territory. There is no doubt that the trade has been declining for some years, and now that we are endeavouring, though not with the expedition which might be wished for, to complete our communications with the sea board, easy and unimpeded access to the markets beyond the mountain frontiers becomes indispensable. Looking to the much greater distance which the Russian manufactures have to be carried by land from the shores of the Caspian, it is humiliating to know that these are in pos-session of the bazaars of Eastern Toorkistan, to the exclusion of our own.-Friend of India.

ABOUT COTTON.

It is early yet to speculate, even as to the quantity of cotton which England may expect to receive from India, the produce of the crop grown in the present season. That the demand for cotton so loudly made from Manchester will be responded to there can be no doubt; but to what extent, it is at present, and will be for some time, impossible to determine. The seed is as yet but barely in the ground in those districts in which the south west monsoon is most severely felt; and as the fall of rain this season has been unusually heavy, sowing has, in a measure, been retarded. Nevertheless, the reports from the provinces are favourable, inasmuch as the area already sown, and that set apart for cotton cultivation, is said to be unusually extensivein some districts double the quantity of land hitherto devoted to this object having been laid down with cotton. One great difficulty to be overcome is the feeling of distrust inherent in the native of India, which is roused by any attempts made to induce him to extend his cultivation of any particular crop. Reports are not wanting, and from trustworthy sources, of whole fields having been rooted up, immediately on inquiry being made as to the probable out-turn of cotton in some particular district—the ryots looking upon all such inquiries as precursors of additional and heavy taxation. This is a feeling which must and will wear out; but for the time it is attended with unfortunate consequences, as it tends, in some measure, to limit the supply of the staple so urgently demanded. These remarks and charges. In those districts where the cultivator receives advances for his crop, before he even turns the soil preparatory to its reception of the seed, no such distrust is felt; for, so long as pay ment for his crop is secured, it is a matter of indifference to him what that crop may be, always provided it is the most profitable which the soil of his fields will produce. In Dharwar, the Raiepore Doah, and Western Berar on one side of India: in the North-West, and some parts of Bengal on the other, great efforts are being made, and not unsuccessfully, very greatly to extend the cultivation of cotton this season. What the result will be lies yet within the womb of futurity. It is not a question of price which will influence increased cultivation, at least not so far as the cultivator himself is concerned; cotton pays him as well as any other crop he can raise on the same soil. The difficulty lies in the great risk of transport to the coast, and the expense attendant thereon. These are the great drawbacks to the production of cheap cotton in India, and it is to the improvement of the communications between the coast and interior, and thereby lessening the risk and expense of transport, that the Cotton Supply Association, and those interested in its produce, must turn their undivided attention, and exert their best energies. With these difficulties overcome, there is no reason why India should not produce as good and as cheap cotton as the Slave States of America. Moreover, in the districts from whence cotton is derived, Manchester may establish the additional market for her wares she so much requires. The same ways, whether rail, canal, or river, by which cotton will be drawn from the places of its growth, will convey into the interior the produce of Man chester mills; and provided she can produce coarse fabrics of a quality similar to the native home-spun cloths, and sell them to the ryot at a lower figure, Manchester need fear no dearth of cotton—the entire yield of the cotton fields of India will be at her disposal. The Punjaub with its five rivers, all affording means of speedy and safe transport, appears to possess great advantages for the cultivation of It numbers among its various works of public utility very heavy irrigation works, which for the production of cotton of the finer staples in a climate such as that of the Punjaub are highly desirable, if not absolutely requisite. has a numerous agricultural population, and is admirably administered—the former a sine qua non, the latter most advantageous-when capital has to be invested in the soil, and advances made In the for the fruits it has yet to yield. past year 1860-61, the cotton produced in the several divisions of the Punjaub and its dependencies amounted to 43,316,800 lbs., of which about 4,000,000 lbs. found their way to the coast. The quantity therefore absorbed in the country itself was in round numbers, 39,000,000 lbs., a very large portion of which might with good management and a judicious outlay of capital have been taken in exchange for the products of Manchester mills, instead of being devoted, as it was, to the manufacture of cloths, which Manchester ought to be able to supply at a figure which should defy competition on the part of any native hand looms. The Lieutenant-governor gives it as his opinion that the production of cotton might be indefinitely increased, but that to this end it will be necessary for English speculators to have their agents in the country ready to pay at once for the crop, and to give directions regarding the method of cleaning it. He further adds, that it is his belief that a greater breadth of cotton has been sown this year than last.

There is another direction in which cotton may be sought and found, and for which purpose Government either has sent, or is about to send, a competent person to institute inquiries. Upper Burmah prior to the insurrection in China had a considerable trade with Yunan, and by this route exported into China 10,000,000 lbs. of cotton, the growth of her fields, annually. For the last five or six years this route has been closed, and as no other market has been found for the staple the cultivation has been allowed to languish. It is might cause it again to flourish. A brisk market in Rangoon, there can be little doubt, would soon, but for one obstacle, revive it. That obstacle is the King of Burmah's export frontier duty. This is a matter for negotiation, and the relaxing of our frontier duties on rice, or fish, would in all probability have the effect of inducing his Majesty to take the embargo off cotton. As it is a matter of importance that the growth of cotton should be encouraged as much as possible, and as Burmah Proper can produce it, it would be well worth a trial as to whether or not some understanding might not be come to between the King of Burmah and the Governor-general's agent on this subject.

Some attempts have been made in British Burmah to improve the staple of the cotton grown there and to introduce foreign varieties. In only one instance has success attended these attempts Some New Orleans seed sown in light sandy soil yielded a fine crop, equivalent to 125 lbs. per acre. There is unfortunately a great disinclination on the part of the Burmese agriculturists to make use even of foreign seeds, and to all foreign agricultural products. The Texan seed sown in an experimental garden at Rangoon yielded a fair crop, but all other seeds failed, attributable to the want of knowledge among the parties introducing the seed as to the nature of the soil adapted to each variety. However, it would be vain to look to the British provinces of Burmah for any large supply of cotton, the population being so scanty as to preclude all hopes of cotton cultivation being undertaken on any large scale.

The subjects here broached, however, are well worthy the consideration of all parties in England who look to India to keep up the requisite supply of cotton, and through her means to continue in employment, and so save from starvation by any American vagaries the four million British subjects employed in connection with the cotton mills of the United Kingdom.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR C. WOOD ON THE BENGAL SECRETARIAT. -In reply to a communication from Mr. W. U. Eddis, the London representative of the Calcutta Landowners and Commercial Association, the Secretary of State has expressed himself to the following effect :- "Circulation under the Frank of the Bengal Secretariat of the 'Nil Darpan.'-Sir,-I am directed by Sir C. Wood to acknow. ledge the receipt of your letter, dated 19th inst., on the subject of the circulation in India of the pamphlet entitled 'Nil Darpan; or, the Indigo Planting Mirror,' and in reply, to observe with reference to the first paragraph of Mr. Fergusson's letter to your address of the 3rd June, that there is nothing in the correspondence submitted to you to connect the Bengal Government with the circulation of the pamphlet; indeed, it is distinctly stated in the letter of Mr. Lushington that the occurrence took place during the absence of the Lieutenant Governor from Calcutta, and was not by his order. 2. At the same time Sir C. Wood desires me to express his great regret that the official seal and frank of the Bengal Government should have been employed in giving circulation to the publication referred to. Such a proceeding would have been highly improper at any time, but especially so when the position of the indigo planter in Lower Bengal was one of great difficulty and embarrassment, and when such a use of the official frank was calculated to lead to an impression (for which Sir C. Wood is persuaded there is no real foundation) that the public authorities in Bengal entertain sentiments of hostility to the British settler. 3. Sir C. Wood will at once convev to the Government of India, for the information of the Government of Bengal, his entire disapproval of the proceedings of which you complain .- I am, sir, your obedient servant, DE GREY AND RIPON."

is attended with unfortunate consequences, as it tends, in some measure, to limit the supply of the staple so urgently demanded. These remarks apply more particularly to districts in which the ryot cultivates his land entirely at his own risk Allahabad and Benares is inundated, and the bund here is hourly expected to give way. River still rising. The Ganges has not been so high since the great inundation of 1838.

4-30 P.M.-River still rising. Many houses washed away and more than one hundred people drowned at Rachowra Ghat, a few miles from here. Indigo and other crops completely destroyed.

Took ten Dooliapore, Sept. 11.-Just arrived. hours to cross the river. Four miles of the road under water and obliged to use boats. Have opened an office here and send messages on by boat, nine miles, to the Dehree office, causing a delay of ten hours at Village of Chowhrutt washed away entirely, inhabitants removed here.

Seepree, Sept. 7.—From Inspector.—I have been as far as Goonah, whither I was obliged to proceed on horseback and without instruments, have only just returned, owing to bad roads. There have been excessive floods, and interruption still continues. I presume that the span across the Partsuttee has given way. The line, as far as inspected by me, is in good order; there is one European artificer at Beowra who is doing his utmost to restore communication. The rains have been very severe; the overland packets to Bombay have been delayed for days; it is reported that several villages in the districts have been partially swept away. The Chumbul river rose on the 5th unusally high. In case the cable is injured I shall open an office on the bank .- Bengal Hurkaru.

ALLAHABAD, Sept. 8 .- The most important fact in connection with this station at present is the unusual rise in the Jumna and Ganges. Since 1838, when these rivers broke through the bunds, they had never risen so high. Yesterday the water of the Jumna was rising at such a rate that had it continued for a short time longer the whole of Kydgunj would have been inundated; as it is, the utmost endeavours of the engineers are being devoted towards the preservation of dykes and embankments; and although the city people are still somewhat in dread of an inundation, I think that the danger has now passed, as the water has begun to recede. Of the Ganges less fear is entertained, as the bunds near Daragunj and the fort afford a sufficient protection from the rise of the water. The current in this stream is also not so strong as to prevent boats crossing as usual from the ghat to Jhosee on the Grand Trunk Road. The dawks, it is true, are delayed a few hours, but things are managed very well considering the state of the river. For nearly two entire days we had continued heavy but it cleared up this morning, and I think that we have every chance of fair weather for the rest of the month. I forgot to say that police-stations have been formed at short distances along the banks of the Jumna, to give early intimation of any approaching calamity to the inhabitants of the neighbouring suburbs.

The alarm yesterday induced the Allahabad Gazette to make a statement to the effect that the water from the Jumna had overtopped the bund. This is not correct. I may add at the Jumna bridge works have stopped for the present, as it is impossible to work while the present flood tide lasts .- Delhi Gazette.

GHAZEEPORE, Sept. 10.-In my last I mentioned the swelling of the river. The rising has now become a tremendous overflow. Old people say that they had never witnessed such a dreadful inundation for the last four decades. Half of the city is under water. Houses situated on the banks of the river are falling down every moment by tens and hundreds. The kucha wall on the south and west sides of the prison has also fallen down. Hundreds of the citizens have been de prived of their homes and property. My pen shudders to describe the distress of the poorer classes. They have neither place to lay their heads, nor means to procure bread. The river here is now as wide as seven or eight miles. The grain plants on both sides of the river have been all destroyed. All egress and ingress from and to the have been stopped. The condition of the people living on the other side of the river is with their inhabitants and everything. Those who have escaped from water are now dying of hunger. Indeed, what must be the state of the low country, when such a high town as ours is on the point of being washed away? Rain is also pouring down. There have been several heavy falls during the last ten days. If the rain and the rising of the river continues at this rate for a day or two, the result will be fatal destruction.-Delhi Gazette.

Total .. 65.46.315 45,56,412 14.42.343 CHOLERA AT MEEAN MEER.-There fresh case of cholera admitted into hospital in the 51st on the 13th of September, one death in the 94th, and thirteen men in both regiments discharged "cured." There remain under treatment forty-nine men and five women. Europeans. and three sepoys. Cholera may be said to have nearly ceased, but fever, we regret to say, is much on the increase. In the Central Jail, too, fever has broken out among the prisoners. Cholera first showed itself at Meean Meer on the 6th of August, on which day the strength of the brigade in European non-commissioned officers and men was two thousand one hundred and sixty-two. On the 13th of September (yesterday), when the cholera is supposed to have ceased, the strength was reduced to one thousand six hundred and seventynine, there having been four hundred and eightythree deaths among the men, besides one officer Lieutenant Colonel Irby), one officer's wife (Mrs. Napper) and child, twenty-three European women, and twenty-five children, making a grand total of five hundred and thirty-four deaths from cholera among Europeans alone. The following memorandum exhibits particulars which show at one view the havoc committed by the disease at Meean

The rate of deaths among the non-commissioned officers and men comprising the whole force is rather above 22 per cent. on the total strength. The 94th have suffered the most, its loss being about 32 per cent., or nearly one third of the wing; while the 51st have lost 25 per cent., or one-fourth of the regiment. The deaths among the European Cavalry are equal to 144 per cent.; in the Royal Artillery 91; and in the Bengal 61 per cent. It will be observed that the 3rd Company 4th Battalion Artillery has not lost a single man, and what renders the circumstance more remarkable is the fact that it was quartered in the Fort of Lahore, with a detachment of the 51st, in which cholera of the most virulent nature broke out, and clung to the men after the symptoms had become milder among their comrades elsewhere. In an article we wrote recently on the subject of cholera we mentioned among other probable predisposing causes, the bad quality of the food supplied to the soldiers and the want of cleanliness in the cooking operations. We were accidentally in the neighbourhood of a regimental kitchen one day, and there we saw outside, in the open air, a large quantity of rice which the cooks had put into baskets in order that the water might drain off. This rice was covered all over with a black substance, which we ascertained, on the basket being worse. Several villages have been swept away, lifted, to consist of myriads of flies! We then entered the cook-room (swarming with flies) and witnessed the filthy manner in which the meat was taken out of the pots, and pitched about as if it were food intended for dogs. On another occasion we purposely visited a bakery where bread was being made for soldiers. We refrain from describing the manner in which a gang of dirty natives were kneading the dough, in a confined room with the thermometer above 100 deg. It was sickening to behold! We know that in some corps greater care is taken than in others, but we suspect that although, as a general rule, officers may inspect the raw meat on its delivery, and also after being cooked and served on the table for the men's dinner, yet nothing whatever is known by the officers of the treatment the meat has experienced in the interval. Again, the cooking utensils are not examined daily as they ought to be; and, moreover, we say it advisedly, proper care is not always taken to see that the copper vessels are kept "tinned." We much fear that if an inquiry were instituted at Meean Meer it would be discovered that in one case, at least, the copper cooking utensils had not been "kullyed" for upwards of a month previous to the cholera breaking out. As we said before, in some corps much pains are taken to render the men comfortable in all matters connected with their meals, and we may instance the 1st troop 2nd brigade of Bengal Artillery, as a model in this respect. The men of this troop (Bourchier's), and perhaps in others, pay voluntarily two annas a day each, to provide extra messing, such as puddings, additional vegetables, &c., in excess of what is supplied by the Commissariat. The men possess crockery, glasses, tablecloths, and every table requisite of excellent quality. Each mess has a water-filter, and an almirah in which to keep victuals and stores; over every mess table is a punkah, and before every door a chick to keep out the flies. Of course the commanding officer occasionally and the subalterns daily inspect the rations, but we are unable to say if they ever visit the cock-room when the babachies are engaged around the caldrons making nasty messes, like the witches in Macbeth; or if they know any thing about the way in which bread is manipulated and pedipulated! In some regiments the men's food is brought to table, not on crockery, but on common earthen pots of the material of which water goblets are made, which, although it is impossible to clean them properly, are used day after day as long as they last. These vessels are impregnated with every day's gravy, and must, to say the least, become in time very unpleasant to the nose and palate.—Times of NUDDEA, August 20 .- A correspondent of the Indian Mirror gives the following account of a religious festival which had been celebrated at that place :- " The ' Monsa Jaut,' or the festival of the goddess presiding over serpents, was observed here during the last month (Sravan). The whole of it was observed by women of all classes. After the men retire for the night, the females congregate in numbers before the timehallowed monsa tree (a species of Cactia), when an elderly matron or two commence singing the Monsa Bhasan,' a tale celebrating the deeds of the Dread Goddess; the younger portion of the congregation join in chorus; any striking or interesting part in the tale brings in 'hooloos,' an articulate sound of the tongue made by the Bengalees as an expression of pleasure or joy, and loud soundings of conches, in which the fair of this country are very expert. No sooner this deafening merriment ends, when the 'dhak' or the Bengali drum, has its turn, the young damsels strike up a dance until the elder ladies resume the theme of the song. The air is plaintive, though monotonous. The subject-matter of the tale cannot be new to many of your native readers; it is the untimely fate of Lakhinder, the austere chastity of Bahoola, by which she re-trieved her lost husband from the ire of Monsa and the yawning of the grave. Your Calcutta native gentlemen, perhaps, do not know that their countrywomen both sing and dance so near them. Why do they not introduce these arts and accomplishments among their families! Surely the times are far advanced for these social improvements. I say, if such arts are not deemed indecent in women within some forty miles from Calcutta, why should it be so among educated Bengalese of the city? The Shasters enjoin both singing and dancing as the legitimate accomplishments of the fair sex. Hundreds of instances may be found in the Poorans and Kavyas of ladies enlivening their homes with music and song."

THE COMPETITION WALLAHS .- We hear that the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab in his reply to the request of the Governor-general for his opinion on the comparative merits of the old class of civilians and the competition men, decides that, so far as they have passed under his own observation, he considers them to have proved themselves men of higher natural intellectual power and greater educational culture than the nominated civilians.

THE E. BATTERY ROYAL HORSE ARTILLERY is under orders to march from Meean Meer, on the 1st November, for Mooltan, whence it will be conveyed by river steamers to Kurrachee, and there embark for England. The battery landed in Calcutta on November 7th, 1857, so that it will have been away from England, by the time it gets home, nearly five years.

THE CHINA AND THIBET EXPEDITION .- The Friend of India thus summarises the "Notes on the Yang-tse-Kiang from Han-kow to Pingshan, by Lieut.-col. Sarel, F.R.G.S.," one of Captain Blakiston's exploring party, who failed in their efforts to reach Lassa:—"The expedition left Shanghai on the 11th February. From Yochow to Pingshan the river has been carefully surveyed by Captain Blakiston. Specimens of mineralogy, ferns, and insects have been collected and forwarded to England. At Ichang, eleven hundred miles from Shanghai, up to which steamers can go, the party engaged a boat fit for the ascent of the rapids. Above this the scenery is very grand, coal abounds, and gold is found in the streams. Poppy and tobacco are everywhere grown. Except for eighty miles between Ichang and Quaichow, and even that is practicable, the river is navigable as far as Pingshan, where the expedition turned back. There the river begins to be called Kin-cha-Kiang, or river of gold. The boatmen call it the Yunnan river, the boundary of that province being just below Pingshan. To the west are the Maoutse, or independent tribes; they are a totally different looking race from the Chinese, their faces being open and honest, which the Chinese faces certainly are not. The rebels in the country are not the Taipings, but robbers encouraged by the weakness of the Tartar Government. Part of the Mussulman population of Yunnan is also in insurrection, under the leader-ship of a Hadji by name Ma Yussu; his head quarters are at Ta-lif, on the high road leading from the Burmese frontier to Yunnan, the capital of the Province, and to Chingtu, the capital of Sz'chuen. China, to the south and west, may be said to be out of the hands of the Government. Col. Sarel says :- I attribute our failure to penetrate into Thibet to no hostility on the part of the authorities, but to the impossibility of obtaining people to accompany us through a country where they had a very good chance of having their throats cut. The Viceroy of Sz'chuen is the Governor of Thibet, and is said to be well affected towards foreigners; he is a brother of the newly made minister for foreign affairs at Pekin, and resides at Chingtu."

SIR HUGH ROSE, G.C.B.-The Englishman says that "His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will leave the presidency in the last days of this month for his cold weather tour of military inspection. He will proceed first to Darjeeling to look up the troops at that sanatarium, and make a general examination of the hill station itself: which work completed, his excellency will repair to Allahabad, there to meet the Governor-general on his way to Agra, whither Sir Hugh Rose will accompany him, to be present at the grand star Thence the Commander-in-Chief investiture. will continue his tour to the North-West Provinces and the Punjab-passing, as we said some time ago, the cold season in that country. His excellency will make a thorough inspection of the troops at the presidency and the adjoining military stations before leaving Calcutta for Upper India."

Sikkim. — Our Sikkim corresdondent writes that their communications with Darjeeling have been nearly altogether cut off, in consequence of the unusual floods. The cane bridge over the Runjeet is altogether swept away, no sign left of The Dewan Namgoway has joined his old master, and is passing the weary days in retired life. Cheebo Lama is collecting from the Sikkimites the amount of the second instalment, now nearly due, towards the fine imposed for the costs of the late expedition. Snake bites have been unusually frequent, causing many deaths among the Hill people.- Englishman.

CACHAR.-Two of the fugitives of Maipak Singh's party have been arrested. He himself and his principal followers are reported to have gone south into the Ahoorbai country, where he was formerly sheltered during the time he was proscribed. The conduct of Goono Deb Sarma the subadar who commanded the party, is deserving of great credit. The swiftness with which he pursued the Princes, the gallantry with which he attacked them, and the perseverance with which he followed up after the action, has affected the success of the expedition, and our superintendent has recommended to Government that the Subadar's conduct should be marked with the Lieutenant-governor's approbation.

LAHORE LIGHT HORSE.—The Englishman understands that "the days of the Lahore Light Horse are drawing to an end, and that the regiment will shortly be disbanded. At this we are not surprised, seeing that the necessity for entertaining the corps has long since passed away, and its utility is not equivalent to the expense incurred in its maintenance, which in many points amounts to that of a European cavalry regiment. The Lahore Light Horse is a hybrid remnant of the straits and shifts to which we were put in the mutiny, and has survived sufficiently long the times and troubles that called it into existence.

HUMEERPOOR, Sept. 7 .- Our little station has been for the last three or four days literally immersed in water. The Jumna from one side, and the Betwa from the other, have come upon the place with irresistible force, forming junctions at before and behind old Humeerpoor, and the civil and military stations, and rendering every ingress and egress almost impracticable. Many of us have been eye-witnesses to whole houses being borne down by the Jumna and Betwa; men, women, and children were sitting on choppers (thatched roofs) floating down the rapid streams in imminent danger of being drowned, and crying for help which, alas! none could afford them. Dead bodies, and bodies of human beings yet but half dead, and of those gasping for breath, were actually countless. Cases more heartrending than theirs can hardly be conceived. A place named Meranpoor, on the road to Futtehpoor, about a mile from the collector's cutcherry here, has sunk under water. But, although property to a large extent has been destroyed, there has been no loss of life there, save that of young cattle, which it was beyond the power of their owners to rescue. The rise of the river was sudden, and took the people as it were by surprise. At this juncture our civil authorities have done much towards the relief of the houseless and half-starved poor, giving them shelter in their own private compounds .- Delhi

FEROZE SHAH .- The rebel leader Feroze Shah is now, according to the thousand and first report of him, said to have turned up as a hakeem, somewhere among the hill people of Central India, where he supports himself by the exercise of the honourable profession of medicine.

COLONEL A. BROOME, of the Bengal Artillery, is now engaged in preparing a scheme for reorganising the purchasing-out fund of that regiment.

SIC TRANSIT .- The Legislative Council of India, established in its present form by Lord Dalhousie in 1853, held its last sitting on Saturday, the 7th September. It expired under the formal motion of Sir Bartle Frere, "that this Council do adjourn till Saturday, 16th November." Before that date, we believe, the Viceroy will issue a Proclamation, pronouncing its dissolution, and calling the new councils into existence. A few words by Sir Bartle Frere, acknowledging the services of the Judges, and chiefly of Sir Barnes Peacock, to whom much that has been really great in the Council is owing, would have been at least graceful. They were not spoken. They are left for the Proclamation. Distrusting the future we admire the past.

"Few and short were the prayers we said,
And we spoke not a word of sorrow,
As we stediastly gazed on the face that was dead,
And we bitterly thought of the morrow." Friend of India.

THE PROSPERITY OF PEGU.

Perhaps the most remarkable fact in the history of the administration of British India during the year 1860-61 is the growth of Pegu. The figures which we publish are all the more wonderful because they are quite unexpected. The past year has been one of stagnation in the European trade and of sore complaint by the English merchants of the province. Although the rice crop was the largest ever known, the rice export, and the general sea-borne trade was below that of the previous season. This, the only gloomy feature in the most satisfactory report that has been published since that of the Punjab in 1854, cannot be ascribed, as is done by the chief commissioner, to a desire on the part of the cultivators to wait for better prices. The only reason we can assign for so paradoxical a state of things, is high freights caused by the China expedition, which made the export of such an article as rice almost prohibitory, and a large consumption by the Burmese beyond the frontier. The income of the year, as contrasted with its predecessor, is seen from the following table. In 1856.7 the whole revenue was under Rs. 35,00,000:

The Capitation-tax has been our most successful experiment in the taxation of Asiatics. It is levied on all males between the ages of 18 and 60, at rates varying from Rs. 5 on non-cultivators, to one rupee, according to the amount of the land cultivated. It is as popular as it is possible for any tax to be, and increases with every male adult added to the population. It has all the advantages of a House-tax, for they who are subject to it are too patent to the tax gatherer to escape. It possesses all the recommendations of the Income-tax, because it is graduated according to the ability to pay. It is free from the disadvantages attendant on both, it allows no room for oppression or deceit, and is easily collected. If the 132 millions of our subjects paid a Capitation-tax at the same rate as the one million inhabitants of Pegu, we should have a revenue of 130 lacs of vacant.

rupees, or 13 millions sterling! So satisfactory is the financial result of the year's administration that we rejoice to learn there is some prospect of our recommendation being carried out, in the abolition of the inland customs or transit duties, which yielded Rs. 5,78,971. This sum would be made up in a few years by the increase of trade, and we might tempt the King of Ava to pursue a more liberal policy, and surrender some of those commercial monopolies to which he clings like a Jew usurer, to the impoverishment of his subjects and his own exchequer.

The prosperity of Pegu keeps steady pace with the increase of its population. The country wants only men, labour, human hands, to rival Bengal. We fear it is hopeless to expect Colonel Phayre to import coolies like the Colonial authorities. But he is willing, we understand, to meet this chief difficulty by asking for a law to bind labourers to their employers for a term of three years, as in the Colonies. This, with a concession of the fee-simple of the soil, would be a great step in advance, for several tribes of Shans have already settled in our territories of their own accord, and more may be induced to do so. We may form an idea of what Pegu would become with a population thrice its present amount, when we say that the province is slightly larger in area than Scotland, having an extent of 32,250 square miles. The following figures show how, with the growth of population from 789,105 in 1856-57 to one million in 1860-61, the cultivation has in-Scotland, with a population of 3 millions, and with physical characteristics not so favourable as those of Pegu, has 20 millions of acres under cultivation. In Scotland there are about 7 acres to each individual, in Pegu there is not so much as one. Nature has denied to Scotland the rich soil and the tropical wealth she has lavished on Pegu, and so has developed the hardy virtues of her inhabitants. In Pegu, without any of these virtues, with only unskilled labour aided by little intelligence and no science, three millions of inhabitants might produce results unprecedented in the East. While paying the tribute of our admiration to Colonel Phayre, for his administrative success, we must still express our belief that this labour difficulty is capable of a more satisfactory solution than he has yet given.-Friend of India.

THE LATE MAJOR-GENERAL HUTTON .- Majorgeneral Hutton served for a period of nearly fifty years in India. He received a cadetcy in the Madras army in 1811, was gazetted ensign in the 22nd Madras N.I. on the 11th of June, 1812, and joined his regiment in India on the 13th of July of the same year, from which time till his death he served in that country, with the exception of occasional periods of absence on medical certificate, amounting in the whole to about seven vears. General Hutton was employed against the rebels in Rajahmundy in 1813-14, against the Pindaree inroads in 1815-16; he served with his regiment in the Mahratta campaign, with the light field force against the ex-Rajah of Nagpore in 1819, and in the campaign in Burmah in 1825-26. General Hutton held command of regiments for thirteen years. In 1839-40 he was appointed one of the commissioners to investigate the charges against the eldest brother of the Nizam, and was assistant adjutant-general of the Hyderabad subsidiary force. He held the command of the garrison at Fort St. George, Madras, and the commands of the Saugor and Southern divisions. General Hutton had received the medal for Ava. By his death, which occurred at Vizianagram on the 28th of August last, the colonelcy of the 22nd regiment of her Majesty's Madras army becomes

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS .--The Cochin Courier states that "a question of some importance to the shipping interests has just been decided by the Governor-general in Council, and may serve as a caution particularly to the Indian mail steamers desiring to land passengers at intermediate ports. A few months ago the P. and O. Co.'s steamer China, in passing Cochin, landed a Mr. Marcell on board of another vessel at anchor in the outer roads; and the authorities here claimed tonnage dues from the P. and O. Company's agent at Bombay in consequence. They maintained, that although the China did not drop anchor or remain on the roads for a longer period than forty-eight hours, still the act of entering the port and landing a passenger precluded her from the exemption allowed by the Act. If immunity from the payment of port dues were allowed in this case, nothing could prevent a steamer from landing any number of passengers, or any extent of cargo, in passing a port, provided she did not drop anchor or remain longer than forty-eight hours; a circumstance which would neutralise the objects of the law provided in such cases. The claim was resisted on behalf of the company, who were supported in their refusal by the opinion of the commissioner of customs in Bombay; but upon a reference made by the Madras Government to the Gov. gen. in Council, it was decided that the landing of a passenger intended for Cochin, under the circumstances stated, was a 'discharge' within the meaning of the Act, and clearly rendered the P. and O. Co. liable to the payment of port dues."

EXPLORATORY EXPEDITIONS THROUGH BURMAH. -The only true and practicable line of communication between Burmah and China is via Yunan, and an expedition, starting with the object of opening out this route, would be attended with sound practical results. To this end it is proposed, provided the consent of the King of Burmah is obtainable, to employ Dr. Bigaudet, the Roman Catholic prelate of Burmah, to conduct an exploring party; associating with him an officer of some scientific attainments and possessed of a practical knowledge of surveying. The route it is proposed to follow is that which, prior to the cessation of trade between the capital of Burmah and China, was in general use, but which, since the revolutionary movement in China commenced, has been practically closed. Of the idle class of schemes with a like object is that of Dr. Williams' mission to Avathe proposal certainly never emanated from any one in authority in these provinces, and must have been the result of an inordinate desire in the doctor to bring himself before the public. At any rate the so-called "Mission to Ava," has resulted in permission being accorded to Dr. Williams to locate himself on his own charges, at Maundalay for twelve months, after which should the knowledge he has in that time obtained of the Burmese character and of the court intrigues. enable him to impart any useful information to the commissioner he will remain in the capital as agent to the agent of the Governor-general, but not, as the Calcutta papers inform us, as resident. It is in contemplation to despatch Mr. Edward Forbes, a merchant of Rangoon, a Burmese scholar, and a man thoroughly acquainted with the nature, habits, customs, and religion to the North of Burmah into the districts, which prior to the trade with China being stopped, used to export into that country as much as 10,000,000 lbs. of cotton annually. But with the closing of the route to traders the cultivation languished, and but little more is now grown than the country itself consumes. But though this is now the case, a brisk market at Rangoon would soon revive it, and there is little doubt but that the supply in a few years would fully equal the demand. To bring this about there is one thing necessary, however, and that is to induce the King to take off his frontier export duty. There would be no difficulty in this, provided our Government is willing to forego its frontier duty on rice or fish. It therefore resolves itself into a question of ways and means. and whether the Government, if not prepared to forego the revenue realised from the duty on HYDRABAD.-We have had a good deal of commotion in a small way for the last five or six days. The Nizam makes some difficulty and objection to his acceptance of the Star of India, which his minister and Shums-ool-oomrah have been assiduously endeavouring to remove. The bigot Mussulman gives a sinister import to everything proceeding from the English Government, and out of doors it is discussed that the Nizam, who is enjoined by his religion to destroy every effigy, or portrait of any living animal over which he may have power, cannot possibly consent to bear upon his person the representation, even of her Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, and doubts are assumed as to what the ulterior bearings of this badge may be, whether it may not be a badge of servitude. But I do not understand that either of these objections makes the Nizam's difficulty, which is supposed to proceed from his distaste of the collar and of the robes. Why, I cannot tell, and I do not expect to find much explicitness in any explanation which may be given on the subject, nor indeed the avowal of the real motive for declining the honour. P. S .- I understand that his Highness's difficulty about the acceptance of the Order of the Star proceeds from religious motives. He can neither wear an efligy nor a velvet robe! -Englishman.

NAGPORE, Sept. 11 .- Mr. Temple has not yet arrived. The weather has been pretty fair for the last few days. Our Commissioner, Colonel E. K. Elliot, has applied for two months' leave of absence, as he is quite exhausted with hard labour, and Dr. Heude, the Civil Surgeon, having deemed it indispensable that he should rest for a season for the safety of his health. The Commissioner, however, stops at Nagpore for this period, after the expiration of which, should he be sufficiently recruited in health, he will resume his duties. Major J. K. Spence, the Judicial Commissioner, takes charge of the Commissioner's office, and Major Balmin, the extra Judicial Commissioner, takes charge of Major Spence's office; these arrangements are "pro tem." Our Chief Engineer, Major Harley Maxwell, will soon leave this on sick leave, and Mr. Gilbert Hickey will assume charge of the D.P.W. Sickness within the last week in the shape of fevers, has been on the increase, consequent perhaps on the sudden break of the weather .- Poona Observer.

THE TRANSFER OF NORTH CANARA.

It is certainly no "lust of territory" that makes us hope that the rumour of Sir George Clerk's approaching visit to Sedashegur for the purpose of receiving charge of the province of North Canara from the Madras Government is well founded.

served by the transfer to this Presidency of the | vey within ten years after it has been transferred whole Canarese and Malabar Coast, with which Bombay has so intimate and important, and Madras so few, relations; but the transfer of North Canara cannot longer be delayed, without serious interference with our prospect of increased cotton supplies from the Southern Mahratta Country. Lying, as the district does, between the cotton fields of Dharwar, and the natural port of ship ment, Sedashegur, if we are not prepared to transfer the Dharwar collectorate to Madras, North Canara should at once come under the charge of this Government. The producing districts of Belgaum, Dharwar, and Lingasoor all lie beyond it, and while these fertile districts are under our administration, it lies within Madras caprice whether roads shall be made through Canara to a port of outlet for their produce upon the coast. The vast produce of seeds and cotton in Belgaum, Dharwar, and Lingasoor have to traverse the whole length of North Canara to reach the coast, and as Madras has no interest in the transit, she will take no steps to facilitate it. It is now nearly a quarter of a century that this question has been agitated, and in spite of oft renewed promises to open direct communications to the coast, little or nothing has been done. Meanwhile Dharwar has become the most important cotton field of India. It is the district in which the naturalization of the American plant has become so successful as to threaten to drive the indigenous cotton wholly out of cultivation. Manchester is therefore turning her serious attention towards this district, and it is here that the company Mr. Haywood represents, purposes, we believe, to commence its operations. Under these circumstances it is impossible that North Canara should longer remain under the adminis tration of Madras, the obstructive tendencies of which are a tradition in the country, and had been forcibly illustrated in this very district. The great want of the district, as is well known, is a direct road from Hooblie to Sedashegur, and though that want has been pressed upon the attention of the Madras Government for many years, it is still to be supplied. Roads in other directions through Canara it is willing enough to make, but a road through the province, that might serve as an outlet for the produce of Dharwar to the sea, it will not make, and the time is come when we must take the district and do the work ourselves. It will be strange if we do not accomplish in two years what Madras would dream over for the next ten. We have not heard whether the entire district, or only a part of it, is to be transferred; if the latter, it has been suggested to us that the Gairseppa River would form an admirable boundary line of the territory to be annexed.

From what we have now said it will readily be gathered that the acquisition of North Canara is important to us only on the ground we have named. The province can hardly be said to have a trade of its own of any kind, and what it has already belongs to us. With Madras it has no relations whatever other than administrative, for while every sowkar in the district can give you bills on Bombay there is not a banker in all Canara that can give a hoondee upon Madras. The only export of the district is timber, and even that nearly all finds its way to Bombay. It was on account of the importance of its forests to this presidency that Dr. Gibson, we believe, advocated its transfer some years before the cotton question had come to overshadow all others by its importance. All along the frontier above the ghauts lies a small strip of forest land not more than five miles in breadth within our own territory, and the difficulty of managing without trespass a jungle frontier of this nature can be easily understood. Upon the transfer of the province, the forest land on both sides of the frontier would, of course, come under the supervision of a single authority; and in whatever aspect the transfer is considered its desirableness is clear. Thus, if the district remain under the Madras Government, there is little hope of its survey till the next generation is passed away; while we may The interests of the country would probably be | reasonably reckon upon the completion of a sur- | Coghlan.

to this presidency. The transfer is of equal importance in its effect upon the administration of justice in the district. The amalgamated High Court of Bombay will be within two or three days' reach of the district, while an appeal to Madras involves a long and difficult journey over land, or a sea voyage of a fortnight or three weeks. This last consideration is one of very great weight, and invests the question of a more extensive transfer of the coast districts to this presidency with much importance.

It has been rumoured that the local Government has attempted to overcome the reluctance of Madras to allow the transfer by requiring only that part of it through which the road leads to the coast. We should hope that Sir George Clerk has shown no such weakness. Every consideration whatever makes it desirable that the province should come intact under this Government, or at. all events such part of it as may be marked off by a clear and well defined boundary such as the Gairsippa would form. We must repeat our conviction, however, that the sooner a much more extensive transfer of the western coast to the Government of this presidency takes place the better for all interests in the country. In saying this we are not conscious of being influenced in any way by a desire of aggrandising this presidency. We are quite prepared, on good reason shown, to yield up territory to others, say the province of Sinde to the administration of the Punjab; for the time has surely come when laying aside foolish jealousies that are excuseable in children only, we should intelligently and heartily adopt any and all measures that promise the greater advantage of the country .- Times of India.

A Tale of Horror.—"Tom Cringle" relates the following tale of thrilling interest in the Times of India, 9th September:—"Arrived at Campoolee, where I heard some half-told tale of a man seized by a tiger, I tumbled into a palkee and started for Thandalla, the night intensely dark, dismal, and drizzly. I felt drowsy from the motion of the palkee (beer?), and let down the heavy canvas curtains or purdahs, when to my mind scarce a minute had elapsed before I heard a roar from a tiger that made the very hills quake. The palkee was dashed to the ground, and I could hear the terrified palkee-bearers scudding up a bank to the left. In the hurry of doing so, the torch they carried was extinguished, which left us in Cimmerian darkness. The shock from letting the palkee fall thoroughly aroused me, and I listened with bated breath the approach of the foe. I had scarcely time to arrange my thoughts before I heard the cautious approach of the beast, and his restrained, yet deep, breathing. For a minute he was still, and I eagerly flattered myself that, having missed bagging one of the bearers, and not seeing the inside passenger, he would retire and seek a supper elsewhere. Doctors tell us we can't live except by breathing fresh air into the lungs, so many inspirations in a minute—pshaw! I know better! I did not draw breath for five minutes for fear my furry foe should fall foul of me by storming my canvass castle by a stroke of his claw-armed paw. Alas! this precaution was in vain. He began to sniff at the lower edge of the curtain, which showed that he either nosed me or the remains of the fowl. However this may have been, his deep earnest sniffings said as plainly as possible, 'I know you are inside, so out you come.' I held on to the thick hem of the curtain with grim despair, not at all agreeing to the latter part of his proposition. Things now took a more serious turn, as I found to my dismay that he had sniffed along the lower edge of the curtains until he reached the angle of it just above which the curtain bulged out, thus exposing me to his gaze—that is, if tigers, like cats, can see best in the dark. This solved his difficulty; in the twinkling of an eye he thrust in his huge paw, as one may have seen a cat do when trying to claw a trembling linnet from its cage. I was smoking when this affair first commenced, and continued unconsciously to do so until a strong pull at the cigar revealed to my terrified sight the tiger's claws within three inches of my nose. The tremulous motion with the foot (peculiar to the feline tribe when angling for prey) had ceased, although the claws were protracted, and the foot distended to the size of a soup plate, when with one of the flashing, electric thoughts which come unbidden in moments of despair, I plucked the cigar from my mouth, and with the bold aim of a Spanish matador thrust the lighted end between his toes, when 'ow, whow! he drew back with a savage howl of mingled rage and pain, ran round to the other side of the palkee, where, not seeing any sign of fresh foes, to my horror he mounted his fore-feet on the roof of my frail canvass castle, where the rattle of his terrible claws sounded like a shower of five-ounce hail stones in a thunder storm. Not finding the daring Ulysses, who, as with Polyphemus, had so pained him with a burning brand, the tiger came down from his survey perch, and I was comforting myself with the idea that, burnt and foiled he had retired. I sat in my confined long box, which I expected every moment to become my coffin.

scarcely daring to breathe, and nearly choked myself in swallowing a sneeze, for I had a cold in the head, when all at once I heard a dull, thumping, drumming, noise above my head. Travellers in the Ghaut palkees are aware that there are two openings at the upper angles of the foot end like the oblique eyes painted on the bow of a Chinese junk. It is equally well known that when our doggy friends wag their tails the action is meant (and oh how sincerely!) for a friendly greeting to his fellow-friends, man. But the wagging of a tiger's tail indicates deep thought as to the best way to do it. Well, it appeared he had not gone away, but must have stood in a line with the pole, and whilst deliberating what next move to make, had wriggled his tail through one of the holes described. Thus, on looking up and seeing the tiger's caudal appendage so invitingly handy for seizing, I took courage and laid hold of it with a down dead nip on the frame of the opening. The tiger howled piteously, and plunging forward dragged the palkee twenty feet or so down the road, luckily endwise, as I began to fear that, should he plunge sidewise, he might hurl both palkee and myself into the dark, murky ravine below. After this first burst of terror, the tiger stood still, and I could hear the palkee bearers shouting from their perch of safety, 'Hold on the tail, sahib, another palkee is approaching.' The tiger saw the palkee no doubt quicker than the natives, and he also saw the, to him, terrible advance of the mussalchee's flaming torch. This decided him to be off at all risks: so, making a desperate leap to the left, he dragged the palkee over on its side with a crash, and I was on the point of letting go the tail when I felt something part, and a quick slipping of the skin of the tail off from the fleshy part. At the same moment I fell back with a shock like the crash from an opening iceberg, which I judged to be owing to the fall of the palkee down the ravine. After what I thought to be hours of writhing pain from torn muscles and dislocated bones, I gathered consciousness; a palkee bearer came to the curtain, which he lifted, and said, Admi pani peeta' (the men are drinking water). So. after all, it was only a dream."

The Staff Corps-Retirement Rules.

Fort William, Sept. 10.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 296, dated July 25, are published for general information published for general information:—

1. In your letter, dated May 18, No. 78, you raise the question whether officers of the Indian forces who join the Staff Corps and obtain promotion therein will be entitled to the benefit of the Retring Regulations of 1796 as well as those of 1836-37. In other words, whether such officers will retain their right to retire on the remains of the substantian other words, whether such officers will retain their right to retire on the pension of the substantive rank they may hold, provided they have completed twenty-two years actual service, should that be more advantageous to them than the scale* of pension fixed by the Royal Warrant of Jan. 16 last.

2. The scale of service and pension fixed in the Royal Warrant, which is the Indian scale of pensions under the Regulations of 1836, based on the princi-ple of length of service, is to be applicable to both British and Indian officers, with the proviso, as regards British officers, that not less than half the required period of service shall have been passed in the Staff Corps.

3. Officers of the Indian Army, however, who may, at the time of joining the Staff Corps, have acquired, under the Regulations of 1796, the right of retiring on the pension of their rank, will be allowed to re-tire on the pension of the rank which they then hold, whenever they may subsequently retire; but they are not to be allowed to retire on a pension according to rank under the above Regulations in respect of any rank subsequently acquired under the rules of promotion of the Staff Corps.

4. The right of retiring on the pension of the rank they hold at the date of joining the Staff Corps will preserve to local officers who have been fortunate in their promotion the benefit of the rate of pension they may have acquired by their previous service in the army.

5. For instance, an officer on joining the Staff Corps, who has attained the rank of Lieut.-Colonel after twenty-two years' service, will retain his right at any time during his subsequent service to retire on the pension of that rank. Were he confined to the Staff Corps scale of retirement, he would be re-quired to serve a period of six years in that corps before he could be entitled to retire on the pension of a Lieut.-Colonel.

6. On the other hand, it cannot be conceded that officers shall be entitled to claim the pension accordomers shall be entitled to claim the pension according to rank, in respect of rank obtained in Staff Corps. Many officers on joining the Staff Corps will obtain an immediate step of rank, and some a second step after a short period of service. An officer, for instance, of the rank of Captain, entitled to count previous service (army and staff) for promotion, might join the Staff Corps for one day, and then, if he were allowed to retire under the Rule of the would retire on the rension of a Major Or 1796, he would retire on the pension of a Major. Or, if his previous service were sufficient, he might after two years' service in the Staff Corps, gain two steps of rank and then retire with the pension of a Lieut.-Colonel. This would give him an undue advantage, which was not intended, and cannot be al-

Fort St. George, July 4.—Remarks by the Court.
—With reference to the finding on the Second Charge, the Court beg to explain that although the evidence proves to their satisfaction that 124 Rs. of the amount charged having been made away with evidence proves to their satisfaction that 124 Rs. of the amount charged having been made away with by the prisoner, the money should have been drawn from the pay office by officers commanding companies as directed in G.O.G., October 4, 1836, No.
208. The qrmr. was irregularly deputed to receive it. The Court are, therefore, of opinion that the offence is not within the provisions of the 22nd clause of the Mutiny Act.

REMARKS BY THE PROVINCIAL C. IN C. The evidence recorded in the proceedings of this trial show that these frauds have been greatly facilitated by a failure on the part of the commanding officer of the 20th N.I., to examine and compare the accounts and the amount in the regimental cash chest monthly, as required by the standing orders for the N.I. The provincial C. in C. therefore holds him responsible for any loss that may accrue to the Govt. or the regt., from his neglect to comply with the regulations of the service.

Further instructions on this and other points will be communicated to Col. Bayley.

THE "TIMES" ON INDIA PAPER.

THE City Article of the leading journal has on several occasions been devoted to the task of crying up the value of India paper as an eligible investment, but never in so strange a manner as on the 16th of the present month. There can be no doubt that if the India loans had been guaranteed by Parliament, they could have been raised at three per cent., and thus a very considerable sum would have been annually saved to the revenues of that country. The Times readily admits that such would have been the case, but asks," Who would be the gainers?" and then proceeds to answer this question by showing who would be the losers were a better security offered to stockholders. "The sole difference," we are told, " would have been that a body of English investors who are now receiving an annual return of five per cent. would obtain no more than three per cent. Our revenue," continues the City editor, " would not be benefited to the extent of a single shilling, because it is the Indian and not the English Exchequer from which the payment proceeds." It is not very clear how "our revenue" would be benefited if the payment did proceed from the English Exchequer, but the fact is undeniable that it is the Indian Exchequer which is called upon to pay a very large annual amount for the advantage of English capitalists. The present state of affairs, however, is represented as highly satisfactory, except in the eyes of those who may be of opinion that "the English people are bound to supply India with capital, not merely at moderate, but at cheap rates, such as our colonists in Canada, Australia, Natal and elsewhere would not venture to hope for." A more disingenuous way of putting the question can hardly be imagined. There is no conceivable analogy between India and the Colonies or other dependencies of Great Britain. Which of these, for instance, is required to maintain a large English army, and that not for the defence, but for the subjection of its inhabitants? The small force stationed in Australia or New Zealand, and the larger one at the Cape or in Canada, is supported by the English tax-payer on the principle that it is the duty of this country to uphold the integrity of the empire in its most distant branches. This theory, however, does not extend to India. which is expected not only to defray the entire charges of her own immense military establishment, but also largely to contribute towards the expense of Imperial expeditions against Persia and China. Assuredly it was for no Indian interests that the last Persian or any of the Chinese wars was undertaken, and yet both Indian blood and Indian capital were the English Government. In furtherance of an Imperial policy one particular province has thus been driven into debt, and its creditors are precisely those for whose service it has been reduced to this necessity. Any one, indeed, deriving his information only from the Times would suppose that the product of these loans was to be applied exclusively to local purposes, and that England is supplying India with capital to be invested in remunerative Nothing could be farther from the truth. The Indian debt is chiefly due to the ambition, the ignorance, and the blundering foreign policy of English Ministers; and the impossibility of its being liquidated out of the annual revenues of that country arises from the costly burden of an enormous army, towards the maintenance of which England does not coutribute a single rupee. Nor is this all. It is not only while civil and military officers are discharging their respective duties upon the spot that they draw their salaries from the country in which they are stationed, but after their return to Europe it is still from the same source that their pensions are derived. The aggregate of these various pensions amounts to an enormous sum, the whole of which is circulated among British tradesmen, operatives, and servants, and the real importance of which will never be fully appreciated unless it should one day happen to cease.

But, continues our City Mentor, " the absence of investments yielding a good interest with sound security is so severely felt in this country that the existence of a stock which pays 5 per cent., and which, if not backed by an Imperial contract, is so far based upon the Imperial sway of Great Britain that it may be assumed to be safe so long as we have the power of maintaining our national existence. is a most important advantage." Very likely; but on what grounds are the natives of India to be mulcted in order that British capitalists should be provided with a good investment for their plethora of wealth? It is absurd to point out that "the stock is equally open to Indian investors, so that, if they consider the rate of interest which their country is called upon to pay to be too high, they can avail themselves of the benefit thus unduly offered." The idea of Indian investors being moved by patriotism is quite as ridiculous as to suspect English investors of a similar weakness. Besides, how would the justice of the case be affected by the fact that a few opulent natives were receiving 5 per cent. for their money at the expense of their more needy fellow countrymen? The Stock, however, is unpopular in India because "the natives, under the immense development which has lately taken place in India, find much better employment for money in agricultural and other operations, and that consequently, so far from buying Government securities, they place upon our market from time to time a supply of the original rupee paper which was at one period held in India alone, but which under modern regulations can be transferred to purchasers on this side." Here, again, we have a distortion of facts. The natives stand aloof from investments in Government paper for many reasons-such as want of confidence in the stability and good faith of the Government, and the low rate of interest compared with what they can obtain from other quarters-culture or the introduction of railways. It is notorious that the natives do not subscribe to any undertakings of the kind; and as for agricultural operations, they chiefly concern the ryot, whose condition is, without doubt, gradually improving. But if one were disposed to follow out to its legitimate conclusion any sort of argument furnished by the growing prosperity of the Indian husbandmen. the result would be altogether opposed to the Times' explanations. If the ryot is in a flourishing condition, he will have less occasion to have recourse to the mahajun, and consequently the latter will have more money to invest, and so be compelled to accept even Government paper. It is true, indeed, that from time to time rupee paper is now placed upon the home market, because of the recent regulations which render it transferable to purchasers in this country, but that paper was previously held by Englishmen in India, not. by the natives.

We must make one more extract:-

"Such has been the progress of India since the Crimean war that in many parts of the country wages have actually doubled; and so far from the population being in want of employment, every arrangement that can promote their emigration to our own or to French colonies is looked upon by the planters as an evil. The American revolution promises to give a still greater impetus to the wealth of the country, and for us to grieve that, owing to this wealth, we are placed in a position to get 5 per cent. for our capital, instead of being obliged to loan it as a charity at 3 per cent., would be a singular proceeding."

For the first time we learn that the Crimean ar had anything to do with the augmented price of labour in India, for hitherto we imagined that the rise took place subsequently to, and partly in consequence of, the sepoy insurrection. But that is a matter of little moment, compared with the astounding assurance manifested in the last sentence quoted above. It is certainly not owing to the wealth, but to the necessities of India that capitalists are now in a position to get 5 per cent. for their money: nor do we suppose that motives of "charity" would ever induce a City Crossus to loan his capital at 3 per cent., or, indeed, at any other rate of interest. If Parliament would honestly and openly guarantee the Indian Loans, money might be had in abundance at 3 per cent., not " as a charity," but as a safe investment. No man in his senses can suppose that these loans are not morally guaranteed by this country; but so long as they are ostentatiously declared to depend solely upon the revenues of India no trustee will venture to invest in them, and that circumstance alone will keep down their price. In short, a more utterly selfish, disingenuous, and demoralising article has seldom appeared even in the Times.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH IN INDIA.

English tax-payer on the principle that it is the duty of this country to uphold the integrity of the empire in its most distant branches. This theory, however, does not extend to India, which is expected not only to defray the entire charges of her own immense military establishment, but also largely to contribute towards the expense of Imperial expeditions against Persia and China. Assuredly it was for no Indian interests that the last Persian or any of the Chinese wars was undertaken, and yet both Indian blood and Indian capital were freely expended in obedience to the orders of 30th April, 1860, there were 10,994 miles of ral hundred line guards and mounted patrols telegraphic wires and 136 offices open for public correspondence; and on some lines two or more wires have been placed on the same standard. Experience having shown that timber supports seld om last more than five years, a circumstance that entailed an outlay of £4,000 a month, Hamilton's iron posts were being gradually substituted-40,000 being already set up. As a rule, the lines were worked in a satisfactory manner everywhere, except within a circle of about 200 miles round Calcutta. The establishment had, therefore, been entirely remodelled, and it was anticipated that very few complaints would henceforth occur. During the official year 1859-60 direct messages were sent from Calcutta to Bombay via Benares, Agra, and Indore, a distance of 1,600 miles; and also from Kurrachee to Bangalore, which is 200 miles further. The transmission of mail messages from Bombay to Agra, 800 miles, occupied only five minutes, and from Calcutta to Coonoor, in the Neilgherries, not more than an hour on ordinary working days. Sir William himself had received an answer from Simla to a service message from Coonoor in four hours and a-half, the distance both ways being quite 4,000 miles. These results are the more extraordinary when it is remembered that at the termination of the sepoy revolt there were scarcely 2,500 miles of line, and not more than fifty offices in efficient operation. In the North-West Provinces, and from Agra to the Nerbudda, the wires had been almost entirely destroyed, and the signallers murdered or dispersed: while in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies the department, from want of proper supervision, had become totally disorganised. The signalling is accomplished by Morse instruments, and in nearly all stations the signallers now receive by ear, and the old, expensive and unsatisfactory practice of reading from the paper tape is quite exploded. The saving thus effected is estimated at £3,000 a-year. A temporary school for signallers had been established at Coonoor with great success and at comparatively trifling expense-sixty lads being efficiently trained for the service at a charge of only £20 each per annum, whereas those who were sent out from England cost the Government £160 each by the time they arrived in India. The establishment of the department consisted of a director-general, 3 divisional superintendents, 10 deputy-superintendents of circles. 5 assistant deputy-superintendents, 17 first-class inspectors, 32 second-class, and 36 third-class inspectors, 1 assistant auditor of accounts, 117 assistants in charge of offices, 22 head signallers, 369 signallers, 102 probationers, 2 subinspectors, 5 overseers, 85 artificers, 35 assistant ditto, 161 accountants, clerks, and writers, 61 mounted line guards, 37 native artificers, tindals, and lascars, 9 jemadars or native overseers, 21 maistries, 11 message examiners. 13 printers and compositors, and 6 superior workmen, besides a long array of line and cable guards, messengers, and office servants drawing less than £1 per month. The pay of the entire establishment, including the Bangalore workshop, amounted to £156,931 per annum, but Sir William anticipated a saving of £2,000 a month as soon as iron pillars had been universally substituted for timber posts, "when one-half our present establishment of unimpeachable document we learn that on the | line inspectors, artificers, and overseers, and sevemay be discharged." "A great number of accountants, clerks, and writers," he continues, " might be discharged at once with much advantage to the public service. Half of them are worse than useless. But the difficulty of getting rid of these persons is very great. They fasten upon public departments with a tenacity inspired by the enjoyment of sinecures and the prospect of pensions. To attempt to dislodge them is followed by appeals to Government and outcries about cruelty and persecution, so that the reformer and economist soon finds himself an object of popular execration—all this is very disagreeable, but the duty must still be performed." The total expenditure from 1st May, 1859, to 30th April, 1860, exceeded £170,000; but this included the construction of several new lines. The business transacted during that period was highly satisfactory, although the tariff for messages had been lately reduced 75 per cent. Instead of the 283,105 rupees received for private messages in 1858-59, the following year exhibited an increase of very nearly one-half, or 423,991 rupees. The total number of private messages, also, in India, Pegu, and Ceylon rose from 101,164 in 1858-59 to 170,566 in 1859-60; while service messages decreased from 56,670 to 31,868, owing to the very judicious enforcement of a regulation that all service messages are to be paid for on the spot. Their value, it may be stated, thus fell from 364,739 rupees to 120,169 rupees. The messages sent by natives increased in the same time from 39,724 to 71,554, a fact that promises well for the future usefulness and prosperity of the department. One effect of the reduction of charges was to secure greater accuracy through messages being given at much greater length "instead of being cramped by the omission of auxiliary verbs, conjunctions, and explanatory words." The enforcement of cash payments for service messages, however, naturally produced the opposite result, and prolixity gave place to condensation and brevity, so that the department was relieved to an extent "equivalent to placing a second set of lines and offices, and a double establishment of signallers and instruments at the disposal of the general community." Loud complaints have occasionally been uttered as to the carelessness of signallers, but, tested by figures, the errors committed really seem to have been, for the most part, of a very venial character. In the first place, the erroneous words were only one in 1,182, and as usual they were chiefly "in numbers, six for sixty, fifteen for fifty, and the like." Names of places and persons, especially of natives, "purchase" for "purchased," insure" for "insured," "ship" for "shipped," 'about" for "above," "bales" for "sales," and such like blunders being the most common. Sir William O'Shaughnessy, however, admits that even this amount of error is remediable, if only sufficient authority be given to the head of the department. All he asks for is, that the Director General be invested with the power of summary dismissal without appeal to the Supreme Government, and assuredly it is only in India that it would be necessary to demand such powers. The system of centralisation, which contributed so largely to produce the mutiny in the native army, appears to exist in full force, the Government of India still being a despotism governing by means of a bureaucracy.

In conclusion, Sir William gracefully testifies to the cordial co-operation he has received from his subordinates, especially from Major Douglas, who succeeds to him as Director General of Indian Telegraphs. "I have never," he says, "met any one in India or Europe who combines in so remarkable a degree the attainments and qualities required for the office. An accomplished electrician, chemist, and engineer, he has the assiduous and indefatigable application to business, and unswerving determination of purpose, without which the Superintendent of this department must fail in the discharge of his duties." Liberal praise is also awarded to Captain Murray in Bombay, and Mr. Blissett in Madras, and in a minor degree to Messrs. Wickham, Todhunter, Galbraith, and Bailey, Deputy Superintendents of Circles. In two or three years, we are assured, the Indian lines must yield a clear profit, when a uniform minimum charge for messages may be adapted for all India. In the meantime, science and civilisation may point triumphantly to the masts and wires that skirt every road, as the evidence of their humanising influences, while the European rulers of that great empire make use of them as the surest and most efficient instruments of power. Sir William O'Shaughnessy himself may look upon them with an honourable pride and say, si monumentum quæris, circumspice.

EXTRACTS from the REPORT for the Year 1860.

"The success of the Company, even in its earliest years, received the marked attention, and elicited the surprised comments of writers best acquainted with the history of In-comments of writers best acquainted with the history of Insurance Companies.

"Fire Premiums for 1860 EQUAL the Total Fire Premiums for the SEVEN YEARS 1845 to 1851.

"Life Premiums for 1860 EXCEED the Entire Life Premiums for the EIGHT YEARS SEACEED the Entire Life Premiums for the EIGHT YEARS ending 1852.

"Purchase of Annutities in 1860 LARGELY EXCEEDS the similar receipts for the first TEN YEARS—1845 to 1854.

"This progress, it is believed, is unsurpassed, considering that it applies to each of the three branches of the business."

FIRE BRANCH.

"The Fire Branch has cer'ainly shown no exhaustion during the year 1660 of that impetus which had previously brought it to a position of the first magnitude among the Insurance Companies of the United Kingdom. The Fire Premiums in 1859 had advanced to the sum of £282,314.7s. 3d. In 1860 the amount of Fire Premiums has arrived at a sum of £262,977. 19s. 11d., showing an increase of £34.663. 12s. 8d., exceeding the large advance of the preceding year; so that in two years the Fire Revenue of the Company has been enhanced by the enormous sum of £66,859.17s. 5d.

"The Parliamentary Report of Returns of Duty paid to Government for the year 1860 exhibits the augmentation of the business in a more prominent way, as it affords the means of comparison with other Companies. The Proprietors will be gratified to learn that the Increase of Duty paid by the Royal in the last year is more than double that of any other Company, either London or Provincial, whilst only one of those Company. Our increase actually equals 30 per cent. of the entire increase of the whole of the Metropolitan Offices formbined, whilst of the Provincial Offices it forms upwards of 30 per cent. of the total advance of the other 28 offices established out of London."

LIFE BRANCH.

ESTABLISHED ONLY OF THE LIFE PRANCH.

"The Reports of the Company for several years have had invariably to announce a constant periodical expansion of Life Business, the new Policies of each succeeding year showing an advance over the one that had immediately preceded it. A similar result is shown in the year 1850, the Premiums on New Policies, after deducting Guarantees, being £15.070. 17s.

10d., which is an increase in that item of £1,993. 17s. 5d. above the amount received for the year 1859.

"But even this advance is small when compared with the studden and remarkable momentum which has been given to this branch of the business in the present year (1861).

"It was not until the commencement of the year that the public send to have become fully acquainted with the fact that the Royal Insurance Company had published late in the last year an account of the investigation into the assets and habilities of its Life Department, under a novel form, and in as plain and intelligible a manner as the abstruseness of the subject admitted, together with the entire statements and valuations necessary for that purpose.

"It is conjectured, from the extensive notices of this Pamphet and its accompanying Diagrams which have appeared in the Periodicals of the day, that it has largely attracted the Akingdom, as well as in other parts of the world. Indeed, a most satisfactory and conclusive evidence that such is the case is afforded by the fact that the Sum Assured on New Policies in the six months to the 3rd June of the present year, is actually fifty per cent. in excess of the sum assured in the corresponding months of the year 1860, although the latter amount in itself exceeded the sum assured on New Policies in the six months to the 3rd June of the present year, is actually fifty per cent. in excess of the sum assured in the corresponding months of the year 1860, although the latter amount in itself exceeded the sum assured on New Policies put the sum assured on the present year, is actually fifty per cent. in excess of th

TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER
BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being casily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly-increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural classicity while from wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS CAROLINE KNIGHT,

LADY COMPANION TO THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE OF WALES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic disclosures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.

"Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous. or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Miss Knight's death into the hands of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so knuch engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes ght have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance ery cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intimate acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' To that gentleman is to be assigned the main part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties—a superabundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed upon the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."—Illustrated London News. June 22, 1861.

"The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.

"Our authoress writes clearly and sensibly, and will, we think, be found, on he whole, a much more amusing and agreeable companion than Madame Arblay."—Daily Review, July 1, 1861.

"The work of an acute and sensible woman of the world, a woman with a good head and a good heart. It does not, like the late Lady Charlotte Bury's memoirs,' deal with matters of scandal and of passing notoriety, nor does it bring forward into ill-natured prominence the weak points of dukes and duchesses of fifty years ago. We perceive in the entire two volumes not a single prurient or indelicate passage (a great thing to say of a work which treats of the court of the Regency), but attempts, like equity itself, to put the best possible construction upon events as they arise."—Universal News, July 6.

"Emphatically a readable book is this autobiography. Indeed, having once opened it, the reader cannot easily lay it aside until he has got through the whole. Not the least interesting part is the collection of miscellaneous anecdotes of persons and events which are clustered together as a sort of appendix at the close. It is a book fit to be read, but fit also for something better than a casual reading; worthy of a higher repute than an evanescent popularity, merely founded upon the great names it introduces, and the amusing scraps of gossip it contains."—Morning Star, July 22, 1861.

"Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum, June 8, 1861.

"The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper judgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same time, unobtrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot-note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, June 22, 1861.

"These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte; she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, June 16, 1861.

"These are highly interesting volumes. . . . There is hardly a page of the pleasant memoirs now published of this remarkable woman that will not be read with interest, but the attention of every reader will of course be most strongly directed to those passages of the work which serve to throw an additional light upon the relationship that existed between the Princess Charlotte and her unfeeling father and unhappy mother during the brief but eventful period of eighteen months-from January, 1813, to July, 1814-that Miss Knight retained her office of lady companion. No one will rise from the perusal of that part of the work without a feeling of the deepest sympathy for the persecuted—and, as it would seem, systematically tortured—Princess; and of the warmest indignation at the unmanly spitefulness, not to say absolute malignity of the father's treatment of the generous, noble-hearted child. Miss Knight, speaking in the fulness of the knowledge derived from her confidential position in the princess's household, more than confirms what has been previously asserted of the prince's cruelty; and presents us with a picture of roval littleness in the father and of royal wretchedness in the daughter, such as we hope may never again be exhibited within the walls of an English palace."-Observer, June 30, 1861.

"The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."-Critic, June 22, 1861.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE arrival of the Calcutta Mail of the 23rd September enables us to lay before our readers a mass of interesting information on military matters connected with the Amalgamation. The Catechism is also continued to the 113th question and answer.

The Viceroy, it is now stated, was to leave Calcutta for Allahabad last Saturday, returning to the Presidency on the 5th November. Some time in the middle of next month his lordship will proceed to Rangoon, to superintend the union of the eastern provinces of the Indian Empire under the direct government of Colonel Phayre. Lord Elgin is not expected in Calcutta till the beginning of February, and will not accede to office until the expiration of Lord Cauning's six years tenure of power, in the commencement of the following month.

Favourable reports of the cotton crop have been received from every district where it is grown, and an unusually large area has this year been devoted to the cultivation of that staple. In Tinnevelly foreign varieties have been successfully introduced, and in Central India the Egyptian and New Orleans seed have been found to answer admirably; on the coast Sea Island seed is generally preferred. In our next issue we shall have a good deal to say on the subject of Indian cotton, having been favoured with an early copy of the report submitted to Government by its Special Commissioner, Mr. Paterson Saunders, senior.

There is at length a fair prospect of the termination of the Indigo strike. The planters propose to give considerably enhanced prices for the plant; but on the other hand they protect their own interests by raising their rents. Nothing can be more just and reasonable than such an arrangement, though it will scarcely meet with the unqualified approbation of the ryots. It is not a little significant of the firm conviction entertained by the peasantry that the Government was opposed to the cultivation of indigo, that the planters are even now obliged to call upon Mr. Grant, "in order to do away with so mischievous and unfounded an impression, to direct the local authorities to intimate to the ryots in their respective divisions that their sowing indigo, with their own free will and choice, will meet with the approval of his Honour." The local officers have accordingly been instructed to remove such "false impressions," but at the same time they are warned to "be cautious, in removing the mischievous impression that Government is opposed to the cultivation of indigo, to avoid giving the equally mischievous impression that Government desires to use its authority to force the cultivation of indigo against the will of the ryot. With care, however, such a mistake, the Lieutenant Governor trusts, can always be avoided." Of course, we do not hold ourselves answerable for Mr. E. Lushington's very indifferent English, which Mr. Godfrey Lushington will no doubt be prepared to defend with as much disingenuous ingenuity as he displayed in defence of Mr. Seton-Karr's proceedings in connection with the Nil Darpan.

The news of the death of the Emperor of China is fully confirmed. That event appears to have taken place on the 22nd August, in his Tartar palace at Zehol. The deceased emperor is said to have been only thirty years of age-his life being shortened by habitual excesses of the worst description. There is some doubt as to the succession to the throne, but as Prince Kung is now acting as Regent it is not very likely that he will consent to lay down his power without a struggle to retain it. The city of Ngauking has fallen into the hands of the Imperialists, but not until the inhabitants had been reduced to feed upon human flesh, which was regularly sold at fourpence apound.

Affairs at Japan were still very unsettled and threatening. As Mr. Oliphant, however, has come home with the despatches, our Government will be unusually fortunate in being able to obtain the fullest information from a gentleman of such varied experience and undoubted intelligence.

AMALGAMATION.

EXPLANATION OF DOUBTFUL POINTS IN THE AMALGAMATION ORDER OF 10TH APRIL

His Excellency the Governor-General in Council directs the publication of the subjoined Questions on subjects of general interest and the Answers given by Government, in continuation of those published in Government General Order, No. 8,901, dated 10th of September, 1861:-

Question 106. [Paragraphs 19 and 20.] An unlimited service Soldier completed seventeen years' service on the 15th of March, 1861, i. e., twenty-six days after the date fixed in paragraph 20 for regulating the amount of bounty payable to men who volunteer for her Majesty's General Service, and bounty was paid to him on his re-engagement for a further period of three years from the 15th March, 1861, under the regulations then in force. The man has volunteered for general service. How is the case to be dealt with Answer 106. He may be allowed to volunteer and will receive bounty for the remaining period of his service under paragraph 20.

Q. 107. [Paragraph 30.] If an Artillery Officer elects to serve out of India, will his pay and allowances, while serving in India, undergo any alteration from the existing rates?

A. 107. His pay and allowances will not be altered.

Q. 108. [Paragraphs 30 and 45.] It is presumed that Officers of Artillery, now holding appointments either on the General Staff, with Batteries of Native Artillery, in the Ordnance Department, or as Superintendents of Ordnarce Manufacturing Establishments in India, are not required to vacate their appointments should they declare themselves willing to serve out of India, and that Officers now doing Regimental duty, and who are willing to serve out of India, will be eligible for appointment hereafter to Artillery and Ordnance Staff situations.

A. 108. Artillery Officers who volunteer will retain their appointments, and those who have no appointments will be eligible to Staff employ.

Q. 109. [Paragraph 50.] What is the meaning of the term "General Service," and might an Officer's prospects of Promotion, of Command of Station in his present Corps, and his pay and allowances, at any time be affected thereby; in fact, does an Officer by so volunteering relinquish any of the rights guaranteed him by Act of Parliament, and place his services at the disposal of the Crown without reserve?

A. 109. The term "General Service" means service in any part of the world where an Officer might be required by the Crown to serve. The Officers who are placed in the new Lipe Regiments from among those who volunteer will join on the terms of General Service, but will be allowed their claims to the Indian Pensions. Those who do not join these Corps will remain on precisely the same terms as before, the simple fact of their volunteering making no change.

Q. 110. [Paragraph 84.] A Staff Officer having been directed temporarily to rejoin his Regiment on Field Service cr for Garrison duty, when circumstances have required for a time the presence of additional Officers, will the period he may thus have been temporarily serving with his Regiment count as Staff Service for promotion in the Staff Corps?

A. 110. The period during which a Staff Officer may temporarily serve with his Regiment will not reckon as Staff Service unless he has joined his Regiment in the Field.

Q. 111. Whether the twenty months' leave counts from the date of leaving the Regiment and return to it, or from port of embarkation and return to India?

A. 111. The period will be reckoned as at present, from departure from port of embarkation to date of return within the limits of the Presidency ment can take effect without the formal consent to which an Officer belongs,

Q. 112. An Officer of her Majesty's British British Army, of the Secretary of State for India, Forces now on the Staff was interpreter (P.) to his Regiment for three years. Will this be allowed to count as "Staff Employ?" By Article 69 the appointment of Interpreter to Local European Regiments is allowed so to reckon, but no mention is made of Interpreters to her Majesty's British Regiments, although the appointment is exactly the same.

A. 112. Yes, provided he has passed the Interpreter's Examination, and has been regularly appointed.

Q. 113. Is service in India considered to be within the limits of the Charter of the late East India Company, or only of India Proper? For instance, if an Officer volunteers for service and is sent to Egypt, China, the Mauritius, &c., would such places be considered out of India and come under Paragraphs 30 and 65 of the Amalgamation Order?

A. 118. If an Officer volunteers for General Service, and is sent to Egypt, China, &c., he would go on the same terms as Officers of her Majesty's Line Regiments, or of the Royal Artillery, or Royal Engineers. Paragraphs 30 and 65 of the General Order would be applicable to the case. By service in India is meant service in the Territories formerly governed by the East India Company, which were, by Act XXI. and XXII. Vic. cap. 106, declared to be vested in her Majesty, or in Territories which may become so in virtue of any rights previously vested in or exercised by the East India Company which were declared by the said Act to be vested in her Majesty or Service with or attached to any portion of her Majesty's Indian Military Forces in any Foreign Country whatever to which those Forces may R. J. H. Birch, Maj. gen., Secy. to the Govt. of India. be sent.

FORT WILLIAM, Sept. 12th .- The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 297 of the 25th July, 1861, are published for general information:

1. The 30th Clause of your General Order, No. 332 of the 10th April, lays down generally the Rule regarding pay and promotion of Officers of the Indian Artillery Regiments "who are willing to serve out of India, and may be permitted to do so."

2. It has now become necessary to determine more specifically the conditions under which Officers of Artillery and Engineers may be permitted to avail themselves of the option of general ser-

3. It must be clearly understood, in the first place, that India has the first claim to the services of all the Officers who have entered the Indian Armies, and that no Officer can be available for employment out of India (except during Furlough) unless the Government of the Presidency to which he belongs is willing to dispense with his services; and further, that it will rest with his Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief to give, or not to give, employment to Officers volunteering for general service out of India, whose services are placed at his disposal by the Secretary of State, on the recommendation of the In dian Government.

4. Of the Officers of Artillery, it is not improbable that a proportion may be available for this service without public inconvenience. Their organisation into fourteen Brigades provides in each Presidency a surplus of Officers above the complement of the Batteries which it is at present intended to maintain for duty with Irregular Native Artillery and for other detached employment; and, irrespective of the officers who may possibly be spared without detriment to the public interests for service out of India, there would be no objec-tion to permit Artillery Officers of the late Indian Army, who may wish for service out of India, to exchange with Artillery Officers of corresponding rank serving elsewhere, provided that the services of Officers with Indian experience can be spared in that country; but of course no such arrangeand of the Government of the Presidency to which the Indian Officer wishing to exchange may belong.

5. In such cases, the Officer of Royal Artillery undertaking service in India will be on the same footing as all other Officers of the Royal Artillery serving in that country.

6. The Indian Officer exchanging for service out of India will be on the same footing as Officers of Royal Artillery serving out of India, except that he will be permitted to reckon for retiring Pension under the Indian Regulations only half the time of employment out of India. His position with respect to the Military and Orphan Funds of his Presidency will be governed by the rules of those Institutions respectively. His promotion will go on in the list of the Regiment of late Indian Artillery to which he may have belonged.

7. In accordance with the usual practice in all similar cases, the Officers so exchanging will not be entitled to passage money at the public charge.

8. Exchanges will be permitted on terms and conditions similar to those above described, between Officers of the Royal and late Indian Engineer Corps; but in accordance with the provisions of the 42nd paragraph of your General Order. The Officers of Boyal Engineers undertaking service in India must be prepared to perform the several duties required from Engineer Officers in the Public Works Department, and will be subject in all respects to the rules of that Department for the time being.

9. Officers of Artillery and Engineers of the former Indian Service wishing to avail themselves of the terms above described may submit their applications through their Commanding Officer or the Heads of their Departments respectively to the Adjutant-General of the Army in India, by whom they will be forwarded, with such remarks as His Excellency the Commander in-Chief may think proper, to the Secretary to Government in the Military Department, and it will rest with the Local Government to transmit the names of such Officers from time to time for the information of the Secretary of State for India.

10. The sanction of the Government of India having been obtained, it will rest with Officers of the late Indian Regiments to make arrangements for exchange with Officers of equal rank serving in any other part of the world, and to submit their joint applications to the Adjutant-General of the Forces at the Horse Guards for the approval of his Royal Highness the General Commandingin-Chief.

The following paragraphs of a Military Letter from the Rt. Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 320, dated 10th August, 1861, and the document referred to in paragraph 11 thereof, are published for general information :-

India-office, London, 10th August, 1861. Military .- No. 320.

To H.E. the Rt. Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council.

My Lord,--I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Military Despatch No. 61, dated 4th May, 1861, transmitting a copy of the third Report by the Commission appointed at Calcutta to arrange the details of the reorganisation of the Army.

2. I have carefully considered in Council the proposal contained in that Report for inducing a large number of the Senior Officers of her Majesty's Indian Forces to retire from the Service by the offer of enhanced Pensions, together with the Minutes thereon recorded by the Members of your Government, including that subsequently received from his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; and I have now to inform you of the conclusions which her Majesty's Government have arrived at on the perusal of these important papers.

6. In calculating the number of Officers likely to become Supernumerary under the new arrangements, the Commission have assumed that the complement of Officers with Native Regiments in all the Presidencies will be at once reof the General Commanding-in-Chief of the duced to six; but this assumption, as observed in your Despatch, is erroneous. The ultimate adoption of what has hitherto been called the irregular system in the Native Armies of the three Presidencies has, indeed, been determined upon; but the introduction of this change in the few Regiments of the Bengal Army which have retained their old organisation, and in the Armies of Madras and Bombay, was intended to be gradual. The views expressed on this subject in the 41st paragraph of your Despatch, No. 65 of the 4th May, are entirely in accordance with the intentions of her Majesty's Government.

- 7. Under these circumstances there could be no advantage in making so large a reduction of the number of Officers in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies; and even in Bengal the retention of a moderate number of Officers in excess of that exactly calculated for the present wants of the Service will be a measure of prudence and public convenience. It will afford time to test by experience the estimate of the future requirements of the Service, and will furnish for some time, after the first formation of the Staff Corps, a valuable reserve from which to draw Officers of some Indian experience to fill vacancies, which must otherwise be supplied by taking Officers from the Line Regiments to an inconvenient extent.
- 8. The Estimates of the number of Officers that will be surplus under the new organisation are very discordant: that nut forward by the Commission is, as I have before observed, greatly exaggerated, and, on the other hand, I am not prepared to admit the necessity for so large a reserve of Officers for Native Regiments as that proposed by H.E. the C. in C.
- 9. It is certain, however, that, in consequence of the reductions which have been and will be effected in the number of Native Regiments in the armies of the three Presidencies, there will be a considerable number of Officers in the ranks of Lieut.-Colonel and Major beyond those for whom suitable employment can now be found in regimental commands, and in the higher positions of the Army Staff; and that this is especially the case in the Bengal Presidency, where the old Native army was almost entirely broken up by the Mutiny, and the new Levies raised to take the place of the Regular Native Regiments were organised and are now commanded by younger men.
- 10. Under the changes which have thus taken place, a considerable proportion of the Field Officers of the Native Armies are deprived of the advantage which they enjoyed under the old system, of continuing to serve in India in command of regiments until entitled to Colonel's allowances; and concur in the opinion expressed by your Government, and by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, that it would be just and expedient to facilitate the retirement of such Officers by the offer of any terms which would not entail an undue financial loss on the State.
- 11. After much consideration I have resolved to offer to the Regimental Field Officers of the three Presidencies annuities (in addition to the Pensions to which they may be entitled under the Regulations) according to the accompanying Graduated Scale, in the preparation of which I have advisedly abstained from attempting to make any accurate calculation of the value of each Officer's position, and have thrown the whole of such Officers into groups, allotting an annuity of the same amount to every Officer in each group.
- 12. With this Scale as your guide, you are authorised to offer to the whole of the Field Officers of Cavalry and Infantry of her Majesty's Indian Forces, as they stand on the Effective Lists of Lieutenant-colonels and Majors Regimentally in their several Presidencies, the option of retiring from the Service, at a given prospective date, upon the annuities to which they may become entitled under this scheme.
- 13. In carrying this plan into effect, I desire that you will cause to be prepared and published, as soon as possible, after the 1st October next, Nominal Rolls of the Field Officers of Cavalry and Infantry as they stand on the Effective Lists of Lieutenant-colonels and Majors Regimentally, according to length of service, reckoned from date my Despatch No. 27 of January 1861 were in-according to the Official records of the Adjutants of first Commission, and confining the offer to tended to apply, not to officers unfit for employof October, grouped after the principle exhibited in the accompanying Scale, with a Notification to these Officers that they will be permitted to retire with the annuities placed opposite their respective names, provided their applications are received and laid before their respective Governments on or before the 15th December next.

14. It is to be clearly understood that the annuity granted to each officer will be that due to his position in the above Nominal Roll, and that no change whatever in that position, or in the annuity assigned to him, will be admitted as a consequence of any casualty that may occur or become known at the Adjutant-General's Office subsequent to the 1st October.

15. All retirements under this scheme will date from the 31st December next, and promotions arising out of such retirements will take effect from 1st January following, and will be carried on in the manner and to the extent to be now explained.

16. In a former Despatch [No. 27, para. 8], I stated my intention of gradually reducing the number of Colonels in receipt of Colonels' allowance, by making for the future three promotions only for every four casualties among their rank.

- 17. Considering the very liberal provision now offered to the Senior Effective Officers of the Indian Army, and the very great expense that will be entailed upon the Government of India thereby, the most obvious and equitable mode of effecting the reduction, so as at once to make compensation for the severe strain that would otherwise be imposed upon our Finances, will be to retain upon the list of Lieut.-Colonels in the several Presidencies the names (printed in italics) of such of their body as retire under the conditions now offered, and to regulate the succession to Colonel and to Colonel's allowance thereby. This arrangement, therefore, will supersede that detailed in paragraph 8 of my Despatch No. 27.
- 18. The working of the system may be illustrated thus:-Should the Senior Lieutenant-Colonel be among those who retire under the scheme, his name will remain in the usual place on the list until his death, or until a casualty occurs among the Colonels, in either of which cases his name will be removed, no promotion being made. On another casualty occurring among the Regimental Colonels, should the name then at the head of the list of Lieutenant-Colonels be that of an Officer who has not retired under the operation of the present scheme, he will succeed as usual to the rank and allowances of Colonel, and promotions will be made in succession.
- 19. I further propose that promotion in succession to the Lieutenant-Colonels, who retire under this order, shall be made in the proportion of one to two of such retirements, these promotions being made on the principle illustrated in paragraphs 59 and 60 of your General Order of the 10th April, 1861.
- 20. By this course you will observe that very great promotion will be at once given to the Captains and to the junior Officers of the army; that the establishment of Lieutenant-Colonels will be immediately reduced to a certain extent; and that of Colonel in receipt of Colonel's allowance. gradually brought down to a strength (to be hereafter defined) proportionate to the number of Commissioned Officers remaining on the General List.
- 21. The future strength of the establishment of Colonels in receipt of Colonel's allowance will depend on the result of the several measures now in progress connected with the reorganisation of the Indian Army. When those results are fully known, I shall be in a position to communicate to you my intentions upon this point.
- 22. Should the numbers of Field Officers who make application to retire upon these terms fall short of 300 (in the three Presidencies), you are authorised to offer annuities of £120 per annum to so many of the Regimental Captains of the three Armies as may suffice to make up that number, making the offer to them in succession, general of the three Presidencies on the 1st | men of or above twenty-five years' service. It will be necessary, therefore, in promulgating this scheme, to call upon all Regimental Captains of or above twenty-five years' service to declare their wishes as to retiring under the above conditions, should the opportunity be eventually afforded them.

> 23. I have considered and adopted the resolution now made known to you, under the impression that it is most desirable to put an end to the suspense under which officers have been suffering, and in order that they may know their exact position and prospects, and may be enabled to make their election without further delay.

> 24. It is my wish that the option of retiring upon these terms may be given to all Regimental Lieutenant-Colonels and Majors of Cavalry and Infantry on the Effective List of the three Presidencies, including such as may have already elected for the new Line Regiments or the Staff Corps.

> 25. Notification of this measure will be published in the London Gazette for the information of Officers in this country, who will be informed that their applications to be permitted to retire on additional Pension under the above scheme must be addressed to the Secretary to Government in the Military Department of their respective Presidencies, and it will be intimated that it is a final arrangement, and that no further proposals connected with schemes for the retirement of Indian Officers will be entertained.

> 26. I desire that you will give a similar intimation in promulgating the scheme to the Officers of the Indian Army.

27. It will be observed that, in accordance with the proposal of the Amalgamation Commission, I have not contemplated extending the option of retirement with enhanced Pension to Field Officers of Artillery and Engineers. These Regiments stand on a very different footing from the rest of the Army with regard to the recent changes. Their organization is modified, not broken up, and the modifications are, on the whole, very favourable to the Officers. Nor am I prepared to admit any claim of the nature referred to in the 55th paragraph of the Commission's Report on account of compensation for the presumed extinction of their retiring funds. These funds. though permitted, have never been officially recognised by the late Court of Directors, nor by her Majesty's Government. The Officers joining them have already received some value for their subscriptions, and in the shape of accelerated Regimental promotion, and in a more early succession to Commands and Staff-appointments. The routine of promotion being maintained without disturbance in the Indian Ordnance Corps. there is no reason why their retiring funds should now be abruntly closed, should the Officers wish to continue them; but, admitting that some loss may eventually fall on individual Officers on this account, it is not of a nature to form a proper subject for compensation. I have, &c., C. Wood.

The following paragraphs of a Military Letter from the Right Hon, the Secretary of State for India, No. 318, dated 10th August, 1861, are published for general information :-

Para. 1. It appears to me that paragraph 98 of your General Order does not accurately express the intentions of her Majesty's Government, and is liable to misapprehensions on the part of the Officers of the Army. The words "Officers of the Staff Corps, under the rank of Major-General, whom the Governments of India may see fit to employ in any capacity," used in the paragraph, would appear to contemplate Officers whom the Indian Governments, in point of fact, considered to be unfit for employment. Such Officers ought to be removed from the Staff Corps under the authority specified in the 7th paragraph of the Staff Warrant, and placed upon half-pay or pension under the provisions of the 10th paragraph of the same Warrant.

2. The directions contained in paragraph 33 of see fit to employ in any capacity," but to Officers who are perfectly fit for employment, but who, from circumstances of one kind or another, may be out of employment; for example, such as those who, in consequence of having overstayed the prescribed limit of absence, with retention of appointment, may find themselves, on their return to India, out of employment.

3. I proceed, therefore, to give you more precise directions on this subject.

4. Such Officers are, on their return to India. to be placed on the rate of pay specified for their respective ranks, in the Staff Warrant for Officers "while required to remain in India," and they will retain this rate of pay for a-year, before the expiration of which I expect you will have an opportunity of placing them in some suitable situation. This it will be your duty to do at the earliest period, so that the revenues of India may not be charged for more unemployed officers than is inevitable under the circumstances at the time.

5. If, however, no opportunity should occur within the year of placing such an Officer in a situation that you consider suited to him, you are authorised to continue such allowance until a suitable opening can be found.

6. I desire, however, that every such case shall be forthwith reported to me, and that a quarterly list of all such unemployed Officers in India, at the date of their return to India, may be punctually transmitted to me.

7. You will modify the 98th paragraph of your General Order in accordance herewith.

With reference to the foregoing Despatch, paragraph 98 of the General Order No. 332, dated 10th of April, 1861, is cancelled, and the following is substituted for it :-

98. Officers of the Staff Corps under the rank of Major-General, who may be considered unfit for employment, will be removed from the Staff Corps under the authority specified in the 7th paragraph of the Royal Warrant, and placed upon half-pay or pension under the provisions of the 10th paragraph of the same Warrant.

Officers who are perfectly fit for employment, but who, from any circumstances, as, for example, from having exceeded the prescribed limit of leave of absence, with retention of appointment, may be out of employment, will, on their return to India, be placed on the rates of pay specified in the Royal Warrant for Officers respectively "while required to remain in India," and such rates of pay they will retain for one year, within which time it will be the duty of the Government of India to find suitable employment for them if possible, but failing in this, the allowances above noted will be continued until an opening for employing them can be found.

The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 319, dated 10th August, 1861, and the Act referred to in paragraph 16 thereof, are published for general information :-

Para. 1. I have received and considered in Council your Despatches, No. 23 of 8th March, 1861, and No. 65 of 4th May, reporting the measures which you have taken for giving effect to the instructions of her Majesty's Government for the formation of Staff Corps in each of the Presidencies, and the consolidation generally of the two Branches of her Mujesty's Forces serving in India.

2. I have much pleasure in conveying to you the acknowledgments of her Majesty's Government for the great care with which this important subject has been treated by your Government, and for the anxious consideration which you have given to it, in order to make these great changes as acceptable as possible to the various classes affected by them.

13. A reference has been made to the War Office regarding the retention of honorary distinctions of the Local Artillery Regiments. It was the practice in the Royal Artillery for every Brigade, Battalion, Troop, or Battery to bear its distinctive records of service according to the present usage of the Indian Regiments. But in the year 1832 his late Majesty William IV.

of Royal Artillery and Engineers, in lieu of all other titles and distinctions which had become so ample as to render it impracticable to repeat their enumeration without inconvenience.

14. The Secretary of State for War and his Royal Highness the Commander in Chief concur in opinion that the Indian Artillery and Engineers will suffer no loss of honour if the record of their proud achievements, necessarily per formed on a less extended field than that which has been open to the Royal Corps, should merge in the comprehensive mottoes which declare the services of the Regiments they join.

These sentiments are quite in accordance with my own views, and I feel confident that they will commend themselves to the judgment and public spirit of the Officers and Men of the Indian Artillery

16. With reference to the subject (adverted to in paragraph 23) of the declaration to be made by the Soldiers volunteering for general service, an Act has lately been passed by the Legislature rendering lawful the enlistment of persons transferred from the Indian to the General Forces of her Majesty. A copy of this Act is forwarded for your information; 24 and 25 Vic. cap. 74.

21. It must be borne in mind that the object of assimilating the organization of the Indian Ordnance Corps with those of the British Service was to facilitate the ultimate consolidation of the whole into one Regiment of Royal Artillery, and one of Royal Engineers. It was not supposed that a large increase to the number of Field Officers of Artillery and Engineers was required by the exigencies of the Service; but unless the number of Officers of the several grades in each Brigade had corresponded with the organization of the British Corps, the promotion of a Royal Artillery or Engineer Officer for every vacancy in the Indian Regiments would not have given the requisite proportions in the ultimately consolidated Corps. But there is no reason for carrying the assimilation further than is necessary for this object. The effect of making promotions in place of Supernumerary Colonels-Commandant would be to burthen the Government with the expense of maintaining a large number of Officers in superior and highly-paid grades, for whom there is no suitable employment, and to cause a needless amount of supersession in the other branches of the Service.

22. In paragraph 28 of the Despatch you request some definite instructions in regard to the Officers of the Indian Artillery Regiments to whom Commissions in the Royal Artillery will be given. In my Despatch No. 29, paragraphs 7 and 11, two classes of Officers were named to receive Commissions in the Reyal Artillery, viz., the Officers who may volunteer for general service out of India, and those, even if not volunteers for general service, who may be appointed to do duty with Batteries manned by Gunners who either have originally enlisted for Royal Artillery, or have volunteered for that Regiment from the Local Service. The instructions were given, necessarily, in ignorance of the proportions of men that would volunteer for general service, and of those who would remain under their present conditions, and it was desirable to provide Officers for both; but, since there is reasons to believe that a great majority of the men have volunteered for general service, there is no longer any reason why all the Officers of the Indian Artillery should not at once receive Commissions in the Royal Artillery.

23. In the case of the Engineer Corps, which had no European soldiers attached to them, it has been already determined that all the Officers should receive Commissions in the Royal Engineers.

24. In paragraph 30 of your Despatch you advert to the position of Officers of the Indian Artillery and Engineers now on Staff employment who may not elect to join the Staff Corps. You have rightly understood the intention of the Despatch that such officers, like all others now in her Ma jesty's Indian Forces, may continue to hold Staff appointments without joining the Staff Corps, and ment "whom the Governments of India may not | et gloria ducunt should be conferred on the Corps | and Engineers in general, will, in common with those of the rest of the Army, be available for any duty to which they may be appointed.

25. In the 71st paragraph of the Despatch you propose that, in accordance with the recommendation of the Commission, and with the practice in the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers, the Officers of the Indian Brigades of Artillery and Engineers in miscellaneous Staff employ shall be "seconded." It does not seem desirable, for the present at least, to adopt that course. The assimilation of the Indian with the British Ordnance Corps is indispensable, so far as it is necessary to their ultimate consolidation; but there may be points, not required for that purpose, in which the principle of assimilation could only be carried out at a sacrifice of the public interests. I would further observe that the practice of "seconding," which obtains in the British Regiments, is connected with their internal economy rather than with their organization, and it is the less necessary in the Indian Brigades of Artillery, because it is not intended to complete the full number of Batteries in each Brigade, so that there will be an available surplus of Officers, and it would be an additional objection that, as admitted by the Commission, the introduction of the practice of seconding in the Indian Corps, by causing the promotion of a great number of Officers, would give these Corps great advantage over the other Arms of the Service.

26. I have referred to the Secretary of State for War regarding the nature of the Commissions to be granted to Officers of the new representative Line Regiments, and have been informed that he concurs with his Royal Highness the Commanderin-Chief in thinking that all Officers of Artillery and Engineers, and all Officers appointed to the several new Regiments of the Line, should receive one Commission only—namely, a Regimental Commission—signed by the Queen, bearing the same date as that which they now hold. The transfer of all those Officers should be published in the London Gazette, but such publication and Commission involves no obligation on Officers of Artillery and Engineers who have not volunteered for general service to serve out of India, nor does it affect the scheme for promotion on separate lists, adopted in the General Order of 10th April.

27. The course to be followed in regard to the Regular Native Regiments in the three Presidencies, as described in paragraph 41 of the Despatch, is strictly in accordance with the intentions of her Majesty's Government. It was intended ultimately to reduce the number of Officers serving with these Regiments to six, exclusive of a Medical Officer, and to give them eventually the organisation of what has hitherto been called the irregular system, but it was not contemplated to effect any sudden or violent change in the present position of those Regiments.

30. The 65th paragraph of the General Order, referred to in the 44th paragraph of the Despatch, introduces an important change in the conditions of future service, out of India, of the Officers who may be transferred to the new Regiments of the Line, and of the Artillery Officers who may volunteer for general service with the new Brigades of Royal Artillery. Though I cannot altogether concur with your Government as to the necessity or expediency of permitting Officers to reckon towards retiring pension, under Indian regulations, and payable from Indian revenues, the whole of their future service in any part of the world, I am prepared to ratify the promise held out in your General Order; but it will be necessary to define very carefully the nature of the duty which will confer a claim to reckon service in full or in part for the retiring pension.

31. I am disposed to think that the privilege of eckoning full time should be restricted to the following cases

1st. That of Officers transferred in the first instance to the twelve new Regiments of Cavalry and Infantry of the Line, who will be entitled to reckon all their future Regimental service in those Regiments in any part of the world.

2nd. That of Officers of Artillery who, having determined that the mottoes Ubique and Quo fas that they, as well as Officers of the Indian Artillery volunteered for general service, and being attached to Batteries of Royal Artillery, may be ordered Home with those Batteries, such Officers will continue to enjoy the privilege as long as they may be performing Regimental service with the Royal Artillery in any part of the world.

Srd. That of the Officers of Cavalry and Infantry who may be appointed under the provisions of my Despatch, No. 154, dated 8th April, to fill vacancies in Line Regiments caused by the transfer of Officers from those Regiments to the Staff Corps, such Officers will continue to enjoy the privilege only so long as they may serve regimentally with the Regiments to which they may be originally transferred, and that all Military service performed with the sanction of Government by Indian Officers out of India, otherwise than as above specified, shall be reckoned as service for Indian retiring pension only in the proportion of one year to two.

34. The question as to whether the five years' tenure is intended to apply to the Department in which an Officer may be serving, or to the actual appointment, has been referred for the opinion of the Secretary of State for War and the General Commanding-in-Chief, and I learn that, under the existing rule, Officers hold the appointments on the Staff for which they may be selected for five

The appointments noted in the margin * are considered in the same category; and if an Officer he transferred from one of these situations to another, his whole continuous service would count towards the completion of five years.

35. So with Assistant Adjutants-General and Assistant Quartermasters-General. If an Officer in either of these positions should be transferred from one Division to another on home service, his previous service in either appointment would be considered part of the whole period allotted to him. But his Royal Highness reserves to himself the power of considering an Officer on the General Staff, transferred from one Division at home to another abroad, either to have a fresh appointment from the date of transfer, or to count the home service as part of his term, as his Royal Highness may be pleased to determine in each case.

If an Officer on the Staff be promoted to a higher appointment, his reckoning of time begins

36. You will observe that, under the system pursued in her Majesty's Service the limitation of five years' tenure applies to the office or rank in the Department, and not to employment in the Department generally. It seems desirable to adopt the same principle in the application of the rule to appointments on the General Staff of the Army specified in paragraph 15 of my Despatch No. 27, of January last.

The general rule only can be given, to which there may be exceptions under circumstances, to be duly considered by your Government in each case, and referred to me according to existing practice.

39. In the same (55th) paragraph of your Despatch, you express an opinion that the boon of twenty months' leave on Sick Certificate, with retention of appointment, granted to Officers of the Staff Corps, may be extended to all Officers of the other branches of the Service. I have much pleasure in acceding to this recommendation, and I authorise you to give it effect immediately in the three Presidencies. I have no objection to extending this boon to Officers now on Furlough in all cases in which you may think it desirable to recommend it.

40. In the 96th paragraph of your General Order (paragraph 56 of Despatch) you have properly ruled that the names of Officers on the Half-pay List of the Staff Corps, returning to effective service in India, will not be restored to their old cadres; but it must be understood that Officers of the Staff Corps will not be placed on the Half-pay List, except under the operation of one or other of the two Clauses 7 and 10 of the Royal Warrant, and that such Officers will very rarely be permitted to return to effective service in India.

Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General; Deputy Assistant Quartermoster-General; Brigade Major.

43. In regard to the question raised in the the whole body of Officers, would be so great as 69th paragraph of the Despatch, though I am disposed to concur in the opinion expressed by your Government that it would not be advisable, at the present time, to urge the Officers of Artillery to elect at once between local and general service, yet it is desirable that all Officers of the Local Artillery, who may desire it, should have their names recorded for general service, and it would be advantageous to arrange, as far as the convenience of the public service will admit, that such Officer should, in preference, be posted to the new Batteries of Royal Artilley, which will be formed out of the men who have volunteered for general service, and from the recruits enlisted for Royal Artillery.

44. With reference to the question raised in paragraph 67, whether Officers of the Line entering the Staff Corps are to receive the value of their Commissions, I have communicated with the Secretary of State for War, and I am informed that his Royal Highness the General Gommanding-in Chief is of opinion that Officers of the Line are not to receive the value of their Commissions on entering the Staff Corps. They transfer their services by their own choice, and must consider for themselves the gain or loss of the proceeding.

49. The point referred to in paragraph 60 of your Despatch is one of the greatest importance to the Officers whose interests may be affected by it; and I desire, therefore, to draw your particular attention to the subject, and to make known to you the construction which I have put upon paragraph 103 of the General Order of the 10th April 1861, in replying to inquiries from Officers in England.

50. The paragraph states that "all promotions in the Staff Corps, in the case of Officers who may join the Staff Corps within six months of the publication of the Royal Warrant, will take effect from the 18th of February, 1861, the date of the receipt of the Warrant in India;" and in your despatch under acknowledgment, paragraph 60, you observed the announcement contained in the 103rd paragraph of the General Order referred to a point of detail adjusted in conformity with the customs and usages of the service; and you added that, as Officers are to be allowed six months within which to make up their minds on the subject of most important changes now instituted for the first time, it is but just to all Officers that their Regimental position in the first establish-ment of the Staff Corps, and not subsequent accidental alterations of rank, should settle their place on entering that Corps.

51. I understand by this that all Officers joining the Staff Corps, within the six months referred to, will be considered as having joined on the 18th February, 1861, in the rank which they held in their Regiments on that date, whether such rank be known at the time or be due to previous casualties and subsequent re-adjustment. The rank here referred to is irrespective of that to which they may claim promotion under Clauses 1, 2, and 3 of the Staff Corps Warrant.

52. Thus, should an Officer, being a Lieutenant, elect to join the Staff Corps during the six months, he will be considered as having been Lieutenant at the time of joining, although he should not have expressed his inten-tion till the month of June, and might have been in the month of March promoted to Cap-tain in his own Regiment. On the other hand, an Officer, joining the Staff Corps, being a Lieutenant, who should find himself by casualty not then known, virtually a Captain, from a date prior to the 18th February, 1861, will be considered as having been a Captain at the time of joining, and his subsequent promotion in the Staff Corps will be regulated accordingly.

53. It is quite clear, with respect to Officers who may be posted to the new Line Regiments, that no change can be made in their position subsequently to the formation of those Regiments, such position being determined with reference to the rank they actually held in their Regiments on a given day, viz., the 18th February, 1861.

54. The difficulties attending such re-adjustment of rank in their case, affecting, as it would, to be fairly pronounced insuperable. serious difficulties, however, would attend the same system of re-adjustment in the case of Officers of the Staff Corps.

You will be guided by this principle, not only on the first formation of the Corps, but in all subsequent appointments to it.

Military Department, Fort William, Sept. 17, 1861.—No. 821 of 1861.—The following paragraphs of a military Letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 315 of the 9th August, 1861, are published for general information :

PAR. 1.-In the case of Officers now joining the Staff Corps leave of absence will reckon as part of the period* of general service required for promotion; but, except in the case of Lieutenant-Colonels, no leave of absence, either on Sick Certificate or Private Affairs, beyond the privilege leave of one month in six, will be allowed to reckon towards the Staff + Service required by the Royal Warrant as a qualification for promotion in the Staff Corps.

2. The same rule will apply to Officers here after entering the Corps. They will be permitted to reckon their general service from the date of their first Commissions, and no deduction is to be made for this service in consequence of any leave of absence. The full period of Staff Service required by the Royal Warrant as a qualification for promotion is, however, to be rigidly exacted in all cases.

3. A period of five years' service in the Staff Corps ; is required to entitle a Lieutenant-Colonel to the rank of Brevet-Colonel. As respects Officers of this rank, the present rule, as to leave of absence to be allowed to reckon as part of the service for promotion, will remain in force.

Military Department, Fort William, Sept. 19 .-No. 834.—The following paragraphs of a Military Letter from the Rt. Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 323 of the 10th August, 1861, are published for general information :

1. Immediately on the receipt of your letter No. 76, dated the 18th May, 1861, I took measures, in compliance with your request, for ascertaining the wishes of Officers on leave of absence in this country who are now holding Staff appointments, or who had held them since the 18th February, 1858.

2. For this purpose you transmitted five forms applicable to Officers under different circumstances, but there existed in this Office no means of knowing to which category of the five the several Officers belonged. The Circular [not received] herewith enclosed was therefore prepared and forwarded to all the Officers in request that they would state whether they wished to join the Staff Corps or not. Questions to be answered by the Officers comprising all the particulars required in the forms transmitted in your letter were annexed to each Circular.

3. I now enclose the replies [not received] to the Circular which have been received up to the present time.

4. I also transmit a copy of the replies—
[These have not been received by Government] sent to such of the Officers as have made inquiries on the subject of the questions put to

5. You will observe from these replies that it has been stated in answer to inquiries made.

6. That Officers now on the List of Regimental Lieutenant-Colonels, preferring to retain their positions as Local Officers, will, as now, succeed to the "Colonels' allowance by seniority," but that no information can, at present, be given as to the number of Colonels' allowances to be authorised for the future.

7. That the measures to be taken with respect to unemployed Field Officers, as referred to in paragraph 63 of the General Order, are under consideration.

8. That no decision has yet been passed as to the position of the Officers of the Bombay Cavalry Regiments, in consequence of those Regiments having been converted into Silladars.

9. That the selection, in future, of Officers for the Bombay Silladar Cavalry will rest with the Government of Bombay.

10. That the option of joining the Staff Corps will be open to those Officers only who may be considered by the Government under which they are serving to be in all respects fit for the Staff Corps

11. That Officers electing local service will be employed by the Government in India in such manner as may appear to them to be most advantageous for the Public Service.

12. That if offer of service in the Staff Corps be accepted the time passed in permanent Staff employ will reckon; but that information as to an Officer's term of past service must be sought from the Governments in India, who alone are in possession of full information as to the service of each Officer.

13. That Officers will be considered to have belonged to the Staff Corps from the 18th of February, 1861, in accordance with the 103rd paragraph of General Order of 10th April, 1861.

14. That time passed in the performance of Military duty in England since February, 1861, will reckon as service for pension, but not for promotion in the Staff Corps.

15. That Officers joining the Staff Corps will not be called upon to give up any portion of their unexpired Furlough unless their services should be specially required by the Governments in India.

16. That an Officer electing general service in a new Line Regiment will be required to join his Regiment at the expiration of his Furlough.

17. That if an Officer of the present European Regiment volunteers for general service in the new Line Regiments his present position in his Regiment will, as far as possible, be secured to

18. That Officers of the Bengal Cavalry, other than those of the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Regiments, whose offers of service with the new Dragoon Regiments may be accepted, will be placed in those regiments according to the dates of their respective Regimental Commissions, if this can be done consistently with the promise held out to the Officers of the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Regiments of Bengal Cavalry joining the new Corps, as announced in paragraph 53 of the General Order of the 10th April last.

19. That the subject of exchange between Regimental Officers is now under consideration.

20. That Officers who have volunteered for general service will have the option of joining the Staff Corps hereafter under the conditions specified in paragraph 80 of the General Order.

21. That no vacancies will be caused in the new Line Regiments by the transfer of Officers from the present European Regiments to the Staff Corps.

22. That Officers who may not join the Staff Corps or Regiments of the Line will be available for any duty to which they may be appointed by the Government, or Commander-in-Chief of the Presidency to which they may belong. promotion will continue, as heretofore, to depend on their position in their former Cadres.

23. That Officers of the Staff Corps, retiring from the Service on full pay, will be eligible to receive the step of honorary rank.

24. That the nature of employment to be given to Officers appointed to the Staff Corps will rest with the Governments in India.

25. It is necessary that your decisions similar cases should be in accordance with the principles here laid down.—I have, &c.,

THE SECOND MYSORE JOB.

When the first Mysore Job was perpetrated we resolved to watch narrowly the mode in which the extravagant provisions of Sir Charles Wood's despatch were carried out. No one who knew the pertinacity of an Asiatic pauper, or had observed the subtle greed of Gholam Mahommed, could come to the conclusion that he would rest satisfied even with the fifty-two lacs of rupees which | Famine and pestilence have been followed by had been bestowed on the descendants of Tippoo Sahib. The true Oriental, accepting all favours as a sign of weakness on the part of the giver, waxes bolder in his demands as each is met, his appetite growing by what it feeds on. So has it proved in the present case.

Early in 1857 a most liberal arrangement was made with the Mysore family by Lord Canning, which was fully sanctioned by the Court of Directors. Among other favours conferred, the pensions of the grandsons of Tippoo were raised to Rs. 600 a month each, and those of the greatgrandsons to Rs. 220 a month each. With this Gholam was dissatisfied, and, graciously abstaining from embarrassing Government during the mutinies by the fear of a second Delhi at Russapuglah, he appealed to the Home authorities for better terms in 1859. His appeal was heard, and in spite of the declaration of the Court of Directors that Lord Canning's liberal arrangements of 1857 finally closed the case, Sir Charles Wood bestowed on the family upwards of fifty-two lacs of rupees. This was the first job. rangement of 1860 professedly superseded that of 1857, a fact for which Sir C. Wood found it necessary to apologise. The Mysore family could not have the benefit of both. But having gained that of 1860 they have now turned round and claimed that slso of 1857 which formerly they spurned. Lord Canning told them this was impossible, but they have again appealed to Sir Charles Wood and they have been successful. The loss to the revenue may be trifling, but a great principle has been again sacrificed, and the Governor General of India has been again insulted in the face of all its princes and chiefs. Not to weary our readers with endless genealogies, we shall, by a concrete case, illustrate the nature of the second job. Abdul is a living grandson of Tippoo and has three children. By the scheme of 1857 Abdul would have got Rs. 600 a month, and each of his children 200, or 1200 for the whole family. On Abdul's death his pension would have lapsed, and the family, now reduced to three great-grandsons, would have had only Rs. 600. As each died his pension would have lapsed, and thus the whole would have been extinguished. By this scheme, at once most liberal and wise, provision was made with certainty for a time when the family should cease to be a colony of paupers. By the 1857 scheme there was an expenditure of 1,200 during Abdul's lifetime and of 600 during that of his sons, but it then ceased for ever. By the 1860 scheme there was an expenditure of only Rs. 1,000 during Abdul's life, and of Rs. 500 for his family for ever afterwards. Surely this last, involving a permanent burden on the revenues of Rs. 500 a month, was extravagant enough, but Sir C. Wood persuaded the House of Commons it was more economical than Lord Canning's plan which, besides, would really have severed all connection between the family and the Government, instead of rivetting it for ever and continuing the oflice of "Superintendent of the Mysore Princes," as Sir C. Wood has done. But this is not enough; it has now been decided, in opposition to the protest of the Government of India, that not only is Abdul to draw his Rs. 1,000 for life and Rs. 500 for ever, but his three sons are to draw their Rs. 200 each for life, or Rs. 1,600 a month for the whole, and Rs. 1,100 after Abdul's death.

As the natives talk of this among themselves, we hardly wonder that they are confirmed in the dark suspicions as to the motive for such undeserved liberality. The hitherto impossible feat of eating one's cake, and yet having it, has been accomplished, with Sir Charles Wood's assistance, by the prince of oriental jugglers .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE FLOODS AND THE CHUNAR INVALIDS -The rear 1861 promises to be, in India, one of those landmarks of time which occur once in a generation, and are remarkable for a succession of physical phenomena as stupendous in their extent as they are disastrous in their consequences. Rs. 10,000 each.

extensive inundations. Every river has been flooded and has done more or less damage to the peasantry and crops on its banks, and to the engineering and railway works which have been constructed in its vicinity. The Godavery, the Nerbudda, the Chumbul, the Taptee, the Jumna, and worst and last of all, the Ganges, have risen five, ten, and in some cases fifteen feet above their ordinary maximum level. The country from Benares to Agra has been under water. in some parts of the Grand Trunk Road the dak carriages have been dragged by coolies in three feet of water, and the Jumna at Agra and the Ganges at Benares have been almost impassable. In no place has this inundation been felt so severely as in Chunar, the well-known depot for invalided and pensioned veterans, on the south bank of the Ganges, between Benares and Mirzapore. The fort is built on a rock, high above the reach of the worst flood, but the invalids live in the town at its base, in cottages which looked so comfortable and pretty that Bishop Heber declared they reminded him of an English village. All that is now at an end. The green lanes in which English children played the livelong day, and where so many wives were trained for our English soldiers, have been desolated by the muddy waters of the Ganges, which have risen two feet above the stone placed there by a railway official to mark the highest level of the flood of the 28th August, 1857, the like of which had not been known since 1838. The parade-ground is six feet under water in the shallowest parts, and the compounds of the English houses, the English-like graveyard, the Roman Catholic Chapel, and the greater part of the native town, from two to six feet. The Ganges began to overflow on the 5th of September, and up to the date of our latest letters was steadily rising. The river Jugoh has united with it, an occurrence which even the oldest of many very old inhabitants does not remember, and one great lake has been formed. converting Chunar for the time into a sort of city of the plain at the bottom of a Dead Sea. Not only have whole streets of native huts perished, but upwards of thirty houses, occupied by European pensioners and widows, have been washed down, while those left standing have been rendered almost uninhabitable. Many of those thus turned adrift are poor widows of invalids or pensioners who have little beyond their miserable pittance of Rs. 2 or 3 a month. Others are pensioners, English or East Indian, many with large families, who receive from the State sums varying from Rs. 14 to 30 per month.—Friend of India.

A SERIOUS FORGERY CASE is under investigation in Calcutta. A young man called D'Cruz, of a respectable family, a few days ago presented an order at the Oriental Bank for a sum of Rs. 11,750, purporting to be drawn at Darjeeling by Mr. George Turnbull and made payable to Mr. Wilton Hinde. The letter contained a postscript; "You will observe my signature slightly different, owing to my having met with a slight accident. I state this so that there may be no delay in the payment of the above, as it is urgent." The bank assistant had doubts as to the order being genuine. D'Cruz said he was in no hurry for the money and they might communicate with Mr. Turnbull before paying it. He had a silk handkerchief round his head which partly covered his face, and wore dark spectacles which concealed his eyes. He afterwards made several applications in writing for the money, asking to have it posted in bank notes to Howrah, to be called for at the post-office. The first halves appear to have been sent to him in that way. His durwan called for the letter and was accompanied by a native police officer in the disguise of a dak peon, who gave him the register receipt to sign. D'Cruz was found in the compound of his house. The durwan and jemadar were followed by a police sergeant, and the capture was made. Previous to this Mr. Turnbull had been communicated with and the order was proved to be a forgery. There are two brothers implicated in the case. They are out on bail, themselves in Rs. 20,000 each, and two sureties in SUTTEH.—Another case of suttee has occurred | boats through the villages, with cooked provisions in Oude at a spot only four miles from the police station of Poorwa. As usual the police did not reach the scene till all was over. The frequency of murder, suttee, and dacoity in one or two districts of Oude, and our total failure to discover or check the perpetrators, are beginning to be disgraceful to our administration.

THE SONTHALS. - The Rev. E. L. Puxley, formerly Captain in H. M.'s 14th Light Dragoons is settled as missionary among the Sonthals at his own charges. The Report thus speaks of them: "I was glad to find the Sonthal characteristics of truthfulness and good faith, so highly appreciated by the Railway officials. So long as the Sonthal is treated justly and kindly he will give a fair day's work for a fair day's pay, which the Bengalee will not do. The schools in connection with the Mission are now eighteen in number; sixteen boys' and two girls' schools. The total number under instruction is 540. The most encouraging point in this beginning of female education among the Sonthals is, that the movement was entirely of their own originating. The Sonthal woman is, even in her present condition, far superior to the Hindoo or Mahomedan The Church Mission have shown much female." wisdom in deciding that all Missionaries shall be required to pass an examination in one of the vernaculars at the end of one year's residence in the country, and again at the close of the second

NEPAUL, Sept. 2 .- Maharajah Jung Bahadoor. accompanied by his brothers and several civil and military officers, the other day paid his biannual visit to our resident, and was received with the usual compliments. Some Cashmere merchants just returned from Lassa stated that orders have been received there from China, desiring that European travellers are not now to be allowed to travel through any part of the Chinese dominions. Our resident, in order to ascer tain the truth or otherwise of the Nana's reported death, will send persons to endeavour to trace the witnesses and proofs of his death. The weather continues exceedingly delightful.—Sept. 4. The Godavery jatra is now over, the sirdars and the chiefs have returned to their homes. The infamous Nana's father-in-law the other day sent two letters to our resident for delivery to the Ranees of Nana at Nepaul, which Colonel Ramsay, of course, declined to forward. In one of these letters it was stated that he (Nana's fatherin-law) deplores much on hearing the death of his son-in law. This is another evidence of the Nana's death. The Central Committee of the Great Exhibition have asked Sir Jung Bahadoor for some specimens of Nepaul paper. weather is pleasantly cool.—Englishman. The

THE EX KING OF DELUI, Balladur Shah, is dying in his comfortable wooden house at Rangoon. He is not expected to survive this cold season. He has received every comfort which ten rupees a-month could purchase, and has been allowed, in common with his family, to wander at will on his parole within the limits of cantonments, a privilege he has seldom been able to avail himself of. His son, Junima Bukht, and the two brothers, are fast becoming accomplished English scholars. His wife is still hale and well.

THE INDIA GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION COM-PANY has declared a dividend at the rate of Rs. 60 per share (Rs. 1,000) on the operations of the past half year.

RAMPORE BEULEAH, Sept. 10. - This once pretty little station has this season nearly disappeared into the mighty Ganges. The treacherous river has cut away all our avenues, the bunds have gone, and a portion of the native town and villages to the east of our far famed "Old Woman's" tree, which has also gracefully fallen into the turbulent stream. The native town is completely flooded, as well as all the villages in the suburbs, the inhabitants have fled into the interior, many houses, both pucks and kutchs, are daily falling in, and the loss to the mahajuns must be enormous. Scarcely a spot being left dry, the poor have no means to cook food, and are starving; for the reorganisation of the European staff of many would perish but for the charity of some the police. Nawab Moojalud-oo Dowla proceeds

This is a noble example, to feed the distressed. and might well be followed by the European residents. A new bund alone saves the residences of the Europeans; the authorities take good care to protect themselves and public officers, but the natives are left to shift for themselves, they are not worth a bund, so are left to be flooded, ruined, and to perish .- Englishman.

"STILL FROM CHANGE TO CHANGE WE RUN." Among the many important changes now under consideration of the Government is one for the abolition of the Revenue Board as at present constituted, and the substitution of what may he called an Imperial Board, composed of mem bers from each of the presidencies, who shall consider and finally decide upon all questions of land revenue only-the local Revenue Commissioners communicating directly with them on all questions of land revenue, and from their settlement of which there shall be no appeal. Another plan under consideration, with the same object, is the appointment of a Chief Revenue Commissioner in each presidency, with two secretaries, acting in all matters of land revenue independently for their several provinces. Either way the abolition of the Revenue Board, as now existing, is determined upon. It is also, we hear, intended to abolish the separate commissionerships of Burdwan and Chittagong, incorporating the districts now under the charge of those commissioners with the several adjoining divisions.

PORT BLAIR.-Letters from Port Blair state that there is now much less sickness among the convicts than in any former season. Three convicts lately escaped, but after a time voluntarily surrended themselves to the authorities, quite satisfied with their experiment and not likely to repeat it. Eighty-seven convicts in all have married, and already some half dozen of children have been added to the society of the settlement. No attacks have lately been made by the aborigines.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES .- It has been ruled by Government to allow all officers, covenanted or uncovenanted (other than ministerial officers), to draw travelling allowances at the rate of eight annas a mile. Coroners will be entitled to the same allowance as others, but it will not be given in any case when an officer does not proceed to a greater distance than five miles from his ordinary residence.

GWALIOR .- On the 5th August a grand durbar was held for the reception and acknowledgment of her Majesty's grant, conferring the order of the Star of India on the Maharajah Scindhia; and on the 23rd at Indore a similar durbar was held for the reception of that honour by the Maharaiah Holkar.

DOOMKU .- From Doomku, the new head quarters of the Sonthal district, we learn that all is perfectly quiet. Nine of their head men or majees have applied for the establishment of a vernacular school for the education of their children. The superintendent, it is said, desires to comply with their request, and also to establish schools to give them the advantage of rudimentary English teaching. The people are now beginning to take to cutcha houses and rent-paying, instead of squatting in their wretched temporary huts.

CUTTACK.—The Englishman reports a distressing circumstance which has occurred up at Khoordah, in the Pooree district. Mr. Wavell, the Assistant Magistrate, recently appointed to succeed the former Deputy Collector who was dismissed for too freely exercising his "political rights" in falsifying public records, was attacked 12th September, and severely wounded. injuries, evidently inflicted with a sword, are very severe, especially about the head; and Mr. Wavell was at once brought into Cuttack for medical advice, and is doing well. The perpetrator of this cowardly crime, and his motives for committing it, are as yet unknown.

Lucknow.—A deputy inspector-general of po lice, on Rs. 1,200 per mensem, is to be appointed of the bankers and mahajuns, who daily send to Bagdad, to pass the rest of his life there. The Viceroy has sanctioned the introduction of a uniform standard of weights and measures in the province of Oude. His Excellency has desired the chief commissioner to watch carefully the progress of the experiment, and report upon its result at the close of the current year. The cholera is still making a great havoc among the rural population.

NATIVE ENTERPRISE .- The Engineer's Journal states that a company has been formed at Agra for constructing a tramway from Agra to Bhurt-pore, a distance of thirty-five miles. The cost is estimated at £2,000 per mile, and the capital of £70,000 has been subscribed by natives. The line will run, we presume, by the old road which Akbar constructed between Agra and his Windsor at Futtehpore Sikri.

E. I. RAILWAY.—The profits of the Bengal division of the E. I. Railway for the first six months of this year were £104,184, equal to 41 per cent. on the capital, estimating the cost of construction at £17,000 per mile. So far the extension of the line to Rajmuhal has reduced the profit, which on the Raneegunge line alone was once as high as seven per cent. We can form no definite idea of the profits of Indian railways till they are completed throughout with a system of feeders.

MARWAR.-We hear from Marwar that the refractory Thakoors of that place are again troublesome. They have assembled a large force for the purpose of plundering the neighbouring villages. The Jespore authorities have sent a body of picked Rajpoots to prevent their crossing their borders.

Exports (Calcutta, Sept. 23).—There has been a steady and gradually augmenting demand for our weightier steples. This continues to be helped by the lower, and now very low, freights ruling. We regret to report, however, that under the advanced and in most cases still advancing prices asked by dealers, supplies do not increase; and in no case are stocks more than adequate to requirements, whilst in some important items they are below wants. From what we learn from the interior the prospects of the crops are anything but encouraging. The Linseed crop of last season, both Patna and in the eastern districts, is now ascertained to be below the average. Rice, Linseed, Sallpatre, Hides, and Jute have been most freely taken, and in nearly all cases at higher prices. Raw Silk, Saflower, and light goods generally have been but partially inquired for.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Sept. 23).—Cotton Manufactures.—The sale lists are considerable, but there is a want of stability both in demand and price, indicating an absence of that active business which usually marks the approach of the Doorgah festivities. Prices during the fortnight have been in some instances barely maintained, and importers, to effect large sales of Grey Goods, have accepted lower rates. Bleached Cottons are in very limited demand. The Metal market has improved, except in the case of Iron. Salt has again fallen back fully 2 o 4 Rupecs. Coals are quite neglected.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HYDERABAD.—Cholera has broken out with much severity at several places on or near the high road from Hyderabad to Masulipatam. The line now adopted by the Government of Bombay -namely, the Upper Godavery-will be opened for traffic in three years, for the furtherance of which the native Government have been requested by our Resident to repair and improve the roads leading to the river. Mr. H. Stanbrough, of Nag-pore, I understand, will manufacture ice at Hyleading to the river. Mr. H. Stanbrough, of Nagpore, I understand, will manufacture ice at Hyderabad from 1st of January, 1862, and has asked the aid of Government in the undertaking. In Sept. 19. II.M's str. Beagle, Hay, Trincomallee.—21. Arethusz, Clark, Mauritius.—22. Douglass, De Bath aid of Government in the undertaking. In Toynbee London P. and O'str Colombo, Dunn, Calcutta.

the beginning of August the Viceroy intimated to the Nizam that her Majesty had been pleased to nominate his Highness to be a Knight of the most exalted Star of India. For this honour the Nizam expressed his gratitude, but made some serious demur, the cause of which I have not been correctly informed as yet. - Sept. 3. - I said in my last letter to you that I could not ascribe reason for the Nizam's objection to the Star of India on account of the robes and collar. It is now made intelligible he objects to the robes and the collar, in common with the effigy, from re ligious scruples. The former is made of silk, which as apparel is prohibited to the Mussulman, and the latter bears a cross as a pendant. But a question from the Nizam put forward in objection is as amusing as it is pertinent and logical. The rule of the order threatens with expulsion for rebellion. And the Nizam asks-How is it possible he could be a rebel? He expressed himself highly flattered with the honour proffered to him, and fired a salute of twenty-one guns on the occasion of its presentation to him by Colonel Davidson on the 31stAugust. Royal salutes following his Highness's were fired from the cantonments of Secunderabad and Bola. rum. A private letter from Hyderabad of later date mentions that the Nizam, who at first declined to accept her Majesty's precious gift, has at last expressed his desire to receive the same, but is still unwilling to wear it. The Arabs who some time back fired at a guard, have been apprehended and punished by the Native Government.-English-

GRANT-IN-AID SYSTEM .- In his report for 1859-60, Mr. Arbuthnot, the Madras Director of Public Instruction, shows how unfounded is the fear expressed by many Europeans, especially by Lord Stanley and Sir George Clerk, that the grant-in-aid system is looked upon by the natives as intended to serve missionary purposes. Sir Alexander Grant mentions that, in Vizagapatam the natives expressed a wish that Mr. Hay, of the London Mission, should take a grant so as to be under Government Inspection. The benefit of the grant-in-aid system and its applicability to India is proved in the case of Tinnevelly, which has 163 schools, of which 130 are vernacular, with an attendance of 5,566 pupils under Government inspection. A sum of Rs. 30,771 is spent on these schools by the Church of England Missionaries, and Government contributes only Rs. 5,131, a trifle to pay to make the schools more efficient.

THE INDIAN LIBERATOR .- The Madras Times notices an instance in which a singular document, which had been circulating among the natives in the South of India, was discovered by a missionary and brought to the knowledge of Government. He was preaching in a village, where one of his audience asked him what he and his fraternity would turn to when Usuntha Rayer made his appearance. The missionary saw that there was some deep allusion in this remark, and cleverly wormed out of the people the information he wanted. He found that Usuntha Rayer was a person whom the natives expect shortly to appear among them at the head of a victorious army, to extirpate the British and establish a new raj. After diligent search he obtained a copy of a document in Tamil, in which all this was described. Each head of a village to whom a copy came was enjoined to make ten copies of it and to circulate them The paper professed to have originated in Benares, and to have travelled thence to South India. The story was supported by the miracle that the Governor-general had caught Rayer, put him up to his chin in gunpowder, and fired two cannon into it for the purpose of destroying him, but the hero escaped unhurt, and the Governorgeneral fled from the spot. The Government of Madras thanked the missionary for the information, but said they did not think it advisable to take public notice of the matter.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, Sept. 12.—The London mail of July 10th arrived here on the 21st ult., but we have news through Calcutta, brought on by the steamer Thunder, up to July 18th.

The most important news by the present mail is contained in the intelligence which reached us from Pekin a few days ago, to the effect that the Emperor of China died at his palace on the Yehol at 9 N.M. on the 22nd August. The Chinese population here have not yet heard of the event through their own sources, but as letters confirming the news have been received from Mr. Bruce at Pekin, the matter is in no respect doubtful. It is customary in China to let the succession to the throne be determined, within certain limitations, by the will of the late Emperor. The will of the deceased Hien Fung not having yet been made public, the name of his successor is still unknown, although it is probable that he has made choice among his three nearest relations, viz., his infant son, the brother who was with him in his last illness, and his brother, Prince Kung, now in Pekin. In the event of his infant son being nominated, there will be a regency, and the foreign policy of the nation will most probably continue pacific; in the event of Prince Kung's accession to the supreme rule, the same result may be expected; but as regards the brother who accompanied his late Majesty to the Yehol, it is not so certain that his inclinations are likely to be peaceful. As a political event, the death of Hien Fung cannot be greatly regretted by any party. The documents which came to light during our campaign in the North, showed that he kept himself in a state of complete isolation from business, and could only be approached by his advisers in the most delicate manner, even when the affairs of the Empire had come to a serious crisis. It is quite reasonable to suppose that under a new ruler the Government of China may voluntarily adopt a more liberal policy, and accept foreign intercourse as an accomplished fact which it is useless as well as impolitic to disturb, or in any way endeavour to unsettle. The late Emperor Hien Fung was the fourth son of his father, and succeeded to the throne in accordance with the paternal choice. He had reigned ten years and eight months; not having attained his twentieth year when he ascended the throne, he was little more than thirty at the time of his death. Preparations are being made, after the usual manner, for a national mourning, and the Chinese love of spectacle alone will ensure this being duly observed.

In Japan matters have come to a crisis by general acknowledgment. The foreign ministers are at their wits' end for a policy to pursue—always excepting Mr. Harris, who maintains his inertness, and seldom crosses the threshold of his residence, upon which, it is reported, a drunken attack was recently made by some of the many brawlers who infest that quarter of Yedo. The last attack upon the British Embassy, which we reported a month ago, has at length fairly opened the eyes of Mr. Alcock to the fact that flights to Yokahama, and every other kindred device, called in diplomatic language "a firm attitude," completely thrown away upon a people like the Japanese. This last crisis is to receive its solution in London and Paris-at least it has been referred to Europe for solution, and will, therefore, be another card in the masterly hands of the French Emperor. In the meantime the only possible step that can be taken out here, is to turn the residence of the British Legation into a stronghold, which is being done with the cordial approval of the governor of Yedo, who, we are satisfied, regrets his inability to oppose the action of the powerful nobles and their legion of retainers. Mr. Laurence Oliphant, who so nearly lost his life after having been four days at his post, goes home in person with despatches, in order to afford the fullest information regarding the state of affairs, and so save the time that would be otherwise occupied in writing back for information upon heads wherein the despatches have been inadvertently silent or incomplete.

Mr. G. S. Morrison, Consul at Nagasaki, is about to return to England on account of his health.

From the three Northern ports we have not much fresh news to communicate. The gentleman who was assaulted by some natives at Yingtsze is a Mr. Davenport: he has been wounded in the wrist, but not seriously. The steps which have been taken to secure and punish his assailants have had the effect of inspiring the people of the country with more respect for foreigners. This port is more promising than what appeared by the last accounts, and it is believed that it may, in the course of three years, become a good commercial settlement.

At Tien-tsin orders had been issued for a public mourning for the Emperor's death. Official documents were being issued under the blue seal, blue being the colour used for imperial mourning.

From Shanghai we hear of continued piracies in the silk districts; such acts of lawlessness are, to a great extent, attributable to the rebellion. No great movement on the part of the rebels has been reported during the past fortnight. The city of Ngan-king, however, has been taken out of their hands under the following disastrous circumstances. We quote the account form the North China Herald:—

"Information has reached us from Ngan-king, reporting the capture of that city by the Imperialists, after a stubborn resistance of many months on the part of the Rebels and inhabi tants. As far as we can gather from the scanty intelligence forwarded, it would appear that the city was impregnable to the attack of the besieging force, so they resolved to starve the Rebel horde within the walls into submission. This hrd its usual effect, where the besieged are determined to resist, and the horrors of famine raged within the devoted city, until it merged into cannibalism of the most frightful description. After every catty of ordinary food was consumed, and the most loathsome animals devoured, they resorted to eating human flesh, which was vended at eighty cash per catty, or about fourpence per pound. It is reported also, that three regiments or separate bands of the rebels gave themselves up to the imperialists as prisoners of war, under the impression that their lives would be spared, but they were slaughtered to a man, and their bodies thrown into the river. These were seen in hun dreds floating down the stream by those on board the steamers Governor General and Carthage, and several sailing vessels from the upper ports on the Yang-tze-kiang."

From the port of Hankow our correspondent

under date 26th August, writes as follows: "The trade of this port is, I might almost venture to say, hourly increasing. As a proof, I may state that there are at present six steamers here, and one sailing vessel, the American ship Beaver, towed here from Shanghai by the Willamette. The Chinese are fast regaining their confidence, and as this is in consequence of a retreat of the rebels from our vicinity, it is to be hoped that their absence may be a prolonged one; on the river, however, the petty, but to our trade and commercial prosperity annoying, warfare still continues, and at Ngan-king the opposing parties seem to be wasting a great deal of powder without effecting any permanent results. The navigation of the river is still dangerous, though the water has fallen below Hankow from two to four feet. Our trade here I think must affect Canton, as nearly every steamer going from this takes an average of 1,500 chests of tea, besides large quartities of flax, oil, vegetable wax, &c. We have also started the American plan, and have sent rafts of timber down the river, their destination being of course Shanghae. Junks also are to be met with daily, going down by themselves, laden with teas, bound for Shanghai. Let the Rebels remain at a distance for but a few months more, and I doubt not but that Hankow will continue as it is now fast attaining to be our central and most important emporium in China. There is one subject which ought to be brought before our naval authorities, and that is the necessity that exists for a survey of the river Han, which to steamers like the Fire Dart, Willamette, &c., is navigable for 300 to 400 miles from its mouth on the Yang-tsze. There are several large towns on its banks, and one of the largest and most important in the province is only 150 miles from Hankow. Of course the first trips would be in most senses experimental, but they would repay the trial I think. While on the subject of surveys, I may say I hear frequent complaints on the imperfect and incorrect surveys of the river Yang-tsze between Naukin and the Langshan crossing, and in many places the complainers say that positions of banks are roughly placed, or that they have altered considerably since. gun-boat might be advantageously employed on this service."

The date of the evacuation of Canton by the Allied forces is, by the last accounts, deferred till December.

Local matters are quiet. Sir Hercules Robin son has just returned from a trip to Japan in the Impericuse; that vessel had the misfortune to be drifted on to a rock in the bay of Yedo, from now so which she was only freed by throwing her guns overboard; the guns had floats attached to them, and were all recovered. It does not appear that

Sir Hercules went on shore at Japan; the disturbed state of matters at the time of his arrival was not of a nature to invite a foreigner of rank to ride through Yedo. There has been a typhoon in the China seas recently, but its effects, so far as reported, have not been very disastrous.

At Kow-loong, on the 6th Sept., the commissariat sheds took fire, and their contents, consisting chiefly of large quantities of compressed hay and patent fodder, were utterly destroyed. The loss is estimated at about £40,000.

The weather continues to be mild for this season of the year.—Overland China Mail.

THE LATE EMPEROR OF CHINA.-The late Emperor Hien Fung was the son of Tau Kwang, who died in February, 1850, after a reign of thirty years. According to the Chinese laws of succession, the sovereign has the power of nominating any male member of the Royal Family as his successor. It is not necessary that he should be the eldest son, and he may even appoint a brother or uncle to succeed him, provided he has exhibited capacity and talents for governing more conspicuously than any other possessor of the Blood Royal. In this instance Tau Kwang nominated as his successor Hien Fung, his fourth son, stepping over the heads of three others. On his accession to the throne in February, 1850, great hopes were entertained of him, as it was evident that he possessed administrative capacity in a high degree. But he was a young man of a lascivious disposition, and abandoned the severe discussions of his council for the more palatable society of his harem, where he revelled in the luxury of a Sardanapalus, and, like his Assyrian prototype, clasped in the arms of Myrrha while Ninevel was surrounded by the Scythian hordes, so he sat in the summer palace of Yuen-Min Yuen, amongst his wives and concubines, while the guns of the Allied army resounded in his ears; and he had barely time to escape to the Tartarian Alps, when it was sacked, burned, and demolished. The place of his retreat was the palace of Zehol, on the frontiers of the Empire, where it is hemmed in by the precipitous mountains of Tartary. Here he wiled away his time in indolence, while his brother, Prince Kung, assumed all the cares and responsibilities of government at Pekin. From the date of his retreat, early in October, 1860, he evidently languished, as reports of his illness from time to time were spread abroad. until from mental and bodily affliction, which reduced him to a state of imbecility-like his contemporary suzerain the Sultan of Turkey-he died ingloriously, in his thirtieth year, amidst effeminate luxury, at nine P.M. on the 22nd August, 1861, a victim to his appetites, and a slave to his passions, which made him an imbecile despot, and the first Emperor of China who has succumbed to European power. The probabilities are that a better Emperor may succeed-a worse for administrative purposes could not have been. this head, the accounts from Tien-tsin to the 25th August are not definite. Some say that Prince Kung will be nominated as his successor, while others maintain that his older brother-who witnessed his last moments at Zehol-will succeed; but as he has left a son, it is more than probable that he, with the assistance of a council, may be the future Emperor of China. Already, at Tientsin, the authorities have issued orders for the officials and inhabitants to go into mourning; and according to the custom of the nation, these were sealed with a blue, instead of a red seal as usual-blue being the semblance of imperial mourning, as white is that of the people. What may be the effect of this important event upon the foreign policy of the Government it is impossible to surmise. Should the brother at Zehol succeed to the throne, it is said that he is a fire eater, and fresh troubles may be in store for us. On the other hand, should Prince Kung come into power, it is possible that a more friendly policy towards England may be initiated. At all events the advent of a new autocrat to rule over the Chinese Empire, where British interests are now so much involved, demands the immediate and most serious attention of the Imperial Government of the United Kingdom .- North China

CAPTURE AND RESCUE OF A REBEL. A COrrespondent of the Delhi Gazette records the capture and subsequent rescue of Niamut Ushruf, Kotwal of Allahabad during the few days the Moulvie ruled in 1857, at a village twelve miles from Allahabad. The police jemadar of the village proclaimed a series of wrestling matches for a certain day, and invited all the neighbourhood to witness them, knowing Niamut's fondness for such sports. The scoundrel fell into the snare, was captured and confined in the police station; but at midnight a large party of his friends succeeded in rescuing him, though not before he had been severely, if not mortally, wounded by the jemadar.

CACHAR

Ir the information recently afforded by the Hurkaru be at all of a reliable character-and we ourselves have no doubt upon that pointone of the most barbarous and backward provinces of the Bengal Presidency is likely ere long to be the most completely Anglicised portion of our Indian territories. Little more than a quarter of a century ago the entire province of Cachar, 110 miles in length and sixty-five in breadth, was offered on lease by the British Government for £2.000 a-year, without a single bid being obtained. Though eminently adapted for the cultivation of cotton, silk, coffee, and sugar, and traversed by a navigable river and many fine streams, it possessed at that time several drawbacks which more than counterbalanced its numerous advantages. The plains were infested with tigers, open to inroads from the savage tribes on its eastern frontiers, and more than once ravaged by the Burmese. The population also was thinly scattered, and not a single decent road could be said to exist in any direction. One good result, however, of the last Burmese invasion is the absence of small cottiers. The working classes are mere labourers and not small "capitalists" after Mr. Grant's pattern. There is at present indeed, a scarcity of labour, but this may be obviated by a large use of machinery, for which there is abundance of water power. The certainty of employment, however, will gradually attract labour in conformity with the law of supply and demand. The Lieutenantgovernor, moreover, has sanctioned the making of roads, and a company has already been formed for the cultivation of the tea plant. In the absence of native proprietors there is an excellent opportunity for Europeans to form a permanent colony, holding the land in their own hands, and employing the peasantry as free labourers occupying cottages built upon the estate. There is every reason to believe that the tea cultivation will answer fully as well as it has done in Assam. At first there are incidental expenses to be incurred which will naturally diminish the profits for a few years, or rather it should be said that no clear returns must be expected until the fifth year. To work a grant of one hundred acres will require a capital of nearly £2,000, including subsistence until the speculation become a paying one. When in full working order the profits are calculated to exceed £20 per acre; and under intelligent manage ment an acre should be brought to yield fully £25 clear of all charges. A more easy and delightful occupation can scarcely be imagined, and every year will increase the number of European settlers and neighbours. from the Punjab. In average years the total able. The Missionary Conference, it should

A few years ago there was not a single English | area under cotton cultivation, in that province. resident in the district, and now there are not slightly exceeds 467,500 acres each containfewer than seventy. It is impossible to overrate the immense benefits that may accrue to India from having a British colony settled in Cachar. Not only would a sense of security be imparted to the Bengal Government, but the moral influence of the Anglo-Saxon character would be extended over adjacent countries, and might prove of inappreciable importance when the third and final war is commenced by the Burmese. As the Indian Government appears at last to be awakening to the necessity of ruling the country on some definite system and policy, it may be hoped that seasonable and suitable encouragement will be given to men of enterprise and sufficient capital to induce them to redeem from waste the fine uplands of Cachar, and open up new mines of wealth by their intelligence and perseverance.

COTTON CULTIVATION IN THE PUNJAB.

THE Report of the Punjab Government on the cultivation of cotton in that province will afford but little encouragement to the Manchester manufacturers. It is frankly admitted that neither soil nor climate is exactly suited to meet the requirements of that valuable plant. Nor can the native zemindars be persuaded to depart from ancient routine, or attempt experiments with American seed. As their fathers did in the old time before them, so are they content to do at the present time, turning a deaf and scornful ear to the advice of their European rulers. The Lieutenant-Governor evidently thinks it very doubtful that, if the Indian cultivator were told by proclamation that, owing to political or other causes, a market for his cotton had been suddenly opened in Europe, he would attach either belief or importance to the statement. "His necessities are too immediate, and his circumstances too narrow, to allow him to embark in distant speculations, however flattering." The only way to induce him to pay increased attention to the growth of cotton is by giving a good price for the produce of his fields, delivered at his own door. It is indispensable that English agents should travel about among the people, advancing money to the necessitous, and in some degree superintending upon the spot the processes of cleaning, ginning, and packing. The stimulus thus imparted will probably, after a while, lead to the cultivation of a larger area of cotton-land, and to the production of a superior article. There are many prejudices, however, to overcome, not the least of which is an ignorant suspiciousness as to the motives of the Government. It is even stated that when it was known that Mr. Paterson Saunders, the Special Commissioner deputed to make inquiries into the cultivation of this staple, was about to inspect the district round Etawah, the natives lost no time in pulling up the plant, under the impression that it was intended to levy some new tax upon them. This trifling incident may serve to illustrate the difficulty of holding straightforward relations with such a childish, sensitive, and jealous race of people. Large quantities of cotton are undoubtedly grown in many parts of India, and which are susceptible of a vast increase, but no very abundant supplies must be looked for nisation appeared at first sight so unaccount-

ing 4,818 squares. The average yield per acre of clean cotton is estimated at about 90 lbs.varying, indeed, from 240 lbs. in the Hooshyarpore to only 32 lbs. in the Kangra district. The local price, likewise, varies very considerably, being only 2d. per lb. in the Peshawur district, and attaining to more than double that sum in Hissar. Up to the present time probably not more than four or five million pounds find their way to Calcutta or Bombay, out of the forty-three millions annually produced, the value of which is stated at nearly half a million sterling. It thus appears that cotton is now grown in the Punjab almost exclusively for local consumption, showing how large is the demand for cotton fabrics. This consideration should have no small weight with the millowners of Lancashire. Although they must not expect any immediate supply of their indispensable material from the land of the five rivers, a most encouraging prospect opens out for the future if they have only sufficient enterprise to avail themselves of the golden opportunity that presents itself. By the judicious outlay of a comparatively small capital in making advances to the ryot and in buying up the produce of his fields, and also by turning out cheap and strong fabrics, they would, in a very few years, command both the export and import trade of this fine province-and, indeed, of all India. We shall be agreeably surprised, however, if they do more than hold meetings to inveigh against the Government, except it be to shut up their mills and turn out of employment four millions of industrious operatives in order to compel ministers to force the blockade of the Southern Ports. Such a course would, besides, be quite in keeping with their proverbially selfish and unpatriotic policy.

MISSIONARIES AND INDIGO PLANTING.

THERE is a real pleasure in meeting with such a temperate exposition of any case as that lately contributed to the Englishman by a member of the Calcutta Missionary Conference, on the subject of Indigo planting. This able and impartial writer does not hesitate to express his fear that the part taken by his reverend brethren in the controversy that still agitates Lower Bengal has been neither just in itself nor founded upon the purest motives. There has not been wanting, he says, an appearance of pre-judging things and of hastening to conclusions on questions very imperfectly understood. At the very commencement of the dispute he was struck range alliance that seemed to have been formed between the missionary body and the British India Association, coupled with the editors of the Hindoo Patriot and the Field. When natural enemies coalesce, it is but reasonable to infer that they have united either for their common defence, or in prosecution of designs very little to their credit. It was perfectly clear that the planters had no intention of stirring up hostilities. All that they asked for was the just administration of the laws and fair protection for life and property. It followed, then, that the aggression was on the side of those whose sudden frater-be borne in mind, was confined to Calcutta, and possessed no personal knowledge whatever of the dealings of the planters with their neighbouring ryots. And yet, though professedly withdrawn from secular pursuits, practically unacquainted with the employment of capital and the management of a labouring population, and deriving their opinions at secondhand from prejudiced persons, these ministers of religion deemed it consistent with their sacred calling to solicit the interference of the Government, and even to permit one of their own body to sit in judgment on the charges brought forward at their own instigation. Such conduct as this is scarcely reconcileable with their spiritual functions, though not altogether dissimilar to the action and policy of the priesthood in less enlightened ages. In these proceedings the subtlety of the serpent was certainly more conspicuous than the gentleness of the dove.

But, it may be urged, the sufferings of the ryots had become so intolerable that their cry rose up to heaven, and that it was in the true spirit of Christian philanthropy the missionaries stepped forward to do battle on their behalf. Even in this case would it not have been more becoming their assumed position as mediators to have, first of all, remonstrated with the planters on the harshness of their dealings with the unprotected peasants, and to have appealed to their feelings as English gentlemen? Instead of this, they at once adopted as incontestable truths all the exaggerated stories of oppression and wrong-doing that had been current for half a century, and endeavoured, with only too much success, to force upon the Bengal Government their own foregone conclusions-and, it must be admitted. they found ready listeners for their tales. A little previous investigation, however, would have satisfied them that there was a very small leaven of truth in the accusations poured into their willing ears. No proof was adduced even before the Indigo Commission that the planters had in any way interfered with missionary enterprise, though there was abundant evidence to show that they were liberal contributors to chapels, schools, and dispensaries. Then, with regard to the peasantry themselves, it was proved that they were better off in the indigo districts than in other parts of the country. They were generally possessed of considerable farms, which they held at a low rent, on condition of devoting one beegah in seven to the cultivation of indigo, for which purpose also they received advances free of interest. It was true that, in consequence of bad harvests, combined with the abundant employment furnished by the railway works in progress, and the large number of Europeans in the country, the price of all kinds of cereals, and of labour itself, had become so greatly enhanced that, for a time, indigo was likely to be less profitable than any other crop. But this is surely no excuse for the violation of contracts and the refusal to pay rent. It may also be true that the planters had, in some instances, followed the example of the native zemindars, and held a sort of court leet on their own estates, after the manner of country squires in England not two centuries ago. The Government, however, had long connived at this irregular mode of administering justice—for justice, after all, was fairly administered—and would have connived at a far worse state of things rather than incur the expense of appointing an adequate number of magistrates. Owing to Lord Cornwallis's permanent settlement only a fixed revenue could be derived from Bengal, so that no practical inducement was offered for the introduction of improvements. Sure of its stated revenue, the Government troubled itself as little as possible about the petty quarrels of zemindars, planters, or ryots, and in blissful ignorance allowed matters to take very much their own way. On the whole, the husbandmen fared very comfortably under their European employers, who were at least more just and generous to them than their own countrymen would have been. The present temporary estrangement would probably long since have subsided but for the officious interference of the missionaries, the unconscious tools of Calcutta Hindoos. Already the ryots are beginning to discover the mistake they have made, now that rice is again falling in price and they themselves are forced to have recourse to native usurers for advances on their crops. Unhappily their repentance arrives too late to avert tremendous losses from the unfortunate planters, to whom the spiritual exhortations of the missionaries are not likely to afford much heartfelt consolation. Some satisfaction, however, they may justly derive from the testimony in their favour so handsomely tendered by the enlightened and liberal-minded correspondent of the leading journal in Bengal.

SECENTARY—C. L. Peel. Esq.
OFFICES—62, MOORGATE-STREET, E.C.

A very brief explanation is alone required of the objects of this Company.

1. The Red Sca and India Telegraph Company, upon the guarantee of her Majesty's Government of 4½ per cent. per annum for fifty years, have expended £800,000 in laying a cable between Suez and Kurrachee.

2. Every section of this line worked satisfactorily for a period of several months, and the whole line carried through messages between Kurrachee and Suez for several days. Faults subsequently occurred in several of the sections, which have never been repaired.

3. The Government have agreed to transfer the line, stations, and property of the Company to a new Company, to be formed for the purpose, on very liberal terms. These are in substance:—

3. The Government have agreed to transfer the line, stations, and property of the Company to a new Company, to be formed tor the purpose, on very liberal terms. These are in substance:—

1st. That the cables, land-lines, instruments, stations, concessions, &c., belonging to the old Company shall be made over to the new Company, free from charce.

2nd That the new Company, shall use their best endeavours to repair the line and to work it when completed, beginning with the line between Aden and Kurrachee; and are to have possession so soon as two-thirds of the capital is subscribed, and one-third paid up, and a suntable vessel despatched with not less than 200 miles of new cable on board.

3rd. That the new Company shall be entitled to a clear dividend out of the profits to 25 per cent. per annum on the money paid up; and the Government is to have the power to repurchase the line on repaying the capital expended at the expiration of thirty years.

4th. That any surplus profits shall be applied to reimburse the Government for the interest they have paid and will have to pay annually upon the original capital expended; after which any further profits which may accrue will be applied to the creation of a reserve fund.

5th. The accounts of the Company will be audited at the Treasury half-yearly. After the restoration of the line, any outlay of capital to be subject to the approval of Government; and the Government is to have the right (subject to arbitration) of disallowing working expenditure which they may consider excessive.

6th. In the event of the failure of the Company to restore or maintain the line in working order, the Government are to have the power of taking it into their hands again on arrapaying the capital actually expended by the new Company. Should the tovernment not exercise this right, the C-inpa y are to be at liberty to dispose of the property to reimburse their outlay; the balance, after defraying he actual expenditure, to be handed over to the Government. Fat ue is to be defined to be the non

15. The grounds which commend the subject as a speculation are these. - £880,000 has been expended in laying a line which for a time was perfectly successful. This one will be handed over to the Company, free of all charge or liability. No attempt has as yet been made to restore the communication between Aden and Kurrachee. On the other hand, the Company's Superintendent, Mr. Brunton, has expressed a confident opinion that the faults are many of them very trifling, and ali caparle of repair. This view is confirmed by the opinions of Sir Charles Bright and Mr. Latimer Clark, who have been consulted on the subject. In one of the section-, of nearly 500 miles, there has never been any fault, and those which do exist in the other sections are believed to be in shallow water. An estimate has been made by Messrs. Bright a d Clark of the cost of repairing the line between for a sum in t exceeding £30,000. The venture is sind, while the resurns will be on the scale of an original expenditure of £500,000.

6. It is proposed to limit the first operations to the repair of the line between Aden and Kurrachee. When this is effected the period of a message to all parts of India will be shridged to five days. This will be not only a vast public object, but there is no doubt, from the experience of the line when partially open, that the number of messages will be very great. unsupplied.
5. The grounds which commend the subject as a speculation

7. When this eastern division has been completed there will remain only that between Suez and Aden, which can undoubtedly be made good by restoration of the existing cable, in whole or in part. If it should be decided to make any part of it a land line, it can be done at comparatively smal cost.

8. The intention is, as soon as the capital, or a sufficient amount has been subscribed, to despatch a steamer with 200 miles of new cable, so as to complete the communication up to Aden early in 1862.

Forms of application for shares and information may be obtained at the Offices, or from the Company's Brokers, Messrs. Knight and Coleman, No. 1, Royal Exchange-buildings.

When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Celeutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE deeply regret to learn from the Bombay Mail of the 12th October that Sir George Russell Clerk has resigned the Governorship of Bombay. It will be no easy task to find a successor possessed of equal experience, moderation, and industry. The reason of Sir George's retirement is not stated, but his health appears to have been much impaired The fixed strength, however, will shortly be he has been advised to proceed at once to £8,093,470. The Queen's regiments which Mahableshwur. In tensequence of his Excellency's indisposition, he was to be represented at Sedashegur by the Hon. W. E. Frere, who had already started for that destination. Sir William Denison, on his part, is reported to have left the Neilgherry Hills for the same port. On his return, Sir William is expected to visit Calicut in order to open a section of the railway, and will then visit Madras for a short time, previous to inspecting the Wynaad district.

Cholera has almost entirely died away in British India, but at Candahar 8,000 persons are reported to have been carried off by that terrible pestilence in eighteen days.

The "Nil Darpan" controversy, which was fast sinking into oblivion, has been partially revived by a very injudicious article contributed to the Christian Intelligencer by no less a personage than the Bishop of Calcutta. After commenting upon the play and the conduct of all concerned, in the spirit of a partisan, his lordship sums up with an exhortation to brotherly love. It has been said by a living wit that we are all brothers-all Cains and Abels. This division of mankind is, we fear, as true as it is humorous, and we should have been better pleased had the good bishop written rather in the character of the younger than of the elder brother. Mr. Long himself is apparently unwilling to allow ill feeling to subside, and has published a pamphlet entitled "Strike, but Hear," with the intention of justifying the libellous statements contained in the abominable drama that has created such deplorable excitement. Tantæne animis cælestibus iræ!

The Indian navy is at once to be reduced to the narrow limit of four ships for transport service. Commodore Wellesley accordingly proceeds to Calcutta as Secretary of Marine, Capt. Rennie returning to Eugland as Superintendent of Transports. Great reductions have also been made in the Indian army, though the European forces still form an effective of 81,228 men at an annual cost of £8,935,080. of late, and the local journals mention that | 73,586 men, maintained at a yearly charge of | T. S. Tickell.

expect to return almost immediately to Europe are the 6th, the 73rd, the 75th, and the 83rd. The Native army has already been reduced to the extent of 64,000 men of all ranks, thus effecting a saving roughly estimated at a million sterling; and it is now in contemplation to cut down the Native cavalry in a similar ratio.

The appointment of Mr. R. Temple as Chief Commissioner of the Government Paper Currency, which comes into being at the commencement of the ensuing year, evinces a nice discrimination on the part of the Viceroy. There is not a more able, enlightened, or conscientious member of the Civil Service in all India, and it will certainly not be his fault if the new experiment does not prove completely successful.

The Calcutta Chamber of Commerce has done itself great credit by its handsome appreciation of Colonel Baird Smith's report on the state of trade in Manchester goods in the North-West Provinces. A silver tea service, valued at £200, has been presented to that gallant and singularly intelligent officer, in a manner that must have been very gratifying to his feelings.

The opening of submarine telegraphic communication between London, Malta, and Alexandria, is at length officially announced. The charge for twenty words from one extreme point to the other is £2. 6s. 9d. We trust that messages will now be received by telegraph at least as quickly as by post. Some degree of accuracy would also be acceptable.

BENGAL.

A SOCIAL REVOLUTION.

We English, in our government of India, have arrived at a problem which must be solved or it will bar all future progress. To whom does the soil belong, and on what tenure is it possible to hold it so as to make it produce most freely and speedily the wealth which God intended it to yield? The cry for cotton and the demands of English capital, no less than the disturbances of Lower Bengal, have brought us face to face with the millions of ryots who constitute the vast majority of the population of India. What are their rights, how far can these rights be justly removed or altered so as to benefit themselves and humanity generally, and to make possible for Asia some such future as that which Europe enjoys after having risen from the very position in which India now lies? No one will assert that it is good for the ryots to remain as they are, at one dead level of poverty, or, at the hest, of comfortable indebtedness. Nor will the most sentimental philanthropist insist that India ought to stand still rather than that one human being should suffer in the struggle for civilization. To put it on lower ground, the mere official administrator will not be satisfied that we should be pursuing in different provinces, and even in the same province, contradictory and mutually destructive policies in our treatment of our native subject. A zemindar or talookdar, that is an almost feudal, tenure prevails in Bengal and Oude; a rvotwar or village tenure all over the rest of India-which is right? Even where, as in the Punjab, the tenure of the soil is in favour of the ryot as against the feudal superior, the political power is with the lord of the manor as against the tenant. If legally or territorially the ryotwar system is right, politically Lord Canning's feudal, and especially his Oude, policy is wrong. Whether we look at the propriety of restoring peace to the long disturbed districts of Lower Bengal, to the necessity of meeting the cry for cotton and other products, to the wisdom of having if not a uniform at least not an internally inconsistent policy in our treatment of the natives, or to the hope that India must one day rise to a point parallel with the civilisation of Europe, the ryot difficulty bars the way. The problem in its historical form is this-other things being equal how to raise the India of the present day to a similar position to that which Europe gained for herself after the chaos of the Dark Ages.

India is at her Dark Ages stage. With every civilised nation the steps of progress have been from the savage to the nomadic or pastoral state in which the tribes of Central Asia are; thence to the purely agricultural in which India has remained since the Aryas settled in Hindostan; thence to the feudal stage which should be the result of Lord Canning's policy if consistently carried out, and thence to the manufacturing and trading platform on which Europe stands. In the West these changes have been successively produced by a combination of spiritual and material ceuses. What Rome was to Europe England is to India, the channel at once of the intellect and the faith of Christianity. When the barbarians had settled down into their new seats, the influence of Rome, in her laws and her church, was speedily felt, while the soil was looked on as the exclusive property of the conquering power, and was bestowed on feudal retainers in return for services to be rendered. The peasants whose ancestors might have cultivated certain acres for generations, became not only not proprietors but serfs. In India England holds the sword of the conqueror while she also is the source of a new faith and new ideas. Theoretically she is the possessor of every inch of soil in the country, and can give it to whom she pleases irrespective of any rights which she has not herself created. Had Lord Cornwallis, acting on the right of a conqueror, confiscated every tenure in Bengal as Lord Canning did in Oude; had Sir Thomas Munro done the same in Madras, and had the same been effected landlords, India would have been in the same position as feudal Europe, her peasantry would have been labourers not proprietors, and she would have possessed a class of wealthy capitalists who would have improved their estates as has been partially the case in Bengal. But this was not done, and our various settlements of the land revenue whether for ever, for thirty years, or from year to year, have resulted in giving three separato parties concurrent rights in the soil—the State, the zemindar or lord of the manor, and the peasant. And the curse of this concurrent tenure, which leads to such a conflict of interests as we see in the indigo districts, is intensified by the prevalence of small holdings. The patches of land tilled by Indian ryots are not for a moment to be compared with the peasant properties of continental Europe, over which Sismondi, Thornton, and Mill wax elogient. Even in the case of many of these, however, we are told "the indebtedness of the proprietors borders on the incredible." R'See benefits of peasant properties are conditional on their not being too much subdivided, then the ryot holdings of India must be admitted to be at the root, with caste and idolatry, of the degradation of its millions.

Caste and idolatry we must leave to the operation of higher influences than man's, and of better agencies than that of the State, but the right of the ryot to the soil and the conflict of interests which flows from it, it is possible so to modify as to produce the same social revolutions through which Europe has passed. The mass of the population must be set free from their bonds to the soil and from the stern grip of the money lender, so as to devote their labour power, under the direction of skill and capital, to all that we consider civilisation. Large holdings and a single interest in the soil which intelligence and capital may affect, are the material necessities of India's progress. How shall we effect this, after so long adopting the opposite policy? The thinker who could solve that and the statesman who could apply the solution, would do more for India than Charlemagne for Europe. We profess but to hint at the solution. It is to adopt in India the same enfranchisement of copyhold tenures which Parliament made compulsory in England The ryot is to all intents and purposes a copyhold tenant. A freehold being in the full control of the owner, is constantly improved, while a copyhold being subject to the conflicting interests of the lord of the manor and the tenant, admits of no improvements. This led to the passing of an Act to make enfranchisement compulsory in certain cases, so as to subject the land to but one owner, at a time when, in England, the advantages of security and facility of title were all on the side of copyhold and against freehold.

The conversion of the uncertain Indian tenures into freehold or quasi-copyhold titles would neither be difficult nor unjust. All over India there are old peasant tenures not liable to enhancement of rent, while the rest of the soil is tilled by newer occupants subject to increased rents. This marks the natural boundary.
The former could at once be made independent of any superior, being compulsorily enfranchised, as in England, by payment of the capital of their fixed rent or by surrender of a proportionate share of the holding. The latter should at the same time be made mere tenants at will to the landlord in the zemindary districts, and to the Government in the ryotwarry provinces. Certain subordinate arrangements would have to be made with such few ryots as have holdings giving fixity of tenure though liable to enhancement of rent, but all resolvable on the English system of enfranchisement, by one interest buying off the other, or dividing the hold ing according to their proportionate shares. When each piece of land had thus become subject to only one interest, the owner could deal with it as he pleased. The indigo landlord could then justly require of his ryots at will the cultivation of indigo, or could impose on them such terms as the Engin each new province as it was subjugated, the lish freeholder requires of his tenants, in the feudal rights being conferred on great nobles or proportions of the farm directed to be cultivated in arable or in pasture land. The tenant-at-will in India, as in England, would then have to submit to his landlord's terms or to go elsewhere. This would solve the indigo planter's difficulty as to his illaka cultivation, and his be-illaka cultivation would depend on his contracts with other landlords, not with their tenants. In like manner the ryotwarree districts would thus be divided between the enfranchised old ryots made freeholders, and the Crown lands with Crown ryots as tenants-at-will. These Crown lands would afford an ample field for the employment of English directors of labour cultivating cotton on capital supplied by Manchester, or growing such other products in demand in Europe as, by the intelligent supervision and application of capital with Government encouragement of the local labour, could be produced to a profit.

By some such scheme as this which is adopted in England, and has become familiar in India by the enfranchisement of Enams, progress to a higher stage of civilisation would be at least possible for the ryots. Instead of generation following generation now for three thousand years, all at one dead level of poverty and ignorance, a great proportion would become yeomen possessing large freeholds, and the rest labourers ready to migrate to any market, and to form the nucleus of a manufacturing class. Instead of, like the cottiers in Ireland before the Encumbered Estates Commission, writhing under the exactions of middlemen, all would become free men, actuated by the promptings of an enlightened self-With education and Christianity interest. brought to bear upon them by the aided private effort of Puritan England, the greatest social revolution recorded in history might be effected, and England might do more for India-far more -than Rome, Pagan or Christian, accomplished for Europe-Friend of India.

KOKAN, BOKHARA, AND AFFGHANISTAN. [From the "Punjab Report" for 1860-61.]

The situation of the country of Kokan, between latitude 42° and 45° N., and longitude 65° and 73° E., in the valley of the river Sirr or Jaxartes, on which stand the principal towns Tashkund, Kokan, and Khojend, and enclosed on the north, east, and south, by the Altau and Gakchal mountains, is one of importance. The soil is fertile and easily irrigated: grapes, pomegranates, and apricots abound. On the east trade is carried on with the Chinese settlements of Khoten and Yarkund, and an agent is stationed at Cashgar. the north there is considerable trade with the Russian settlements, the nearest of which, Ak Musjid, is on the Sirr, some 250 miles from the city of Kokan. The State maintains friendly relations with its Chinese neighbours, and with Khiva, Budukshan, and Affghanistan, but is frequently engaged in hostilities with Bokhara. The following is the account of the revenue as given to the Commissioner of Peshawur. Captain James. C. B., by the envoy:-

"The king takes one-fifth of the grain produce, but a money-rate of four Cabulee rupees per jareeh on fruits and of two Cabulee rupees on vegetables. He receives also one in forty ou horses, sheep, and goats, which are the wealth of the Khirgiz and Kuzzak tribes. But a principal item of his revenue is derived from the duties collected on merchandise. These at Kokan are farmed at 40,000 tillas, and at Tashkend for the same amount. Formerly there was war between Kokan and the Chinese frontier authorities, but Mahomed Ali Khan settled the dispute, and an agent from Kokan is placed at Chashgar, who collects duties and realises 20,000 tillas. There is also an arrangement with Russia whereby an annual payment of 20,000 tillas is made to Kokan from the duties collected on Kokanee merchandise at Astrakhan. Roughly estimating the sources of revenue, as detailed by the envoy, I calculate them as follows:-

1.50,000 tillas. Customs Customs ... Land revenue 25,000 25,000 ... Fruit and vegetables Sheep, horses, &c. ... Total 800,000

The following is the route taken by the envoy:

Kokan to Karateghin ... 10 days' journey. Kolab Kolab ... ... 4
Koondooz ... 4
Huzrut Imam 3
Tash Koorghan 4 77 Cabul ...

The kingdom of Bokhara lies to the south-west of Kokan, and is separated from it by the Khizilkoom desert, which occupies a vast extent of the country between the Sirr and the Oxus and the Ak'tah or Gakchal mountains. The only incidents during the year calling for mention were the exchange of embassies between this State and Cabul, and the death of the Ameca, Nasir-oola-Khan, who was succeeded by his son, Synd Meer Mozuffur Shah, on the 20th of October. The new ruler is reported to be unsuccessful in his government.

To the south of Bokhara, on the left bank of the Oxus, lie the Affghan conquered provinces of Balkh and Koondooz. The former district is reported to have advanced in prosperity since its acquisition by the Ameer in 1850. Koondooz was occupied in 1859 by a force under the command of his eldest son, Mahomed Afzul Khan, who has hitherto maintained his ground in spite of the disaffection of the population and the hostility of the petty chiefs of Maimunna, Siripool Shibberghaum, and Andkho, against whom he has not been able to act effectually. They have always been partially under the influence of Herat, and Sooltan Ahmoud has, during 1860, aimed at a more definite supremacy. As the avowed and recognised vassal of Persia, this ambitious man, the son-in-law and nephew of the Ameer Dost Mahomed, is prepared to play an important part in the politics of Central Asia. He has, however, had to cope with rebellion in his country on the upper river Moorghab, from the Jumshey doe Eimaks, and recently lost one of his sons in action. His friends, the Persians, also suffered a disastrous defeat in the autumn at Merve. They are said to have committed some oppressions on the Turcoman tribes in the neighbourhood, who unexpectedly attacked the army when moving in the early dawn, and it is reported that, of a force of 40,000 men and forty guns, only 2,000 men and one gun escaped to Herat.

With the Ameer Dost Mahomed Khan himself our relations have continued to be satisfactory. Some anxiety expressed by his Highness regarding the pretensions of the Khan of Khelat to the suzerainty of the petty chiefship of Kharan, was completely allayed by the Governor-general's declaration of non-interference. And although the Ameer on two occasions received deputations from the Mahsood Wuzurees, he cautiously abstained from any intervention in their favour susceptible of offensive interpretation. The peace of Affghanistan is dependent on his Highness's life, and a general apprehension regarding the future is felt by his subjects, who see in the rival pretensions of the heir apparent, Shere Ali Khan, of Sirdar Afzul Khan, the conqueror of Koon dooz, and of Scoltan Ahmud Khan, the vassal of Persia, portents of impending anarchy and disturbance.

MISCELLANEOUS.

INCOME-TAX AT BENARES .- The Gazette Supplement contains papers on the assessment of the Income-tax in the city of Benares. The native committee were appointed from an assembly of about four hundred men of all guilds and professions. Their first step after election was to request to be themselves assessed by the people assembled. The report uses this significant language:—"We ask every one of them personally and individually what he would pay. It was no use to ask him what was his income. We natives do not like such a question to be put to us; we take it as an insult. We know that there are very few men who are disposed to give a true statement of their incomes, and we know how

In plain English, they know how very few natives speak the truth. The report goes on to show how only one lac could be raised from the city, and the committee raised the remaining Rs. 25,000 among themselves. In all 6,804 men have been taxed, of whom one paid Rs. 4,000, another Rs. 3,000, 17 more than Rs. 1,000, 40 more than Rs. 500, 48 more than Rs. 200, 145 more than Rs. 100, 256 more than Rs. 50, 1,186 more than Rs. 25, 2,567 more than Rs. 4, and 2,543, Rs. 4 The population of the town is 184,000, which gives an average tax of 10 annas 1 pie per head, and Rs. 17-13-7 per man taxed. Baboos defend themselves at considerable length against the accusations that Benares has cheated the Government, that the rich have escaped lightly and the poor have been oppressed. They say, "Benares is a place of wealth but not of great active trade. Benares is full of capitalists but has not much income." We must then devise some means besides the Income-tax to reach the unproductive hoards of wealth of native millionnaires. The lump assessment system is condemned.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY .- The Calcutta Report of the Church Missionary Society for 1860, though late in its appearance, is unusually suggestive on missionary subjects. In North India the number of the Society's stations is 42, with 48 European Missionaries, 3 native pastors, 9 European or East Indian Assistants, 37 native Catechists, and 35 readers. The Society had 159 schools, 311 male and 70 female teachers, 1,093 Christian boys, 1,044 girls, and 7,794 Hindoo pupils. There were 8,075 native Christians, of whom 925 were communicants. There were baptized during the year 172 adults and 390 Christ-The Rev. Mr. Clark and his wife have devoted themselves entirely to labour among the Muzbee Sikhs (24th P. I.). They have a chapel, a parsonage, a church consisting of from 40 to 80 adherents, and a school of 30 scholars. Fifty persons connected with the regiment are Christians, and of these 16 are sepoys. Mrs. Clark has a Bible class for the women and a school for the girls. This is the most important missionary experiment in the last quarter of a century. The Report complains of the interference of the Baptist Missionaries of Delhi with the work of the Church Mission in Meerut, which was begun, as among the Muzbees, by means of tracts distributed in 1857 during the mutiny.

Iron in the Himalayas.—The Hills has some emarks on the mineral wealth of the Himalayas. The ores at Ramghur and Dechowrie do not require to be brought up from mines, but lie about in abundance on the surface, and in some places solid masses of ore stand up above the surface. East and West of Dechowrie, and between it and Ramghur, "there are no words to express the measureless profusion that prevails." It is a remarkable fact that Indian iron is perhaps the best in the world, and it is almost as remarkable that such a fact has as yet been so little heeded. A sample of iron sent from Kangra to England was tested by competent judges, and it was found that while the best English iron yielded at a pressure of about 56,000 lbs. to the square inch the Kangra iron required 61,300 lbs. to the square inch to break it, and after being hammered it sustained a pressure of 71,800 lbs. There are iron deposits in the neighbourhood of Mussoorie from which picks, hatchets, reaping hooks, hoes, &c., are manufactured as good as those of the best steel, besides being much tougher.

THE DELHI INSTITUTE.—We have an instance in the Delhi Institute of what we should like to see in all our large stations. Everyone has heard of the old Delhi College, and, perhaps, of the tragic end of its lamented principal, Dr. Taylor, on the memorable 12th of May. With the college perished also the fine library within its walls. Fortunately the endowment was based on securities not liable to accident, and some four hundred youths still continue to receive education from resources bequeathed by the founder. The objects of the new institute are threefold-the creation difficult it is to prove the exact amount of one's one; a town-hall or chamber of commerce, wherein cloth fabrics of Loodianah, and various other all classes might meet on business of a mercantile or municipal character, and where all ceremonials of a public character might be conducted, and an economic museum. Adequately to provide for the above requirements, it was obvious that a building of no ordinary character and size was requisite. Accordingly a very beautiful design, by Mr. C. T. Campbell, C.E., has been furnished. Native liberality having been freely accorded to the undertaking, it is calculated that a sum of not less than Rs. 60,000 can be expended on the building. The site selected, in the middle of the famed Chandni Chouk, is one of the finest in India. The rear of the building, which is to be quadrangular, rests upon the beautiful public gardens. The front will comprise the town hall and committee-rooms; the right wing will be appropriated to the college and class-rooms; the left to the museum and public library. The works had reached the foundation when the famine arrested them. The practical development of the main objects of the institute have, however, suffered no pause. It has been aided by a liberal grant from the local Government, and by a mandate from the Viceroy to the effect that duplicates of all publications of interest in the Home Secretary's library should be furnished: while a very considerable number of valuable works, among which upwards of twelve hundred volumes are from private contributors, exhibiting the interest awakened in the public mind, already line the walls of temporary reading-rooms. In the formation of a museum equally advanced progress is manifest. There, again, Lord Canning conceded prompt support, and directed the president of the Asiatic Society to place himself in communication with the local authorities, with a view to the interchange of duplicate specimens from the large stores of the society's museum in Calcutta. Thus there will be added a rich contribution of geological and antiquarian articles to the not insignificant proportion of interesting objects already amassed. There are individual curiosities, such as the original "Kudum Shureeff" of Mahomet, taken out of a shrine, for the maintenance of which Rs. 50 a month was always paid by our Government. There are historic relics connected with the sack of the palace and the final overthrow of the last of the Moguls, such as portions of the agate-bath of the ex-queen, the imprint of Fatima's foot, the chairs of Bahadoor Shah. The practical portion of the exhibition is illustrated by a complete series of "Materia Medica Indica," with a description of the names, uses, and origin of every variety of vegetable and mineral drug that enters the Delhi market, in addition to a curious assortment of the native perfumes scarcely dis-tinguishable one from the other by European nostrils, but thoroughly appreciated in all their modifications of odour by Asiatic society. But, perhaps, the most permanently useful are the collections of Indian manufactures and products. The visitor can pause and satisfy himself as to almost every variety, not only of raw material but those of the long-established industries of the East. He can feast his eyes on the unique Saracenic work of Agra in soapstone models and marble mosaics; the exquisite miniature painting, the floss silk scarfs and embroidery, the bidree ware, the sandalwood boxes and brocade of Delhi itself; the graceful wooden-platters and knives and forks of Saharunpoor; the darkwood carving of Bijnore; the delicately coloured pottery of Moradabad; the gorgeous workboxes and painted furniture of Bareilly; the cutlery of Goojerat; the ivory combs of Umritsur; the curiously inlaid dressing boxes of Bombay; the clay figures of Lucknow; the papier-maché boxes of Cashmere; the lacquer-bowls of Paniput; elaborate ivory work from all parts of India; grotesque marble figures from Jeypore; crystal and jadestone saucers and vases from China; the polished wood toys and specimens of boxes of every conceivable shape and hue from Benares, Hissar, and Hoshvarpoor. All this in addition to the textile specimens, the shawl work and pushmeens from Cashmere and Thibet; delicate chudders from Rampore; silks from Lahore; ornamental cloths products from all parts of India--one-eighth of which we have not enumerated. Musical instruments are not wanting in the miscellaneous repository, as well as models of the numerous rough but thoroughly efficient artisans' tools and agricultural implements—the sugar-cane mill, the turnip-cutter, the Persian wheel, the irrigation contrivances, the wheeled carriage, &c. The specimens of zoology and geology are gradually assuming prominence.-Friend of India.

PAPER CURRENCY ESTABLISHMENT .- It has been decided that Mr. R. Temple is to be the Chief Commissioner of the Government Paper Currency, which will come into operation in January next. The Bengal Hurkaru states that Mr. Gibb is likely to be the deputy-commissioner, and another uncovenanted assistant to the Chief Commissioner will be appointed on a salary of Rs. 700 per men-

THE REPORT OF THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, just published, contains a history of the military reforms during 1860-61, which we have from time to time recorded. We gather from it the following valuable figures, showing the strength of the European army :-

Scale of May 1, 1860. Proposed Future Scale Effective Strength. Effective Strength. Cost. Calcutta...50,488 5,55,36,300 ... 44,916 ... 4,94,07,600 Madras ...15,033 1,65,36,300 ... 15,161 ... 1,66,77,100 Bombay ...15,707 1,72,77,700 ... 13,509 ... 1,48,50,000

Total ...81,228 8,93,50,800 ... 73,586 ... 8,09,34,700 On 1st May last the strength was in Bengal 47,950, in Madras 15,152, and in Bombay 12,737 or 75,839. The cholera has taken away at least 839 since then. The fixed strength of 73,577 is 7,577 more than Lord Canning recommended, and 3,577 more than Mr. Laing promised in his Budget speech. As the annual charge for each English soldier, when he once reaches India, is estimated at Rs. 1,100—that of a sepoy is Rs. 240, and of one of the new constables, Rs. 140. India is burdened with 7,577 times Rs. 1,100 every year more than the Governor-general and Military Finance Commission consider necessary, or nearly a million sterling. The native army is fixed at about 145,000, just double what it ought to be, unless half of it is sent to garrison the colonies. The report takes credit to the Military Finance Commission, and most deservedly, for an order establishing moveable columns in the three presidencies, of which Sir Hugh Rose is said "to approve generally." We have before characterised this as the most important military reform introduced for many years. But the Commander-in-chief, however much he may be said to approve of it, has not yet issued the preliminary instructions for the organisation of the columns, though the order was passed so long ago as March. We trust to see them in active exercise during the cold season.—Friend of India.

AMALGAMATION OF THE COURTS.-We are indebted to the Englishman for the following arraugements proposed to be made for the business of the High Court about to be established at Calcutta:-"A Friend informs us that the Supreme Court Judges were recently called to a consultation with the Hon. the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, on the subject of the arrangements for the business of the High Court, and we collect from this statement the following particulars:—It is proposed that the great arrears of the Sudder Court, (amounting to upwards of 4,000 cases, half of which are regular appeals) should be disposed of by one Court, which we may call by way of explanation, the existing Sudder, without, as we understand, any change in the constitution of that Court. The arrears alone will probably occupy a separate court about five years. Concurrently all new business is to go to courts, or rather divisions of the High Court, now to be constituted, and which, it is proposed, should be one full court of three judges, for regular appeals, and two courts of two judges each for special appeals and other business; and that in each of these three courts there shall be one barrister judge. In the present Supreme the Act of Parliament one third must be barristers, two new barrister judges will have to be appointed. We think the allotment of the arrears to the Sudder Court as hitherto constituted most judicious; and one obvious collateral advantage of no small value in our estimation, is, that it will preserve for the existing race of pleaders and law agents in the Sudder, their old and accustomed field, free probably from any greater intrusion or competition of the English bar than they have been accustomed to; and it will, at the same time, give the English bar a field on which they ought not to encounter any jealousy from the old race of Sudder pleaders. The one sole thing which we see to regret is the manner in which the Supreme Court will be affected by the change. From every point of view we regard it as sure to become deteriorated with a prospect of still further deterioration as a consequence of this first downward It will lose the Chief Jastice, or as some would rather say, it will lose its exclusive claim on the Chief Justice. We care not for a phrase; the fact which we deplore is that its administration will not mainly be influenced by, or take its character from the Chief Justice. We are not referring peculiarly to Sir Barnes Peacock, or to the present Puisne judges, for whom we entertain the highest respect. At nearly all times the chief has been the intellectual as well as legal chief, though in no one, that we recollect, has there ever been combined such eminent talents for logical analysis with competent learning and power of work, as in the present Chief Justice. With certain deterioration in prospect, our apprehension is that it will lead to the court being made, like the Mofussil Courts, mainly a Court of first in-stance, a consequence which cannot be too strongly deprecated."

THE REVEREND Mr. Long has published a new pamphlet, entitled "Strike, but Hear; Evidence explanatory of the Indigo System in Lower Bengal." It is a miserable rechauste of very old matter about indigo cultivation in general, with a preface in glorification and vindication of Mr. Long. The spirit of the entire brochure is meant to be indicated by a quotation on the title page, from Proverbs xxxi. 9: "Open thy mouth, judge righteously, plead for the poor and needy." And the suggested inference is, that if people come to conclusions different from those at which Mr. Long has arrived they don't judge righteously, and have no feeling for the poor and needy. It is unnecessary for us to argue this question with Mr. Long. But, as he is no doubt familiar with his Bible, as he ought to be, we may remind him, "in the most delicate manner imaginable," that there is mention made in another part of it about opening a mouth. But that was the mouth of an ass. the gentle reader will put that and that together, he, she, or it will, no doubt, draw a just conclusion; and so we dismiss the Rev. Mr. Long, "Nil Durpan," Indigo, and "Strike but Hear," now, henceforth, and for evermore. - Bombay Gazette.

Lahore, Oct. 1.—A rather exciting case was tried in the Council Court of this station a few days ago, the particulars of which I believe are as follows. It appears that an East Indian by the name of Smith obtained many articles of value from a native in the bazaar, by showing him a Bank receipt for the deposit of some 300 or 400 Rs. to his credit. The native without hesitation supplied Smith with whatever he wanted, until his purchases began to aggregate the supposed amount he had in deposit, when he began to be clamorous, and demanded payment. Smith put him off for some time, but when he found that the matter would very soon come to a climax, he gave the native the bank receipt, the full amount of which he had himself drawn some time previous, endorsing it to his favour. The native took the receipt and immediately sent it off to the bank. Smith got information of this and started off a servant to get the receipt back, but as ill-luck would have it the native had presented Court, which will become a divison of the as ill-luck would have it the native had presented ance in Raipootana and I High Court, there will be two barrister the receipt at the bank before the latter could already suffered severely.

judges. This plan obviously involves the reach him, and had been detained by the maemployment of fourteen judges; and as by nager, who at once saw that some foul play had nager, who at once saw that some foul play had been committed. Smith's servant, never suspecting, I suppose, the peril his master was in, went to the bank also, and declared himself and the nature of his errand. The manager at once had him seized, and lodged information with the authorities of the whole affair. Mr. Smith was thereupon called to appear in court and answer the charge brought against him, but he replied that he was unable through sickness to leave his house. As it was found, however, that he was not under medical treatment the district superintendent of police sent down to secure his person, so that he could not make his escape. Captain Boddam accordingly went down and stationed a guard of policemen round Mr. Smith's dwelling, and having satisfied himself that all was secure returned back. In due time the trial came on, the result of which proved that Mr. Smith was guilty of the charge, and the presiding officer accordingly sentenced him to three months' imprisonment with hard labour in the Lahore central jail. This punishment, though it appears to be somewhat lenient, will doubtless tend to deter others like Mr. Smith from practising their tricks upon the respectable portion of the community.—Delhi Gazette.

GRANTS OF LAND.—The Government have granted land to the native commissioned and non-commissioned officers in their respective villages, whose services have been dispensed with in consequence of the reduction of native forces in India.

SAVINGS BANK .- The Bengal Hurkaru hears that the proposition of the committee appointed to arrange for the abolition of the general treasury relative to the government of savings banks has been negatived by the Governor general in Council. In the financial resolution dated 2nd August last, his Excellency has observed that when the general treasury is abolished, the duties of the savings bank will not be transferred to the Bank of Bengal as has been proposed by the committee, but will for the present, remain a separate and detached office under the direct management and control of the accountant-general. The deposits of the Supreme Court, which were hitherto lodged in the treasury, will be made over to the Bank of Bengal, but before doing so, the permission of the judges of that court should be obtained. The counter-stamp branch of the treasury and the bill issue and bill acceptance offices will be transferred to the civil paymaster.

DELHI PRIZE MONEY .-- We are informed that an amount of valuable property has been discovered by the Delhi prize agent ouried in the house of the nephew of the Nawab of Joorah.

Cholera.—Telegraphic advices from all parts of India confirm the hope that the country will escape the general visitation of cholera which was so much dreaded. The disease seems to have travelled northward, from its first appearance in Rajpootana and Delhi; Kandahar having CAWNPORE, Oct. 2 .--Nothing very interesting in the shape of news. We are now pulling along, something in the style of men resting on their oars after a long pull against wind and tide, tired and exhausted, after the severe and sickly season just passed over. Cholera and fever have performed their work, and although the fatal cases amongst the Europeans have been few, yet severe indeed has been the visit of those scourges amongst the natives. This cannot, however, be wondered at, considering the filthy state of their houses and the streets, but the greatest cause of this continuous sickness is the large open sewer running through the city and part of the civil lines, poisoning the surrounding atmosphere, and carrying off its victims ad libitum. The water of our canal has, for some cause (probably the want of cash), been cut off. The beats are reposing on the bottom, and from the rotting wood and weeds, the air about this part is not the most pure, as you may believe. The bridge over the Ganges (broken by the recent storm) has not been repaired as yet; passengers, &c., are conveyed over by large flats; however, we may soon expect the bridge will be completed.—Delhi Gazette.

TESTIMONIAL TO COLONEL BAIRD SMITH.—The Calcutta Chamber of Commerce have presented an address and a testimonial to Colonel Baird Smith for his valuable reports on the causes of the recent famine and the depression of trade in the North-Western Provinces, and in acknowledgment of the service rendered by him to commerce. The testimonial consisted of a silver tea service of the value of about £200.

MEDALS .- The troops and officers that were present at Shorapoor on the occasion of the mutiny at that station in 1857 lately claimed Indian medals. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief did not consider them entitled to the medal, there having been in that case no opposition offered by the mutineers. Respecting Assisting - surgeon Broughton's claim on account of his services at Kallapoor, Sir H. Rose is also of opinion that none of the troops employed on that occasion should receive the medal, save the detachment of Southern Marhatta Horse under Lieutenant Kerr, which stormed the position taken up by the mutineers in the town. We are glad to see his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief even at the twelfth hour trimming and checking the vast claims and distribution of medals consequent upon the great events of the year 1857: thinking, as we always have, that only those who served in the midst of the storm should be decorated. and that officers and soldiers who only saw the subsiding ripples at the extreme edges of the convulsion have no right to expect a similar reward. After the Punjab and Burmah campaigns medals were issued to the troops by ground measurement and boundary rules, all regiments, and officers, and soldiers who happened to be within certain territorial limits on a given day at the conclusion of hostilities, or who had been within such limits on any day between the commencement and termination of such hostilities, being decorated for the war. Such medalling as this is calculated to bring our war decorations into contempt, and we are pleased to see his Excellency opposing it. We feel assured that in the event of any important war breaking out in the course of Sir Hugh Rose's tenure of supreme command in India, and medals being decreed for military services performed during its progress, there will be by no means such a promiscuous distribution of those decorations as has hitherto obtained .- Englishman.

Major T. R. Snow.—We hear that the Commander-in-Chief has appointed Major T. R. Snow, of the late 4th Bengal Light Cavalry, to the command of the 5th Bengal Cavalry—an excellent appointment, for Major Snow is a distinguished officer, and served throughout the Scinde and Sutlej campaigns, and was twice wounded, once very severely, and it was he also who raised the Lahore Light Horse.

Post-Office Accounts.—As a uniform system of accounts in all public offices appears to be necessary, the Director-general of post-offices intends to introduce the system of accounts recommended by the Budget Committee into all the provincial and district post-offices throughout India, and a classification of receipts and charges in the Mofussil post-offices as provided for by the budget rules.

Delhi, Sept. 25 .- The Nujjufgurh Jheel, that gigantic swamp about which so much has been written, said, and tried any time during the past twenty years, the drainage of which has defied the united ingenuity of I do not know how many Bengal engineers, has all at once resolved itself into a dry expanse of rich pasturage! Such is the report recently sent in from the neighbourhood, and it is corroborated, as I learn, by numerous applications from agriculturists to be allowed to cultivate it, and pay revenue accordingly. This is not surprising, if the swamp is really dry; the only surprising part is that it should so unaccountably work for itself what no human design has yet been able to work for it-viz., its own drainage. The Nujjufgurh Jheel has long been considered the cause of all the sickness from which the native troops in the old cantonments used formerly to suffer so severely, and it has been a source of ceaseless anxiety to the military authorities in consequence. Whether it was really the cause of disease (which some people doubt,) or not, it was thought advisable to drain it, and numerous attempts were made to effect that object, all in vain. During the resent famine it was considered necessary to protect some villages in the neighbourhood from inundation by running up embankments; whether these have anything to do with the phenomenon I do not take upon myself to say; I only know that what was considered impossible has come to pass, and the Government will now find the Nujjufgurh Jheel a fruitful source of profit, instead of being, as it was up to the year of the Rebellion, a great expense. - Delhi

CAPTAIN GAZEBROOK, of the ship Duc de Nala-koff, has been sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment in the House of Correction for the theft of a piece of timber of the value of fifteen rupees, the property of Messrs. Cohn, Feilman and Co., the consignees of the vessel.

HILL TRACTS OF ORISSA.—Jungle fever has broken out among the Khoond population; numbers have fallen victims to the disease. Nothing is heard of late regarding the Meriah sacrifices. I have most satisfactory reports from the interior as to the number of female children now reared. The measures adopted by Captain McNair, our agent, and his efforts for the suppression of female infanticide, have been attended with great success. The punishment lately awarded to certain Khoonds found guilty of infanticide has had a most beneficial effect on the whole population.

More Native Political Rights .- Our native friends are still actively asserting their "political rights" in the Mofussil. There has been another seizure of forged seals at Tumlook, and forty more of those productions have been added to the already numerous collection of articles of Indian vertu. Several documents of a similar nature have also been discovered, one of which contains a decision of the old Calcutta Provincial Court, a clear and undoubted forgery. In spite of this unsatisfactory state of things, the Government are still backward in bringing the offenders to justice; and the necessity for a regular system of detective inquiry into the matter is becoming daily more apparent. In the Bancoocase, this backwardness on the part of Government is said to have been particularly manifested. The magistrate was removed, and the Nazir left in charge of course gave his compatriot all the assistance in his power. It is generally believed in the district that several thousands of Rupees have been spent to prove the forger's innocence. This same man was tried by the Sudder for a similar offence some twenty years ago, and acquitted. Since then he has been asserting his "rights" with such activity that some lacs of beegahs of property have been alienated at nominal rents by means of the hundred and forty-six seals which his "education'

Bengal Military Fund.—The home management of the Bengal Military Fund having become vacant from the resignation of the London Secretaryship by Lieutenant-colonel J. A. Weller, late of the Bengal Engineers, Major W. S. Ferris, of the late 12th N. I., and now and for many years past in the Audit Office, is a candidate for the appointment, upon which, should he get it, he will retire from the service.

BANCOORAH, Sept. 21.—The remarkable case of forgery, in which Mahendro Narain Potronoveeish, of Tellishiare, in sub-division Gurbettah, is the defendant, was taken up by Mr. G. C. Fletcher, the session judge, on the 18th. The case was first conducted by Mr. F. J. R. Hewitt, the late magistrate of Gurbettah, and committed by Mr. Falconer, the present magistrate of that station. The case continued in the session continually for three days. Mr. W. S. Wells, the magistrate of Bancoorah, appeared for the prosecution. For the defence none appeared, except two mook-tears of the Mofussil Court. The prosecution was ably conducted by Mr. Wells, the magistrate. Thirty-five seals, of twenty-nine different personages, some in duplicate and some in triplicate, were actually found in the possession of the defendant. The order was passed yesterday afternoon. The Moulvie convicts the prisoner of tuzir, and the session judge convicts the prisoner of forgery proven against him. The case goes up to the Nizamut Adawlut for final order.—English-

ABANDONMENT OF BARRACKPORE. -- We ( Englishman) have never heard Barrackpore spoken of as more unhealthy than any other station within the delta of the Ganges; and have always thought that its sanitary reputation stood on a very fair elevation in the opinion of the military authorities. This being the case we are the more surprised to hear that, in these days of retrenchment and economy, the Government actually contemplates the abandonment of Barrackpore as a military station, and the establishment of a new one at Municampore, a few miles beyond the present cantonments. We understand that the Executive Engineer Officer at Barrackpore has been ordered to survey and report upon the Municampore site, with the above object in view; but we would observe that, should it be carried out, the loss of public money sunk at Barrackpore will be enormous, and the expenditure at Municampore will be very heavy, without any proportionate advantages that we can see, or that, we think, any one else can point out.

AN IMPORTANT CASE. - The Oudh Gazette contains the decision of the Civil Judge of Lucknow on an important case. Furzund Ali, one of the twelve talookdars recently received at the Government-house durbar, brought a suit against Mussumat Khuttan, the holder of a certificate of succession to the estates of the late Rajah Ruzak Buksh, to prove that she was not the legitimate daughter of the Rajah but the offspring of a slave called Beebun. Furzund Ali is and has long been in actual possession of the estates, and might have awaited an action from the other claimant to the property, but he has preferred to take the initiative. He had married the late Rajah's daughter with a view to inherit his possessions, but when this daughter died and her sister put in a claim to administer to the estate, he opposed it on the ground that both of them were the offspring of a slave woman and one Soobhan. He also obtained a deed of gift from the Rajah, as well as a firman from the then King of Oude constituting him, conjointly with his wife, heir to Rajah Ruzak's property. The court ruled that he had failed to show that Mussumat Khuttan was not the daughter of the Rajah, and the case was dismissed with all costs. There has been a deal of perjury on one side or other. The Rajah' daughter having gained the present case will be encouraged to press her claims to the whole property; but Furzund says that, as the Governorgeneral's sunnud of November, 1859, confirms him in common with other Talookdars in the possession of his estates and rights, he will listen to no other decision than that of the same high authority.—Friend of India.

NEPAULESE ARMY. -Vacancies in the lower ranks of officers are filled up by such sepoys as are recommended by the colonel of the regiment; and the sons of respectable people are appointed to the upper ranks. The legitimate sons of the ministers are colonels from their very birth, and are promoted to generals at their marriage, which takes place, according to Hindoo custom. when they are about six years of age! The words of command in the drill are in English, and it is amusing to hear the officers shouting out, "Hot-a-tot fas," "Phorum phore dape!" meaning "right about face" and "form four deep." If the sepoys were drilled in their own tongue they would know more than they do now. Their dress on parade ground is anything but uniform, and their movements very independent; and it is not uncommon to see a dozen or two fall out of the ranks and squat themselves down in the front after a very free and easy fashion.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA ON THE " NIL DAR PAN."—We (Friend of India) should not recur to the subject of the "Nil Darpan" but for an article in the Calcutta Christian Intelligencer reviewing the case, known to be from the pen of the Bishop. The article admits that the translation and franking of the play must have seriously wounded the feelings of many deserving men, and cannot find fault with the planters for seeking reparation. It considers the chief characteristic of the drama to be not filthiness, but extraordinary dulness; it deprecates the allusion to the planters' wives, on the ground that in all controversial writing, anything like an attack on women should be rigidly avoided. Constrained to admit that the Indian law makes the production dibellous, the writer does not think it more so than Dickens' pictures of Squeers, Chancery, workhouses, and public offices. On the personal question of the two Calcutta newspapers, the charge of taking bribes was libellous, but the smallness of the sum named reduced the accusation to an absurdity, and "considering the tone in which the Calcutta newspapers have been in the habit of reviling their opponents, the notion of one of them being the prosecutor, rather than the defendant, in an action for libel, is a melancholy instance of the opposition which may sometimes be observed in this world between legal and moral justice.' As to Mr. Long the punishment was entirely unsuitable to his "high character and unquestionably good intentions." The article concludes with an exhortation to unity.

SMALL CAUSE COURTS .- In the Small Cause Courts of Lahore, Umritsur, and Delhi, during the month of July, five hundred and seventy-seven cases were decided, each being spread over from two to three days. The percentage of costs varied from Rs. 3-11-10 in Umritsur, to Rs. 10-4-6 in Lahore. The Judicial Commissioner thinks it too early to form any opinion on the working of

THE REV. J. Rofe has been appointed to officiate as Domestic Chaplain to the Bishop of Calcutta.

Famine Fund.—The Lahore Chronicle states that the Punjab Famine Committee will close their accounts with a balance of £35,000, or, if the cultivators refund the loans advanced to them, of £40,000. Mr. Cooper, the energetic Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, has applied for a grant of £8,000 from this sum for an hospital and an asylum, and the committee are favourable if the Lieutenant-governor agrees. This might be done not only in Delhi, but in all the large native cities, but a reference to the London committee will be first necessary, we should imagine. Sufferers, whether native or European, by the recent inundations, should be assisted, and the great orphanages established by the missionaries should be permanently endowed as reformatories, to which, instead of to gaol, all criminals under sixteen years of age should be sent.

THE KING OF BURMAH has made another step towards civilisation by establishing a mint and issuing a regular coinage in place of the "dumps" of silver which used to be current. The coin is of silver, weighing about 252 grains troy. It has on the obverse a peacock, the device of the Royal Family of Burmah, and on the reverse the date of the present king's accession to the throne. As the measure is an experiment, the number of coins issued is small.

ASSISTANT SURGEON D. C. MCALLUM, of the Madras establishment, has been appointed durbar surgeon at Hyderabad, in succession to his late father, who for many years was medical attendant to the minister of the Nizam's uncle, the Nawab Shums-ool Oomrah Bahadoor, and was deservedly held by them in the highest estimation.

HYDERABAD, Sept. 11.-The presents intended for the Nizam, his minister, Shums-ool Oomrah, the three leading chiefs of the Arabs, the cutwal of the city, and Rajasoor Roy, a person who is always selected for military service at the Residency, when tumult is apprehended, have arrived. These men have been appropriately selected, none more so, always excepting Salar Jung, the minister, than the Arab chiefs. Had they in the slightest degree encouraged the disposition of the people to rebel, a general rising would have been inevitable. They not only did not do this, but suppressed by active service the incipient attempt of a party in the Mecca Mosque to set up an insurrection, and were otherwise useful to the minister. As I do not desire to be mistaken in my commendations of these persons, I would say that it was not from any love of the English that the Arab chiefs aided to preserve order, but from their desire that order should prevail in the present system of the Nizam's affairs, than which nothing can be more advantageous to their interests. The presents have arrived, very much damaged by the rains, but a fatality seems to wait upon their presentation. The second son of the Nizam, his first being dead, died three days ago, and the presentation of the khilluts will, according to their custom, be retarded till the ceremonials of the fortieth day called chelum, are over. The Nizam has a third son, may this blessing be preserved to him, and may his Highness have the grace to have him educated as befits his station. The English Government should press this upon his Highness's attention, but if it be to give him an European education, the whole bigotry of the country, the fearful Moulvies, and the sanctimonious fuqueers, will be opposed to it. Hyderahad is very backward, much behind the rest of India -it is far behind Hindoostan cer tainly. A most fearful murder, characteristic of the utmost atrocity, of the facility with which accomplices are procured, of entire disregard of the presence of witnesses, almost always expected to favour the murderer, and of the readiness with which protection may be found for him, has been committed here recently. The principal murderer, with his accomplices, two Turks, have been apprehended -universal detestation waits upon the principal at present, but I shall be surprised if reaction do not follow in a short time: most assuredly if he be executed. The murder was perpetrated on a Hindoo (sahookor): the murderer is a Mussulman, the son of a deceased Moulvie, who lately officiated as the Kazee of Hyderabad, and who has but recently returned from a pilgrimage in Mecca. It will be found, what is now not known, that he was provoked beyond endurance, and they will give him nearly as cordial a sympathy as the detestation they now bestow upon him.—English-

TEAK FORESTS. - The Bombay Gazette notices Capt. Pearson's report on the Forest Tracts of the Saugor and Nerbudda Territories. There is a scarcity of full-sized teak in most places. In Saugor there is not much valuable timber. There are fine forests North East and South East of the city of Jubbulpore. Round Narainpore most of the trees have been cut down by charcoal burners, and in Mundlah along the Nerbudda the forests have suffered from the depredations of timber dealers. Captain Pearson says of the forests generally in these territories, that their resources are unlimited, but their present condition is bad. It is proposed to close the teak forests for a few years as a conservative measure, reserving the full-sized trees and the crooked and damaged trees for immediate use.

PEGU.—During the first quarter of 1861-62 to the end of July last, the value of the sea borne trade of Pegu was Rs. 56,09,484, and of the land rade Rs. 25,86,872, or Rs. 81,96,357.

GOVERNMENT-HOUSE FESTIVITIES .- His Excellency the Governor, Sir G. R. Clark, gave a grand ball on Tuesday evening, the 4th October, at Government-house, Dapoorie. Every requisite preparation had been made for the accommoda-tion of a large party. Upwards of five hundred invitations bad been issued, and there could not have been fewer than four hundred persons present. The rooms were crowded; many of the guests had to put up with the extra accommodation afforded by the verandahs for want of space inside. Lady Mansfield and the Commander-in-Chief, Sir W. Mansfield, K.C.B., were present, and a very large assemblage of general and other officers, the greater part of whom were accompanied by their ladies. The scene was brilliant in the extreme, the splendour of the dresses of the fair sex blending with the rich uniform of the officers; the whole enhanced by the glare of a myriad lights, presented a most dazzling effect. H. E. the Governor wore, for the first time we believe in public, the star and insignia of the new Order of Knighthood for British India. His Excellency's band, with the band of the Bombay

The festivities were prolonged to a very late hour, and there must have been many of the guests on their way home when the morning was ushered in by the booming of the station gun.-Bombay

ARTILLERY MOVEMENTS .- N. 7 Battery 13th Brigade Royal Artillery is ordered to Bengal, and the detachment of H.M.'s 56th Regiment is expected to be ordered away to join the head quarters of their regt. in Bombay, now under orders to proceed to Deesa to relieve H.M.'s 83rd Regt., the latter corps coming to the Presi-These changes will take place in a few dency. days. A detachment, consisting of about 30 non-commissioned officers and gunners, are under orders to proceed to Kurrachee, to join the 2nd company 3rd battalion. This company has been up to Hyderabad in Scinde at practice with the 2nd foot horse artillery, and is expected back to pyrrachee in a short time. The immediate formation of the new brigades of artillery. consequent on the carrying out of the amalgama tion scheme, are decided upon, the command ing officers and staff selected, and the other necessary details determined on, particulars of which will be published in general orders as soon as confirmed by competent authority.

WRONG SIGNALS .- Mr. Ball, a station-master on the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway line, was sentenced in the beginning of October, by the Resident at Baroda, to one year's imprisonment, and to pay a fine of fifty rupees for having exhibited wrong signals, and thereby endangered the lives of passengers, &c.

DEATH OF MR. P. W. BLAKE, C.E .-Bombay Guzette announces the death, on Saturday, 5th October, of Mr. Philip William Blake, civil engineer on the staff of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. Mr. Blake had been for some time stationed on a portion of the line a short distance beyond Asseerghur. Two or three months since he came to Bombay to take a sea trip for the benefit of his health. He returned recently much improved, and a few days ago started for up-country to resume his duties, and had got as far as Munmar, where he died. From what transpired at the inquest it appears that Mr. Blake having finished a ride on horseback in the morning, and having got under cover, took a glass of water, whereupon he hung down his head, and died in an instant. Mr. Blake was a well-educated young man, and we believe was well up in his profession. He was much esteemed, and will be much regretted by all who knew him.

HEALTHINESS OF THE BOMBAY ARMY .lecture on Military Hygiene, before the Poona United Service Institution, Dr. Fraser stated that the sepoy army of Bombay is the healthiest in the world and the only military force where the mortality is not greater than that of the popula-tion from which it is drawn. This is ascribed to the separate huts in which the men live. There can be no doubt that "lines" of cottages, though at first more expensive, would ultimately prove much cheaper for European troops in India than large barracks.

Indian Navy .- We (Bombay Gazette) have been given to understand on very good authority that the changes in the Indian navy so long talked of will very shortly be carried into effect. The axe has been already laid at the root of the tree. The Dockvard Establishment has been reduced one third. The Commander-in Chief has received orders through the Bombay Government from Bengal to take immediate measures for the reduction of the navy to four ships. The work hitherto performed by the Indian navy ships will be done by vessels of the Royal navy. The four ships which are to be kept on will be engaged in transport service. The Commander in-Chief ship is, of course, to be done away. Commodore Wellesley is to be appointed Secretary of Marine at Calcutta in place of Captain Rennie, who has secured the post of Superintendent of Transports in England. The whole service are, of course, most anxious to learn the details of the changes, as they will materially affect their future interests. The pensions re-Artillery from Kirkee, were in attendance, and accommended by the Indian Government have drawn.

quitted themselves in their usual excellent style. | been objected to by the Secretary of State for India, on the ground of their being too liberal. Lord Canning has, we hear, replied that the offi-cers of the Indian Navy deserve them, and that it would not be just to dispense with their services without a sufficient compensation. The younger hands may have an opportunity of beginning another profession; but the older officers will find it a very difficult matter, not merely to take to a different line, but also to obtain employment equally lucrative, and giving them the same position in society. It is a hard case, we are of opinion, that men who came out to India under a covenant, and have spent their talents and energies during the best portion of their lives in the service of the State, should suddenly be turned adrift, and have all their brilliant prospects blighted and destroyed. The least that justice demands is that they should receive remuneration and compensation in some degree equivalent to what they would have been entitled to had the service continued in existence. Among other reductions we learn that the registry of seamen for the Indian navy has been suspended; the Observatory is to be transferred to the Civil Department, and the pilots are again to be brought into connection with the dockvard.

H.M.'s 6TH INNISKILLING DRAGOONS, now stationed at Ahmednuggur, will shortly be ordered to Mhow, and H.M.'s 3rd Dragoon Guards, now at Mhow, will be stationed at Ahmednuggur.

THE Monsoon.—The total fall of rain at Bombay up to Saturday evening, Oct. 5th, was 99 inches and 6 cents in the Fort, 106 inches and 4 cents. at Bycullah, and 74 inches and 70 cents. at Colaba.

CAPTAIN ATTOUN, of the Bombay Artillery, whose passage to Europe was engaged in the steamer of the 12th October, has been appointed by Government to make a geological survey of the Satpoora range of hills.

Goa has been in a state of excitement. districts into which it is divided have the privilege of electing representatives to the Portuguese Cortes, and the Governor-general is said to have forced the electors of Bardez at the point of the bayonet to vote for one Capt. Mello Mendoza. The local press is indignant; the editor of the Phanix, the journal of the district, and several of the most respectable inhabitants have fled under the threat of criminal process, and the press is to be suppressed. If we may judge from the conduct of the Governor-general of Goa, and the Governor of Mozambique, the Portuguese colonial authorities assert almost a complete independence of Lisbon.

RETENTION OF APPOINTMENTS.—The Hon. the Governor in Council has resolved that no officer, confirmed in an appointment in which he may have been acting, or who may have been promoted to an office of higher emoluments than the one he had previously held, shall be allowed to retain his appointment, if proceeding to England on private leave within the period of a year from the date of his confirmation or promotion. Any case in which the Government may consider that there are just grounds for a relaxation of the above rule will be treated exceptionally.

CAPTAIN McCulloch, of the late 31st Regiment N. I., has been appointed to act as Inspector General of Prisons during the absence of Dr. Ogilvie, at present on sick leave to Egypt.

BOMBAY ARTHLERY .- Upon the retirement of Lieut .- colonel Lightfoot, of the Bombay Artillery, which it is understood will take place immediately, and upon the consequent promotion of Captain Gaye to lieut.-colonel, the following changes are to take place in the regiment of Artillery :-- Captain Wallace, Brigade-major, to command 4th Troop Horse Artillery at Kirkee; Captain Harris to be brigade-major of Artillery.

MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER .- The choice of the very large meeting of Justices held to elect a Municipal Commissioner fell upon Major Curtis, & deservedly popular member of society. The final voting was for Major Curtis, forty-nine; for Mr. Connon, forty-five. The other candidates, when it was seen that they had no chance, were with-

EXTERNAL COMMERCE OF BOMBAY.—The value of the imports from all foreign and Indian ports beyond the Presidency of Bombay, for the year 1860-61, was Rs. 18,62,63,013. This is the highest figure ever yet attained, excepting only the immediately preceding year. Our exports for the same period are valued at Rs. 19,48,80,399, one-third of which is opium. This is the highest figure ever yet attained, without exception.

FAMINE FUND.—The total sum subscribed for the North-West Relief Fund amounts nearly to Rs. 8,80,000, of which upwards of Rs. 6,62,000 were subscribed in England, and the remainder in the Bombay Presidency, &c. The sum of Rs. 6,70,000 has been remitted to the North-West Provinces, and the balance, amounting to nearly Rs. 2,10,000, is still in the Bank of Bombay.

Special Rewards.—With reference to the Government notifications of the 2nd September, 1857, and 12th October, 1860, and in accordance with instructions from her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for India, desiring that, with the view of encouraging young civilians to qualify themselves for employment in other divisions of the Presidency than that to which they may at first be appointed, rules should be passed and promulgated for the grant of special rewards, his Excellency the Governor in Council is pleased to notify, that to every junior civil servant who, within eighteen months from the date of his initiatory examination shall in addition to the two languages prescribed to him for study acquire a knowledge of any Oriental language in use within this Presidency, a reward of Rupees 1,000 will be granted.

COLONEL ROBERTSON, C.B., was to leave Bombay for Aden by the end of October, to take up the acting appointment of Political Resident, to which he has just been nominated. It is also stated that Colonel Coghlan is about to retire from the Service, in which case Colonel Robertson will be confirmed in that appointment.

ADEN .- The New Church at the "Point" at Aden is to be commenced at once; it will cost Rs. 22,000, Government giving half of that sum towards the erection.

MR. HOWARD .- A rumour has lately been current in Bombay and Poona, that Mr. Howard, the Director of Public Instruction, is likely to be appointed a Judge of the Amalgamated Sudder and Supreme Courts. Considering the experience of Mofussil habits and customs which this gentleman has obtained during a five years' tenure of his present office, and while Legal Remembrancer to the Bombay Government, added to the respect in which he is held by all classes of the community, we may safely prophesy that the appointment is one which is likely to give general satisfaction.—Deccan Herald.

Dr. Buist.—The friends of the late Dr. Buist are subscribing for the erection of a tombstone over his remains in the Scotch Kirkyard of Calcutta. The sum required is not large. Dr. E. T. Downes, of the Mint, will receive subscriptions, of which we shall publish a list. We trust the India office will yet be induced to recognise Dr. Buist's services to science and literature by giving a pension to his widow and family. If it rested with the Indian Government, the pension would probably be given at once.—Friend of India.

COMMISSARIAT CHANGES .- On the retirement of Colonel Davidson, in December, Colonel Birdwood, who is shortly expected from England, will be appointed Commissary-general. Colonel Pope, Deputy Commissary-general, also retires, we believe, in December next.

Mr. Wordsworth, who has been lately sent out by Sir Charles Wood as principal of the central school, Elphinstone Institution, has been appointed, temporarily, an assistant to Mr. H. Coke, A.M., educational inspector, central division. Mr. Wordsworth is a grandson of the great poet, and a first-class Oxford man.

CAPTAIN EDEN, H.M.'s 56th regiment, is to be appointed brigade-major of the Queen's troops, Bombay, vice Captain Cleaver, proceeding to England on sick certificate. It is also in contempla-tion to change the designation of this appoint-ment from "brigade-major" to "deputy-assistantadjutant-general."

THE BANK OF BOMBAY has raised its rates of | discount 2 per cent.; from 3 to 5 on Government Paper, for periods above one month, and 3 per cent. on loans for one month.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Oct. 11).—In imports we have little change to report since the date of our last. Piece Goods since then have changed hands to a large amount, chiefly at the rates current during last fortnight. Holders are now selling more freely, and we fear, should this continue, present rates will hardly be maintained. Twist is quiet for the present, and with the exception of No. 30's. Water Twist, previous rates are barely supported. Metals generally are also quiet. British Bar Iron is lower and dull of sale in consequence of dealers having ceased their speculative purchases in this article. Brazier Copper has declined a little in value, owing to a forced sale of a large quantity at Rs. 59 per cwt., which has been held for nearly two years.

Exports (Bombay, Oct. 11).—Cotton has been contracted for to the extent of about 3,850 candies. Dharwar Sawgianed for sale and the candy in consequence of the great demand for this description in Liverpool at very high rates. Of Seeds there are no stocks on the spot. Linseed and Rape are both in demand, and contracts have taken place at full rates.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, Sept. 30. —We write on the day which closes the Ceylon export year. In our last we calculated and wrote on the assumption that the Cornwallis as well as the Hotspur would have sailed before this date. But the Cornwallis has just delayed her departure sufficiently to render her the first ship of next season instead of the last of this. Had she sailed, our estimate of 600,000 cwts. as the total out-turn of the coffee season 1860-61 would have been exceeded by just 1,000 cwts., her cargo including 8,103 cwts. plantation coffee and 919 cwts. native. As matters stand, it will be observed, that our total export of coffee is 593,966 cwts. (say 594,000 cwts.) against 631,000 cwts. last season; 584,000 cwts. in 1858-59; and 552,000 cwts. in 1857-58. Had the Cornwallis sailed the export of plantation coffee would have been less than 5,000 cwts. below the great figure (471,000 cwts.) of last season. In the return we have 458,000 cwts. of plantation in this season against 471,000 cwts.; 386,000 cwts.; and 352,000 cwts. for each of the last three seasons. The great deficiency is in native, which has gone down from 197,000 cwts. in 1858-59 to 135,000 cwts. in the present season. The native crop has not been so small since 1855-56. Although the deficiency in this sort is real, yet let it be always remembered that the figures regarding both kinds must be taken with the qualification that a good portion of native is prepared and exported as plantation. The proportion of indifferent plantation exported as native is not believed to be at all so great.

Having thus disposed of our great staple, we now notice briefly our other leading exports.

And first as to cocoanut oil. The export of this article is considerably in excess of that for the previous three seasons, although the steadly increasing local demand has rendered the raw material, copperah, so expensive, that the profits of the trade cannot be large. At twelve and a-half gallons to the cwt. our export of oil this season has reached 1,400,000 gallons, representing nearly 60,000,000 of nuts—the annual yield, if one of our correspondents is correct, of 3,000,000 of trees. Where does all the cinnamon go to? Our average export is about 750,000 lbs., and Java produces about 200,000 lbs. more. Britain, according to Mr. Levi, consumes only 40,000 lbs. of cinnamon annually. We suppose the larger portion is used in Roman Catholic countries and in religious ceremonies. We do not know if the faith of the South American miners in its prophylactic qualities remains as strong as ever. This article, cultivated economically as it now is, yields, we believe, a moderate profit. We do not know that we can say much more for coir. Europeans, by means of machinery and chemical agents, turn out beautiful samples; but the cost, when converted into yarn, can leave but little profit. Amongst the natives the women and children attend to the manufacture at odd hours, and, as with the ginning of cotton in India, the problem to solve is, the construction of a machine so cheap, portable, and effective, that the natives can and will use it. There is a great fall in plumbago, when compared with last year; still the figure is far in excess of those for the two seasons before last. Largely used as this substance is in the operations connected with the melting and coining of the precious metals, and as a lubricator of machinery, we can probably calculate on a steady demand for our only mineral of consequence. The trade in deer horns seems absolutely stationary; that in ebony keeps up pretty well. As to arrack, the trade has not ceased, as might be supposed, but almost the whole of the arrack exported from Ceylon goes to Madras, and much of it in small vessels.

Since our last the Legislature has been actively at work, sitting twice a week, in order to dispose, in good time, of the immense amount of business before it. The amended Thoroughfares Bill has been very fully and very earnestly discussed, and we trust the result will be to induce the intelligent members of the community to take a closer interest in the disposal of the direct tax imposed for the upkeep of roads. Those interested in the new and promising district of Happotella, will be glad to learn that a sum of £12,000 is to be placed on the Estimates for 1862, on account of the road from Palmadulla to Ballangodde. When the road from Ratnapoora to Ballangodde is fully open, there can be no doubt it will be continued until Badulla and Ratnapoora are connected by a good carriage-road.

As to the railway, we may say that the Governor, in announcing that the company had been paid off, expressed his confident hope that a contractor would still offer to complete the work within the limit fixed by the colony; the more especially in view of Mr. Doyne's testimony following on the reports of Messrs. Molesworth and Smart. The latter gentleman, we observe, has received £500 for his report.

A volunteer meeting has been held at Colombo, and a petition for the enrolment of the Ceylon artillery corps is in course of signature. - Colombo Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

SARAWAK .- By the steamer Rainbow, we (Singapore Free Press) have accounts from Sarawak to the 4th of September. Sir James Brooke had returned from Brunai, where he had met with a most cordial reception. The Sultan and his ministers have made over to Sarawak the government of the various districts between Banjong Kadurong, including Bintulu, and those formerly placed under the authority of Sir James Brooke. This will secure the peace of the coast and materially advance the trade of Sarawak as well as of these outlying districts. The interests of the Sultan and his ministers will also be promoted by this measure, as they will be secured a certain and liberal revenue, instead of being obliged, as heretofore, to enforce a fluctuating tribute by violent measures from a disorderly and often hostile population. The trade of Sarawak is brisk, and the affairs of that province look more prosperous and promising than they have ever been before. Sir James Brooke returns to England by the first mail in October, having so far completely accomplished the objects which brought him again to this part of the world.

Court Martial.

LIEUT. THOMAS NICHOLLS WALKER, OF LATE 2nd BENGAL EUROPEAN FUSILIER

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, Sept. 28 .- At a General Court Martial assembled at Meerut on July 3, Licut. T. N. Walker, of the late 2nd Bengal Eur. Fus., doing duty with the 104th Regt. Bengal Fus., was arraigned on the following charge, viz.:-

Charge.-For conduct highly unbecoming the character of an officer, a gentleman, and to prejudice of good order and military discipline, ia having, at Roorkee, on the 4th May, assaulted, and violently and repeatedly struck with a stick or cane, Ensign Alexander Douglas, of her Majesty's Indian Forces, doing duty with the 104th Bengal Fus.

Finding .- Guilty.

A. HUYSHE, Col., Prosident. Meerut, July 4, 1861.

RECOMMENDATION .- The Court begs earnestly and strenuously to recommend the prisoner to the fa-yourable consideration of H.E. the C. in C. on the First.—That Lieut. Walker was led into committing the crime of which he has been found guilty, partly from a desire to vindicate the good name and appearance of the corps to which he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he bear to what he was to what he bear to what he was to what h name and appearance of the corps to which he belongs, and partly from the aggravating and irritating manner of Lieut. Douglas, jun.

Second.—That Lieut. Walker was wounded at Delhi, where he rendered good services, and it has been proved has suffered severely from sunstrokes (five or six in number), which, having seriously affected his head, rendered him extremely irritable, and thus more likely to harshly resent what he understood to have been an insult offered to his regiment. giment.

-The Court believes in the prisoner's expression of penitence, and on these grounds also begs to recommend him very strongly to the merci-ful consideration of H.E. the C. in C.

Revised Sentence.—The Court now sentences the prisoner to be severely reprimanded; and, further, suspended from rank, pay, and allowances for a period of six calendar months.

A. HUYSHE Col. President erut, Aug. 20, 1861.

The sentence is approved and confirmed, with the exception of the reprimand, which the Court have not the power to award in conjunction with suspension.

HUGH ROSE, Gen., C. in C. in India. Calcutta, Sept. 5, 1861.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C.

The proceedings of this court martial render it ne-seary that the C. in C. should remark on a mistake

The proceedings of the C. should remark on a mistance coessary that the C. in C. should remark on a mistance into which the Court have fallen.

It is to be presumed that the Court, having sentenced the prisoner to be cashiered, the severest sentence in their power, did not wish that he should escape without some punishment. The step from cashiering, which is entire ruin to an officer, to a free pardon for so grave an offence, involves an anomaly which the C. in C. conceives the Court did not contemplate.

H.E. believes that the Court intended, taking into H.E. believes that the Court intended, taking into full consideration, on the one hand, the necessity of maintaining the discipline and feeling of honour of the army, and on the other, the prisoner's good services and the extenuating circumstances of his case, to award punishment which would vindicate the one and do justice to the other.

The sentence of the Court ought to have been framed in this sense; for the Court should have borne in mind that they had the power to give a sentence short of cashiering, in fact the description of punishment which they have now given, while the C. in C. can only inflict a sentence of cashiering or unconditional cardian.

C. in C. can only inflict a sentence of cashiering or unconditional pardon.

The C. in C. cannot conclude his observations on this General Court Martial without recording his entire disapprobation of the want of good feeling, which ought to distinguish the society of brother officers, evidenced by Lieut. Douglas on this unfortunate occasion; he must have been perfectly aware that the natural warmth of temper of Lieut. Walker had been aggravated by repeated sunstrokes con-tracted in the field, and he had already had differen-

Lieut. Douglas does not belong to the 104th Bengal Fusiliers, but is merely attached to it. Lieut. Walker is an officer of this gallant regiment, and identified with it by honourable service in the field. Lieut. Douglas should therefore, for every reason, have studiously avoided findulging in observations disparaging to the regiment.

Young, however, as Lieut. Douglas is, his disposition to say offensive things to his brother officers appears so inveterate in him, that his commanding officer had had occasion to reprimand him for offensive conduct to another officer, before his last dispute with Lieut. Walker; and so little effect does this lamentable scene appear to have produced on Lieut.

with Lieut. Walker; and so little effect does this la-mentable scene appear to have produced on Lieut. Douglas, that after it his commanding officer was again compelled to reprimand him for having used improper language to a brother officer. Under these circumstances, the C. in C. is of opin-ion that Lieut. Douglas should no longer continue to serve with her Majesty's 104th Bengal Fusiliers, where, instead of being an element of union, he is a source of discord.

Lieut. Douglas will therefore proceed without delay and report himself to the general officer com-manding the Meerut division, who will receive instruction as to his future destination.

CHANGING CORPS.

Poona, Oct. 9.—It has come to the notice of the C. in C. that the adjt. gen. of the army receives very frequent applications from the young officers on the general list to change from one corps to another without sufficient cause.

H.E. remarks that such changes are alike detri-mental to the service and to the interests of young officers, who have more to learn with their regiments when they march than when they remain in quarters.

A young lieutenant or ensign who has been only long enough with a regiment to learn the names of his men and the concerns of his company, is but just beginning to be of use; on his going to another re-giment he ceases to be of use till a like knowledge has been obtained.

Under these circumstances, the C. in C. will decline to entertain such applications except when urgent cause may be shown by commanding officers on account of the subalterns concerned.

THE SCHOOL OF MUSKETRY.

The C. in C. is pleased to publish the names of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates now at the school of musketry who have qualified as specified opposite their names; and who, together with those who have failed to qualify as instructors, will join their respective regiments as follows:—

Those belonging to corps on the spot, at once; those of regiments at Bombay and Ahmednuggur, under the orders of the maj. gen. comdg. Poona div. of the army; and the remainder, or the general depot, until an opportunity offers for their proceed-

COTTON CULTIVATION IN THE DOAB.

As soon as it appeared certain that the mill-owners of Lancashire must look elsewhere than to North America for the supply of their raw material, the Indian Government resolved to appoint a Special Commissioner to inquire into the cotton-producing capabilities of the vast territories subject to its rule and governance. It was more easy, however, to see the propriety of such an appointment than to find a proper person to fill it. In the first place, in order to inspire the mercantile community with confidence in the Report, it was necessary to select some one who possessed a practical knowledge of the subject he was chosen to investigate. It was also expedient that he should not be in any way connected with the Government, except while engaged on this special duty. Then it was evident that an intimate acquaintance with the native character and the vernacular tongue would be required, if any sort of reliable information was to be drawn from the people themselves. Quickness and accuracy of observation, the faculty for collecting and analysing facts, and of sifting evidence, promptitude of action and considerable powers of bodily endurance, were also certain to be called into play. Fortunately the very man wanted was at hand, and the Government at once secured his services. This was Mr. Paterson Saunders, senior, a gentleman of the most varied experiences, and in every way qualified for the efficient discharge of any duties that might be confided to him. During the mutiny his gallantry was conspicuous, even at a time when heroism seemed the common attribute of every Englishman; and so distinguished was the part he took in making head against the rebels in the district between Agra and Allyghur, that he has since received a grant of land from the Government, and, above all, has been honoured with the thanks of his Sovereign, conveyed through the Secretary of State for India. Lord Canning was certainly fortunate in alighting upon this gentleman as his Special Commissioner to examine into the cultivation of cotton in India.

Mr. Saunders' first Report is now before us, and is confined to the country lying between the Jumna and the Ganges, and commonly called the Doab. This area contains nearly 26,000 square miles, or about 16,576,640 acres, of which one-fourth is barren or waste land. The population of this district is estimated to exceed nine millions, or rather more than 350 persons to the mile—a greater average than is found to exist even in China. The soil is described as light and porous, and well adapted to the growth of the cotton-plant with its long tap-root. The country, however, is subject to intermittent droughts, necessitating a regular system of irrigation. In this respect there need be no difficulty if the canals were properly managed, which at present is far from being the case. Constant complaints are made of the conduct of the native subordinates, who will do nothing without a bribe. To such a degree is this practice carried, that " the chowkeeders, whose pay is four rupees a month, make thirty to forty. If they are not propitiated by bribes, or supplies of food for themselves and their cattle, they withhold the supply of water, or they bring charges against the zemindars of damage to canal property, and report a larger area irrigated than has been irrigated." It is admitted that Colonel Turnbull, the Superintendant-general, is ever ready to afford redress, so far as it lies in his power, but the younger officers are apt to turn a deaf ear to complainants. Some confusion, too, arises from the different rates per beegah paid for grain, and for cotton, sugar, or indigo. It would surely be more equitable to have a fixed rate per beegah and leave it optional with the cultivator to sow corn or any other seed. Mr. Saunders, indeed, proposes that a certain sum should be levied annually from every village adjacent to the canals, thus entitling the inhabitants to use the water for whatever purpose they please. We confess, however, to being somewhat shocked by the arguments he adduces in support of his suggestion. The zemindars, he says, might not be disposed to agree to such an arrangement, but they are "so wedded to their properties that they bear the severest taxation rather than reject a Government assessment which involves a temporary deprivation of their zemindarees." In other words, they may be treated in an arbitrary manner because they dare not resent it! Again, Mr. Saunders is of opinion that the Government would not be obliged to fulfil its part of the agreement if it proved to be inconvenient to do so. The Government would not be under any obligation to give a constant supply of water, but only "to endeavour to keep a full supply of water in the canals"! The zemindars, however, must pay whether they received the water or not. No British Government, we trust, will ever be guilty either of such oppression, or of such barefaced dishonesty.

Only forty years ago there was a considerable trade in cotton in the North-West Provinces, and at Futtehghur, Calpee, and Mirzapore there were regular European establishments for cleaning, screwing, and packing cotton previous to its exportation to England and China. This trade, however, gradually died away, being unable to compete with the slave-grown cotton of the United States, and in 1826 ships laden with Indian cotton were sent back to China because there was no demand for it in this country. Since then the trade has fallen into the hands of native merchants, who purchase merely for home consumption, with the exception of a comparatively small quantity annually exported to China. Immediately after the mutiny prices naturally went up for a short time, which led to a glut on the local markets. The consequence is, that at this moment there are upwards of 50,000 bales at Mirzapore and Ghazeepore, for which no purchasers appear. It is not surprising, then, that the natives should be puzzled to account for the outcry made in agent has yet come to relieve them of their superfluities. But if any vital trade in cotton is to be established, it must be through English superintendence and capital. Europeans must go out to India with money in their hands and buy the raw produce direct from the cultivators-to whom, moreover, they must be prepared to make advances, while their crops are yet growing. There is no prospect of success for a European who should seek to grow the cotton for himself. "Every man, woman, and child in the country would steal it, and as the picking of cotton occupies nearly two months, the European growers would not house one-third of their crop." This objection, however, applies chiefly to the densely populated districts, for on the Chittagong Hills in Assam, or the waste lands of Oude, there would be little lost by plunder.

It does not appear that any ill-feeling exists in the Doab between the European settlers and the natives, or between the former and the official authorities. On the contrary, all these are represented as living together on the best possible terms. At the same time, both European and native merchants demand the enactment of a law to punish criminally fraudulent breaches of contract, and it is understood that Sir Charles Wood has of late modified his views on this subject, and to a great extent withdrawn his opposition.

With regard to the redemption of the Landtax, Mr. Saunders is clearly of opinion that very few natives would avail themselves of the privilege. And if they did redeem the annual tax by a fixed payment, it does not follow that they would consequently grow any more cotton. If that crop is likely to pay it will be cultivated, but without reference to the Land-tax. But it is an undoubted fact that the natives do not sufficiently believe in the permanence of our sway to make a purchase that would certainly be set aside by our successors.

"Four years have scarcely clapsed," writes our Special Commissioner, "since they saw our power hanging by a thread. At one period of 1857 there was scarcely a native in the country that did not consider our raj, or rule, terminated. Even now, rumours and prophecies of our expulsion or extinction are constantly floating through the land, and, absurd as they are known to be by us, they are not looked upon as improbable by the people of this country. I have a very strong conviction that such a measure would be a failure, and not only a failure, but would lead to all kinds of suspicions regarding our real object, and unsettle the minds of the people, sufficiently unsettled already by Income-tax, paper-currency, &c.

The present system of assessing the lands afresh every thirty years is condemned by Mr. Saunders as both unjust and impolitic, and he strongly recommends a permanent settlement, such as that established by Lord Cornwallis in Bengal. On this point we differ from him entirely. The assessment may be, and is, excessively high, and too much power may be left to the collector, on whose temper or discretion it depends whether the scale shall incline in favour of the Government or of the people. Some amendment might well be introduced in this respect, and zemindars should undoubtedly be encouraged to improve their estates; but a low rate of land-tax would probably suffice for that purpose.

the mile—a greater average than is found to exist even in China. The soil is described as light and porous, and well adapted to the growth of the cotton plant with its long tap-root. The country, however, is subject to intermittent droughts, necessitating a regular system of this moment there are upwards of 50,000 The best, and, indeed, the only chance for European settlements, is on the waste lands of Assam, Cachar, and the spurs of the Hima-lays. Labour would have to be imported, but the first thing to be done is to dispose of the droughts, necessitating a regular system of England about cotton, when not a single settler the real possession of his estates. A good deal has been said about the ill-success of experiments having for their object the introduction of foreign seed, but Mr. Saunders shows that the failure has been owing to the ignorance of the experimentalisers. One individual steeped the seed in hot water, or rather desired his native superintendent to do so, but never inquired about the temperature of the water. Another planted the seed in the usual manner, but neglected to hoe the land and loosen the soil about the young plants. With due care and intelligence there is every reason to believe that New Orleans, and certainly Egyptian, seed would flourish to perfection, but in any case the supervision and capital of Europeans are indispensable. In the Doab the roads are generally good, but the system of impressing carts for governmental purposes leads to much oppression on the part of the native functionaries. "When they find a string of cotton carts they seize upon them, and, if not bribed, throw the cotton on the road, and take away the carts. The usual payment to release the carts has been stated to me to vary from eight annas to one rupee per cart." conclusion, Mr. Saunders has no hesitation in saying that in the North-West Provinces there is no real obstacle to the trade in cotton, and that the supply would be limited only by the demand, "so large is the field of production."

CAPTAIN BLAKISTON'S EXPEDITION.

WITHOUT offering any comments of our own, we propose simply to condense Colonel Sarel's "Notes on the River Yang-tsze-Kang, from Hankow to Pingshan." On the 11th February, 1861, a party of scientific travellers, consisting of Captain Blakiston, R.A., Lieut.-Col. Sarel, 17th Lancers, Dr. Barton, and the Rev. S. Schereschewky, American Mission, started from Shanghai, with the intention of penetrating through the province of Sz'chuan to Lassa, and thence across the Himalayan mountains to Simla. As far as Yochow the expedition was conveyed in the exploratory squadron under Admiral Hope, but at that town they embarked on board native boats, and commenced their adventurous voyage. Yochow itself is situated at the entrance to the Tungting Lake, and though in the direct route of boats proceeding from the province of Hounan to Hankow, is not a place of much resort. It is, in fact, in a very dilapidated condition, and stands on high clay cliffs rising out of the river. The surrounding country generally is flat, and produces wheat, beans, and carrots, with osiers growing in the swamps near the water. About thirty miles higher up the scenery becomes undulating, with ranges of hills in the west, and near the little walled town of Shishow the land rises to the height of seven to fifteen hundred feet above the river. Nearly half the space inclosed within the walls of Shishow is covered with gardens, the Chinese providently allowing for the increase of an intramural population. The river, which is here 1,000 yards in width, soon after narrows to 700 yards, and rushes with violence against its left bank-the depth varying from 81 to 16 fathoms. Light carts with two, and sometimes four, solid wheels, drawn by buffaloes, are in general use in this part of the country, as also the large-wheeled barrow common in the north of China, while small ponies are kept for riding. About 170 miles above Yochow the travellers came to the oars, and to assist the helm and prevent the towns of no particular note, and the naviga-

Kinchow, a large city a little further inland. A large fleet of junks was moored along the river face and in all the creeks, bringing sugar, paper, salt, opium, and tobacco from the westward, and taking back cotton and foreign goods received from Canton. Between Yochow and Shahsz the soundings in the channel of the stream gave from four to seventeen fathoms of water, shoaling to three fathoms near the banks. Near Kianghow a fleet of two hundred junks was met, conveying soldiers to oppose the rebels. Above this the country becomes undulating, hilly, and in a short space mountainous. At no great distance from Chikiang there is a range of mountains, called the Hills of Seven Gates, on the spurs of which peach trees were in full blossom, while the plain at their feet was verdant with corn and willows. Chikiang itself stands on the right bank, surrounded on three sides by a battlemented wall -that on the river side having been undermined by a flood in 1860. The next town reached was Itu, at the junction of the Chinkiang with the Yangtze, with a range of hills to the east, and considerable mountains to the west Soon after this the river narrowed from above 800 yards to less than 500, and rushed down between vertical cliffs of conglomerate. In June it rises from 40 to 50 feet above its ordinary level, and in extraordinary floods to nearly 70 feet. Below Ichang the hills break into groups or isolated masses of conglomerate, of all shapes and sizes, some of them flat-topped and cultivated, and others sharp-peaked, and surmounted by thorny brushwood. The people hereabouts are poor and sickly, dwelling in caves in the rocks, and suffering from want of food-the floods of last year having destroyed their cattle. The valley, however, is traversed by streams of clear water, on the banks of which the bamboo is largely cultivated. Peaches, pears, cherries, peas, beans, and violets were in full bloom when the expedition passed through. At Ichang the river becomes impassable for the boats that navigate the lower Yang-tsze. The men here are chiefly employed in fishing, while agricultural operations are conducted by the women. Sturgeons are occasionally caught, and porpoises sport in shoals until just below the rapids. The town is distant from Shanghai about 1,100 statute miles, and 420 from Hankow, and steam navigation is quite practicable the whole way from either town, though during the floods it might not be easy to keep in the direct channel. The river begins to rise in April, and reaches its greatest height in June, remaining at that level until September, when it gradually diminishes in volume. Coal of very indifferent quality is found at no great distance, but very tolerable coal and coke may be procured in boat loads from a district about eight days distant.

Soon after leaving Ichang the travellers entered a gorge varying in width from one hundred and fifty to two hundred yards, the current running from five to six miles an hour with strong eddies below the surface, and no bottom at twenty-five fathoms except close to the sides. The banks rise almost perpendicularly from three hundred to five hundred feet in height, with here and there terraces on which wheat. beans, peas, and fruit-trees are industriously cultivated. Each boat is propelled by ten or twelve thickly-peopled town of Shahsz, the port of boat's head from being twirled round in an eddy a long oar is worked over the bow by five or six men. In the rapids, about twelve miles above Ichang, boats are tracked by light strong lines made of plaited strips of bamboo, and with a hundred men to each boat the progress is exceedingly slow. To fend the boat off from the rocks a spar attached to a stout rope is laid along each gunwale at the bow, ready for immediate use; but on ordinary occasions the bamboo used for poling in shallow water is made to answer the purpose. The first town is Kwei, near which a poor kind of coal is worked in galleries driven into the hill side: it is broken into powder, mixed with water, and moulded into bricks for fuel. next place is Wushan, approached by a long gorge. The poppy is here cultivated, and also a tree called Tung-shu for the sake of its nut, whence a varnishing oil is expressed. Peaches, apricots, walnuts, the castor-oil plant, hawthorn, and honeysuckle also grow luxuriantly. Above Wushan the hills open out, but only to close again to a width of barely eighty yards, forming the Fun-Siang, or Wind-box, at the upper end of which is the lifeless town of Quaichow, seventyeight miles from Ichang. In this passage there are eight rapids to overcome, but some of these are scarcely worth mentioning, and not one of them really insuperable by a steam vessel with a light draught. The authorities at Quaichow had a vague knowledge of a treaty having been concluded between England and China, but now for the first time obtained a copy. Sixty miles higher up is Wan, a small walled place, the inhabitants of which are tolerably prosperous, and deal in coal, sulphur, ginger, sugar-cane, spices, and blue cotton-prints. Throughout this district the poppy is extensively cultivated, and the opium is pronounced of excellent qua lity. Tobacco, peas, beans, wheat, barley, rice, cotton, and the Tung-shu tree are also grown with great success. On the shingly flats near Wan gold is washed for, but the quantity obtained is quite insignificant. At the village of Huling, a few miles higher up, are some native Roman Catholics, who complained of being badly treated by the authorities and of their chapel being plundered and burnt by a It does not appear, however, that mob. they claimed the protection of "La France." In this part of its course the river is tortuous, varying in breadth from 200 yards to three quarters of a mile, and at times running rapidly, but in an unbroken stream. About twenty-five miles, however, above Chungshow, there are a good many sunken rocks, which in the dry season raise their heads above the surface of the water. Above this place the people were banded together to oppose the rebels, or rather the bands of marauders who take advantage of the weakness of the executive to ravage the country and plunder the defenceless. At the mouth of the Hochow stands the populous and busy town of Chungking, the depot for the whole commerce of the west. It is surrounded by a stone wall, said to have eighteen gates and contains a population of 200,000, of whom between 2,000 and 3,000 are Christians, and 500 families Mahomedans. The Taoutai of Chungking was disposed to be troublesome, till brought to his senses by a sharp letter, after which he became civil and attentive. As no carriage could be procured here, the travellers proceeded by water to Suchow, passing several city, at the junction of the Min-kiang with the Yangtsze, but husiness was at a stand-still, owing to the distracted state of the country. Headless bodies, with their hands tied behind their backs, were continually seen floating down the Min, and inspired such terror that the gates were kept closed, and the only means of ingress or egress was by a rope suspended from the top of the wall. The very garrison took to fighting among themselves, and at one time the boats of the foreigners were threatened with an attack, which was only averted by a judicious display of rifles. The products of the adjacent district are yellow and white silk, insect-wax, bees'-wax, tobacco, honey, coal, a little iron, and green tea. Above Suchow there is no trade but in coal, which is dug out of galleries high up the hill-sides, from which it is lowered in baskets sliding down bamboo ropes, on the compensation principle. Coal is found over an area extending seventeen or eighteen miles along both sides of the river, and is said to be of very fair quality. The country is generally mountainous, and the river decreases in width to about 250 yards, and is known to Chinese geographers as the Kin-cha-Kiang, or River of Gold, but the boatmen call it more simply the Yuunan River. One peculiarity of the natives of these parts is brown hair, which is not seen lower down the river. The absence of land-carriage again compelled the travellers to pursue their journey by water as far as Ping-shan, the limit of their explorations. This place is a small walled town on the left bank, and does not appear to have been ever before visited by a European. The gates were closed, and the townspeople fired wildly at the party, but their fire, not being returned, was soon discontinued. At night, however, the rebels made their appearance, and commenced an attack upon the town by the light of lanterns "dimly burning,"-the walls also being illuminated. There was more noise than actual fighting, and it is probable that no one was hit on either side. Neither boats nor carriage could be obtained at Pingshan from fear of the robber bands, but a visit was received from a chief of the Maoutse, or independent tribes to the westward, and presents of knives and wine were exchanged in token of friendship.

"They are," says Colonel Sarel, "a totally diffe rent looking race to the Chinese, their faces being open and honest, which the Chinese faces certainly are not. Some had the head clean shaved, others let their hair grow, and one only had a queue. The weather was warm, and their dress consisted only of a coarse white cotton jacket, drawers, and grass sandals. Their turbans were of blue cotton twisted into a knot above the forehead. They called themselves 'Huh-I' or 'I-jin,' black barbarians or foreigners, and repeatedly said they were not civilised men. They were very curious, and inspected everything in the cabins narrowly, but were perfectly well behaved. The chief spoke a little Chinese, but none of his followers could make themselves understood. We were considered by the people to be in some way connected with these people, and were called by them 'White Maoutse.' None of the Maoutse could read or write. They possess horses and eattle in their own country. They said their and cattle in their own country. They said their only crop was Indian corn. The chief said if we came to his country there would be no difficulty about carriage, but we should have a mountainou country to cross before reaching it, and there no possibility of procuring carriage at Pingshan. He said that travellers would be plundered by the tribes unless under the protection of a chief. It was impossible to make out the limits of their country, but its western boundary cannot be far from the frontiers of Burmah and Assam."

tion perfectly easy. Suchow is a large trading | and turmeric. With the exception of a few buffaloes and ponies at different places, and a few sheep and goats at Yochow, there were no domestic animals seen from Hankow to Pingshan. Fish, of course, was plentiful, and fowls, eggs, flour, salt, and vegetables were generally procurable, but a large expedition would be compelled to carry its own supplies. On general grounds it may be regretted that these enterprising travellers were disappointed in their design of crossing the Himalayas into India, but for practical purposes it is evident that they accomplished all that could be desired. When tranquillity is restored a brisk trade will doubtless be carried on at least as high as Ichang, but while anarchy prevails it is clearly impossible to make even a beginning without risk of a collision. In the mean time great credit is due to Captain Blakiston and his companions for the perseverance, courage, and tact displayed by them in their long and perilous voyage.

THE ORDER OF THE STAR OF INDIA.

WINDSOR CASTLE, Nov. 1.—Her Majesty the Queen held this afternoon, in Windsor Castle, her first investiture of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. The day was the anniversary of the day on which her Majesty's proclamation was promulgated, whereby her resolution to take upon herself the Government of India was notified to the Queen's Indian subjects.

Their Royal Highnesses the Prince Consort and the Prince of Wales having been nominated Extra Knights of the said most exalted Order, were first invested by the Queen with the insignia thereof.

His Highness the Maharajah Duleep Singh, and several noblemen and gentlemen that have heretofore held high office in the Indian empire, and had been nominated by her Majesty Knights of the Order, were summoned to the Castle in order to receive investiture from the Sovereign.

The Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Bart., G.C.B., the Queen's Secretary of State for India, was invited to witness the august ceremony; and a numerous court, comprising the Mistress of the Robes, the Lady in Waiting, the great officers of State, and the other officers of the Royal Household, attended upon the occasion.

Her Majesty's Body Guard of the Hon. Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms was on duty, and the Royal Body Guard of the Yeomen of the Guard likewise attended.

A guard of honour of the Scots Fusilier Guards was in attendance with the band of the regiment within the Castle quadrangle.

The ceremony of the investiture took place in the Throne-room, at the west end of which was placed a chair of state, to which the Queen was conducted by the Lord Chamberlain and the Lord Steward at three o'clock.

The Queen, as Sovereign of the most exalted Order, wore the mantle, which is of light blue satin, lined with white satin, and fastened with a cordon of white silk, with blue and silver tassels. On the left side was the star of the Order.

Over the mantle her Majesty were the collar of gold and enamel, composed of the lotus of India, of palm branches, and of the united white and red roses. In the centre of the collar was an Imperial crown. All were richly enamelled in their proper colours.

From the middle of the front of the collar hung suspended the badge, which consists of an onyx cameo of her Majesty's efficy, set in a perforated and ornamented oval containing the motto of the order:—

"Heaven's light our guide," surmounted by a star, all in diamonds.

The train of the mantle was borne from the Royal apartments to the Throne-room by Major-General Seymour, Groom of the Robes, Viscount Castleeuffe and Mr. E. R. Boyle, Pagos of Hon-

Their Royal Highnesses the Prince Consort and the Prince of Wales had been invested by her Majesty previous to entering the Throne-room. Their Royal Highnesses, wearing the collar and mantle of the Order, accompanied the Queen. The Prince Consort stood near the chair of state, on her Majesty's right hand, and the Prince of Wales on her left. The Mistress of the Robes, and the great officers of state, occupied their usual stations.

The Knights assembled in St. George's Hall. The officer of the Order in attendance was Albert William Woods, Esq. (Lancaster Herald), Registrar of the Order, who was habited in a mantle and wore the chain and badge of his office.

Soon after the Sovereign had taken her seat in the chair of state the ceremony of investiture commenced.

Viscount Gough was conducted to the Queen by the Registrar of the Order. His lordship knelt near her Majesty, and the Registrar presenting the riband with the badge and the star of the Order on a velvet cushion, the Sovereign, assisted by his Royal Highness the Prince Consort, invested the noble Viscount with the insignia, passing the riband, with the badge, over his right shoulder to the left side, and placing the star on his lordship's left breast. The noble viscount had the honour to kiss her Majesty's hand, and retired from the presence with the usual reverences.

Lord Harris was introduced, received from the Queen the honour of knighthood (which was conferred with the sword of State), and was afterwards invested by the Sovereign with the ensigns of the Order.

His Highness the Maharajah Duleep Singh was introduced, had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him, and received investiture from her Majesty with the insignia of the Order.

General Lord Clyde,

The Right Hon. Sir John Laird Mair Lawrence, Bart.; and

General Sir George Pollock were severally introduced, and invested by her Majesty with the like ceremonies.

Lieutenant-general Sir James Outram, Bart-, o.c.B., and Field-Marshal Viscount Combermere, o.c.B., who had been appointed Knights of the Order, were summoned for investiture, but could not obey the Royal command, the former in consequence of his absence from England, and the latter from indisposition.

The star is formed of rays of gold issuing from a centre, having thereon a star in diamonds resting upon a light blue circular riband, tied at the ends and inscribed with the motto in diamonds.

The badge is the same as that attached to the collar of the Order, and is suspended from a riband of light blue, with a narrow white stripe near either edge.

The Queen, accompanied by the Prince Consort and the Prince of Wales, was conducted from the Throne room by the officers of state after the investiture.

Their Royal Highnesses the Princess Alica, the Princesses Helena, Louise, and Beatrice, Prince Arthur and Prince Leopold, and the Princess of Hohenlohe, witnessed the ceremony in the Throne-room.

The court was attended by the Duchess of Wellington, Mistress of the Robes; the Marchioness of Ely, Lady in Waiting; the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Secretary of State for India; the Earl of St. Germans, Lord Steward; Viscount Sydney, Lord Chamberlain; the Marquis of Ailesbury, Master of the Horse; Earl Spencer, Groom of the Stole to the Prince Consort; Lord Foley, the Captain of the Hon. Corps of Gentlemen at Arms; Earl of Ducie, Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard; Viscount Bury, Treasurer of the Household; Lord Methuen, Lord in Waiting; Lord Waterpark, Lord in Waiting to the Prince Consort; Liestenant-Colonel Kingscote, Groom in Waiting; Colonel Francis Seymour, C.B., Groom in Waiting to the Prince Consort; Majorsonby, Equerry to the Prince Consort; Majorsonby, Equerry to the Prince Consort; Majorsonby, Equerry to the Prince Consort; Seymour, General Seymour, Groom of the Robes; Earl of Mountcharles, Silver Stick in Waiting; Colonel Wynyard, Field Officer in Brigade Waiting; Spencer Ponsonby, Comptroller of the Lord Chamberlain's Department; Colonel Biddulph, Master of the Household; Major Teesdale, Equerry in Waiting to the Prince of Wales; Viscount Castlecuffe and Mr. E. R. Boyle, Pages of Honour in Waiting; and Colonel Oliphant, in waiting to the Maharajah Duleep Singh.

Her Majesty's Royal Body Guard of the Houourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms was on duty in the Throne-room, under the command of Lieutenant-colonel Sir William Topham, the Lieutenant; Major Harmar, the Standard Bearer, and the Adjutant of the corps attended.

The Royal Body Guard of the Yeomen of the Guard were on duty, commanded by Captain Macdonald, the Exon in Waiting; Major-General Sir Travell Phillips, the Lieutenant; and Major-general Fitzmaurice, the Adjutant of the corps. were also present.

The Queen gave in the evening a dinner, to which the Knights of the Indian Order of Knighthood, the Secretary of State for India, and the great officers of State attending her Majesty's Court, were honoured with invitations. The company comprised their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Princess Alice, her Serene Highness the Princess of Hohenlohe, his Highness the Maharajah Duleep Singh, the Duchess of Wellington, Lady Caroline Barrington, Lady Augusta Bruce, the Earl of St. Germans, Viscount Sydney, the Marquis of Ailesbury, Earl Spencer, the Right Hon. Her Majesty's private band attended, and performed in the drawing-room after dinner.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The directors of this company state in their report that the line to Delhi will be completed by the end of next year, and that in the meantime several new sections will be opened for traffic. During the past half-year an additional length of eighty-seven miles has been opened for traffic from Cawnpore to Etawah, and there are there fore now in working order 248 miles in Bengal and 210 miles in the North-West Provinces. The question of when it may be desirable to com-mence the construction of the Jubbulpore line remains in abeyance. On the Bengal division, 248 miles in length, the permanent way and works have been maintained in efficient working order during the half-year at a cost of 7½d. per train mile. The working expenses have been 45.69 per cent., or 7.75 per cent. less than in the preceding half-year. The number of passengers carried during the half-year ended the 31st of December last, was 756,894, and during the past half-year, ending the 80th of June, 893,553, showing an increase of 136,659. Of the 893,553 passengers, 8,867 were first-class, 34,324 secondclass, and 850,362 third-class passengers. The tonnage in goods and minerals, exclusive of parcels, carriages, and live stock, for the half-year ending the 30th of June last, has been 178,783 tons, against 135,779 tons in the preceding halfyear. The amount of railway materials included in the traffic returns of the past half-year, is about 17 per cent. The gross traffic receipts for the half-year ending the 30th of June, have been £175,842, against £121,869 in the preceding halfyear. The net traffic receipts from the opening of the line to the 30th of June have been £607,626. The locomotives and other rolling stock are in efficient condition. On the line in the North-West Provinces, 123 miles in length, the permanent way and works have been maintained in efficient order at a cost of 81d. per train mile. The working expenses have been 40.97 per cent., showing a reduction of 8.57 per cent. on perimental rates for both passengers and goods now charged would require considerable alteration past half-year, ending the 30th of June, 122,651, of which 1,612 were first-class, and 2,384 second perimental rates for both passengers and goods now charged would require considerable alteration. Singapore. November 1. Reemah. Pickernell. Foo-chow-Foog Pera 15), Jamieson, Alexandria: Merchant Prince, McKay, Bombay; Australia, Gotshalk, Singapore.—2. City of Benares, McMilau, Calcutta.

The tonnage in goods and class passengers. minerals, exclusive of parcels, carriages, and live stock for the half-year ending 30th of June last, has been 62,436 tons, giving an increase of 19,307 tons over the preceding half-year; part of this large increase, however, is due to the large quantities of grain carried during the late famine The amount of permanent way materials, included in the traffic returns of the past half-year, is about 25 per cent. The gross traffic receipts for the half-year ending the 30th of June last have been £63,685, showing an increase of £16,424 over the preceding half-year. The net receipts since the opening of the line for public traffic have been £115,464. The locomotives and other rolling stock are in excellent condition. The general result of the half-year's working on the two divisions of the line, as compared with the preceding half-year, shows an increase in the traffic of 155,150 passengers and 62.401 tons of goods and minerals, and of £53,059 in the nett earnings, while there has been a decrease of 7.92 per cent. in the working expenses. In their 'last report the directors showed that the sum required to complete the line to Delhi, beyond the £899,500 which they were then engaged in raising, would be £2,900,000. They have raised the £899,500 in question, and £1,067,000 of the £2,900,000; so that for the main line they will require but £1,833,000 between the present time and the end of 1863. The board will take such measures to provide this sum as may appear best calculated to promote the interests of the company. they look to the progress in construction, to the increased carnings of the line, to the decrease in the working expenses, or to the success which has attended their financial operations during the past half-year, the board think the shareholders will have reason to be well satisfied with the six months' operations. The revenue for the halfyear ending the 30th of June on the Bengal division, 248 miles in length, amounted to £175,842, the expenses to £80,340, and the nett balance to £95,502. The revenue for the same half-year on the North-West Province division amounted, on 123 miles, to £63,685, the expenses to £26,092, or 40.97 per cent., and the nett receipts to £37,593.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that during the half-year ending the 30th of June last the average number of miles of the company's railway open for public traffic was 343. The number of passengers conveyed over the line during the halfyear was 1,182,078 against 691,862 in the corre sponding half of 1860; the receipt for passengers amounted to £49,486 against £40,042 in the same half of last year, showing an increase of £9,445. The number of tons of merchandise and material carried was 146,820 against 109,611, showing an increase of 37,209 tons. The receipt for the conveyance of merchandise and the company's materials amounted to £74,914 against £53,352, show ing an increase of £21,562. The total traffic receipts for the half-year ending the 30th of June amounted to £133,448 against £101,250, showing an increase of £32,198 over the receipts of the corresponding half of 1860. The total expenditure amounted to £99,208, or 74.34 per cent., against £60,091, or 59.34 per cent., showing an increase of £39,117, or 15 per cent. The net profit on the working for the past half-year amounted to £34,240, against £41,159 in the corresponding half of 1860, showing a decrease of £6,919. The receipts per train mile were 5s. 81d., against 6s. 13d., and the expenditure 4s. 23d., against 3s. 73d. in the corresponding period of 1860. The directors considered the results of the passenger and merchandise traffic satisfactory, in as far as they prove that the traffic of the districts through which the railway passed was being ra pidly attracted to it. They were, however, of opinion that the money return was not commenbut as long as the question continued to be affected by the highly exceptional state of the railway at the Bhore and Thull Ghâts, it would not be possible to arrive at any definite settlement: and so long, therefore, the existing rates must still be considered as experimental. The same causes which operated unfavourably on the receipts of the railway occasioned an expenditure greatly in excess of the ordinary working classes. In illustration of this statement, it might be mentioned that while it had been found expedient to regulate the charges for goods upon the basis of a through railway rate, as if the railway on the Ghats were completed, the company had to bear the actual cost of transporting them by the ordinary road over those very difficult mountain passes. The works of the railway on the Ghâts were being executed with the utmost vigour by the contractors, and there was every prospect of the Bhore Ghat incline being completed for railway traffic in the course of next year. The railway was the means of bringing into Bombay during last season large quantities of cotton, whereby the active trade in that article was very much assisted. The whole of the opened lines, both in the Concan and in the Deccan, were maintained in good working order at a mileage cost of £46. 13s. 2d. The rolling stock was also thoroughly upheld and the necessary repairs were promptly executed. The works of the railway were subjected to a severe test by the extraordinary high floods of last monsoon. The floods of that period were stated to have been the highest on record, and to have exceeded any that occurred since the commencement of the railway. It was satisfactory, therefore, to find that, with the exception of the Goolbun viaduct, the works sustained very little injury, and that no serious interruption of the traffic was occasioned. This viaduct, at about six miles from Kussarah, at the foot of the Thull Ghat, fell in, during a violent storm on the night of the 1st of July. An arrangement had been made under which the contractor would construct an embankment, with tunnel arches, across the ravine, as a substitute for the viaduct, and so restore the through communication by railway within the shortest time possible, pending which the goods traffic would have to be worked between the Goolbun ravine and the top of the Thull Ghat over the public road. It was expected that a further portion of the line from Nassick to Chalesgaon, eighty-seven miles in length, would be opened for public traffic on the 1st of October inst., and that contracts Nos. 15, 16, and 17 (the Jubbulpore line) had, with the sanction of the Secretary of State for India in Council, been relet. The local Government had definitively fixed upon Warree Bunder as the site for the company's Bombay goods terminus, notwithstanding that the site was objected to by the board, in which objection they were supported by the commercial community at Bombay. It, therefore, only remained to carry into effect the orders of the Government, though entirely opposed, in the opinion of the directors, to the best interests of the railway company and the public. It was satisfactory, however, to state that the Government had sanctioned the construction of the permanent passenger station in close proximity to the fort of Bombay. The capital account to the 30th of June last showed that £7,181,150 had been received, and £6,950,269 expended, leaving a balance of £230,881. The net revenue account showed that the total net profit from working the traffic amounted from the commencement to £325,936, the whole of which had been paid into the Government Treasury with the exception of £6,740 which remained to be paid.

The length of the company's lines open for traffic is 3504 miles; in course of construction from Nassick to Jubbulpore, 770 miles; and in abeyance from Sholapore to Moodgul, 123 miles; making the total length of the company's undertaking, 1,2433 miles.

BOOKS.

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine.
DLIII. Wm. Blackwood and Sons.

Of the many pleasant papers in the November number of "Blackwood"—and more delightful reading for a leisure half-hour no one need desire-the only one that relates to Eastern matters is entitled "The Inland Sea of Japan." It appears that during the last Chinese war some vessels were sent to Japan for horses and fodder, and on board the Fanny McHenry the writer of this agreeable episode then paid his first visit to the long secluded island. As experience had shown that animals shipped from Kanagawa suffered severely upon the long and rough outer sea-passage it was resolved, in spite of the Japanese authorities, to pass through the Suwo Nada, or Inland Sea of Japan. It is this passage which we have now here described for the first time, and by evidently no unpractised writer. On the second day the voyagers were astonished by the apparition of an English-rigged cutter, but which turned out to be a vessel belonging to one of the Damios, and built after a foreign model. The Japanese have already several steamers worked by home-made machinery, which they manage exceedingly well, and our author bears willing testimony to their cool, handy way of dealing with emergencies. He also speaks with delight of their fine broad roads, with shady side-walks for foot passengers, and teahouses at convenient distances tended by blooming damsels, "buxom, blithe, and debonair.' Hiogo, however, is the port which he regards as the future emporium of Japan, if indeed a foreign trade should hereafter prove either profitable or practicable. Of this there is much doubt, as the Japanese have learned to suffice for themselves, and there is actually nothing that they really need to import from abroad. But on these delicate points our traveller touches lightly, confining himself rather to a description of "the beautiful scenery of a succession of sea lochs unparalleled in any other part of the world, and the indications of the existence of a large, industrious, comfortable, and almost wealthy population such as mountains and islands nowhere else present."

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL.

possesses wonderfully nourishing powers for promoting the growth, preserving and beautifying the human hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, and makes it beautifully soft, cuty, and glossy. In the growth of the beard, whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood, the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects; mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandriff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal

M. R. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVEMENT in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER
BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Presared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all scretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly-increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unnatinable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a nonconductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantners of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.
